John.

The elder son of Nicholas,

JOHN LEICESTER, who served in the wars of France, under John of Gaunt, in 1373 and 1380, built the old manor hall of Nether Tabley. He was father of

WILLIAM LEICESTER, Esq. of Nether Tabley, the first that we find styled "De Tabley;" but this may be in consequence of the statute of additions passed in the 1st of HENRY V.; for previously to the enactment of that law, few were written either of the place, or with the title of esquire. Certain it is, that this William lived at his manor-house of Nether Tabley, which his father, John, had recently erected, and which continues the seat of the family to the present period. He m. twice, but had issue by his wife Agnes, sister of Sir John-Piers Dutton, Knt., only. He d. in 1428, and was s. by his eldest son,

This and the illustrious family of De Burgh, Marquesses and Earls of Clanricarde, derive from a common progenitor; namely,

JOHN, Earl of Comyn and Baron of Tonsburgh, in Normandy, son of BALDWIN II., founder of the house of Blois, in France. From the eldest son of this Earl John, descended the house of Clanricarde; and from the younger,

EUSTACE DE BURGE, Baron of Tonsburgh, that of which we are now to treat. This Eustace had two sons, Charles and John, both companions in arms of the CONQUEROR. The elder son,

CHARLES, built the castle of Knaresborough, in Yorkshire, and was s. by his brother,

Lineage.

The COURTENAYS, one of the most illustrious races amongst the English nobility, deduce their paternal descent from ATHON, who sprang himself from PHARAMOND, founder of the French monarchy in 420, and common patriarch of all the Kings of France. This ATHON* having fortified, during the reign of ROBERT the Wise, the town of COURTENAY, in the Isle of France, thence

* ATHON DE COURTENAY left a son and heir, JOCELYNE DE COURTENAY, who m. 1st, Hildegard, dau. of Gaupide, Count of Gastinois, and had a daughter, Hodiherne, m. to Jeffery, 2nd Count of Joigny. He espoused 2ndly, about the year 1065, Isabel, dau. of Guy, Lord of Montlehery, and had three sons, MILO, ancestor of the English Courtenays.

Joceline, one of the most eminent princes of the Crusade, patriarch of the Counts of Edessa and Kings of Jerusalem.

Jeffery, likewise a distinguished soldier of the Cross, fell in conflict with the infidel in 1136.

The eldest son,

MILO DE COURTENAY, espoused, about the year 1095, Ermangarde, only dau. of Renaud (or Reginald), the 2nd Count of Nevers, (by his wife, Hadewise, dau. of ROBERT the Wise, King of France,) and had three sons, viz.,

William, who d. in the Holy Land.

Joceline, of whom nothing is known.

Reginald.

Milo de Courtenay founded, in 1124, the abbey of Fontain-Jean for Cistercian monks, and was buried there in 1127. His youngest son,

REGINALD DE COURTENAY, set out for Palestine with LOUIS VII. of France, in 1147, but returned before that prince to his native country, and upon the death of his elder brothers succeeded to the paternal inheritance. In a contest between the monarch and his royal consort, ELEANOR, heiress of Aquitaine, Poitiers, &c., who had accompanied him to the Holy Land, arising from the king's suspicion of the lady's fidelity, Reginald de Courtenay was amongst those who vindicated the queen's honour, and he subsequently came into England with HENRY II., who had espoused that lady after she had been divorced from the assumed his surname. But as the power of the Courtenays in England principally arose from the great alliances formed by the first members of the family who settled here, we shall pass at once to their maternal pedigree.

GODFRY, Earl of Ewe and Brion, natural son of Richard, 1st Duke of Normandy, was father of

GILBERT, Earl of Brion, who had two sons: Richard, ancestor of the house of Clare; and

BALDWIN DE BRIONIS, who, for the distinguished part he had in the Conquest, obtained from KING WILLIAM the BARONY OF OAKHAMPTON, the custody of the co. of Devon, and the government of the castle of Exeter in fee. He m. Albreda, dau. of Richard, surnamed Gos, Count of Avranches, and had, with other issue,

RICHARD, surnamed DE REDVERS.

Robert, governor of Brione.

Emma, m. 1st, to William Avenal; and 2ndly, to William de Abrincis; by the latter she had issue,

ROBERT DE ABRINCIS, who, upon the resignation of his uncle, Richard de Redvers, obtained a grant of the Barony of Oakhampton, the office of hereditary sheriff of Devon, and the governorship of Exeter Castle. He m. a dau. of Godwyn Dole, and left an only dau. and heir,

MAUD DE ABRINCIS, who m. 1st, — Deincourt, by whom she had a daughter, HAWISE,* who m. Sir Reginald de Courtenay.

Maud espoused 2ndly, Robert Fitz-Edith, natural son of HENRY I., and had another daughter, Matilda, m. to William de Courtenay.

RICHARD DE ABRINCIS, surnamed DE REDVERS, having s. his father, was created, by HENRY I., EARL OF DEVON, and resigned the Barony of Oakhampton, the shrievalty of Devon, and the custody of the castle of Devon, to his nephew,

ROBERT DE ABRINCIS, from whom that dignity, and those high offices, passed to the husband of his grandau., HAWISE, as above,

SIR REGINALD DE COURTENAY, who was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT DE COURTENAY, as feudal Baron of Oakhampton, Viscount of Devonshire, and governor of the castle of Exeter. This Robert, in 1214, was made governor of Bridgnorth, in Shropshire, and the following year, sheriff of Oxfordshire and governor of the castle of Oxford,

French king. The great power of Courtenay in his native country is singularly shewn in a letter from Thebaud, Count or Earl of Champagne, to Sugerius, abbot of St. Denis, governor of the realm during the king's absence, written after Reginald's return to the Holy Land:—"This is to let you know, that Renaud de Courtenay hath done great injury to the king, and to you, who are the guardian of the realm; for he hath seized on certain royal merchants that are the king's subjects, who have discharged their toll at Orleans and Lens, and satisfied for all the customs and duties that are paid in the king's territories, and moreover, hath stripped them of all their goods: it is therefore necessary that you order him, in the king's name, and in yours, that they be set at liberty, and that all that belongs to them be restored to them again; but in case he should refuse to obey this order, and you should be driven to march an army against him to compel him thereto, let me know it, and I will send you aid, that you may be able to bring him to obedience." How this affair terminated is not recorded, but he must have been a powerful subject who required an army to reduce him to submission. This Reginald de Courtenay m. while in France, a sister of Guy de Donjon, one of the most famous knights of the age, and had two daughters, viz.,

ELIZABETH, m. to Peter, youngest son of LOUIS the Gross, King of France; and from this union (Peter having taken the name of Courtenay) sprang the illustrious branch of Courtenay in France, of which were the Emperors of Constantinople.

— m. to Avelon, Lord of Seligny.

* Much confusion exists regarding the identity of the heir, who became, through the influence of HENRY II., the wife of Sir Reginald de Courtenay. Some authorities make her the dau. and heir of Robert de Abrincis, while others call her, as above, his granddaughter.

when the king (JOHN) committed to him the coinage of tin in Devonshire and Cornwall. In the 4th year of HENRY III., his lordship gave the king a palfrey for permission to hold a yearly fair in his manor of Oakhampton, on the vigil and feast-day of St. James the Apostle, which fair still continues to be holden there. In the 16th year of the same prince, most of the castles and counties of England being resumed by the crown, the Courtenays were deprived of the honour and profit of the Viscounty of Devon and government of the castle of Exeter, after those had been enjoyed nearly two hundred years by themselves and their ancestors; and Robert de Courtenay was thus despoiled of all his honours, save the simple Barony of Oakhampton. He m. Mary, youngest dau. of William de Redvers, surnamed Vernon, 6th Earl of Devon; and dying 26 July, 1242, was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE COURTENAY, as feudal Baron of Oakhampton; who m. Isabel, dau. of Hugh de Vere, Earl of Oxford, lord-high-chamberlain of England; and dying in 1273, was s. by his only son,

HUGH DE COURTENAY, Baron of Oakhampton. This feudal lord m. Eleanor, dau. of Hugh de Spencer, the elder, Earl of Winchester, and was s. by his elder son,

HUGH DE COURTENAY, Baron of Oakhampton. This nobleman having distinguished himself in the Scottish wars of EDWARD I., was one of the three hundred persons of eminence knighted by that monarch at Westminster. In the reign of EDWARD II. he was created a Knight-Banneret; and was fifteen times summoned to especial treaties in parliament, as a baron, within the first eight years of EDWARD III., and twice in the 9th of the same monarch, by the name of Hugh de Courtenay, EARL OF DEVONSHIRE, being the last earl in order, as having been that year only restored to the dignity, in right of his great-grandmother, Mary, dau. of William de Redvers, Earl of Devon. His lordship m. Agnes, sister of the Lord St. John, of Basing, and was s. at his decease, in 1340, by his eldest son,

HUGH DE COURTENAY, 2nd Earl of Devon; who had m. in 1325, Margaret, dau. of Humphry Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, (lord-high-constable of England, and his wife, the Lady Elizabeth Plantagenet, dau. of EDWARD I.,) by whom he had (with nine daus.) eight sons, viz.,

- i Hugh, commonly called Hugh Courtenay le Fitz, one of the gallant soldiers of the martial reign of EDWARD III., a participator in the glories of Cressy, and an original knight of the Garter. He was summoned to parliament, as BARON COURTENAY, 8 Jan. 1371. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of Guy Brian, Lord of Tor-Brian, in Devonshire, and sister of the famous Guy, Lord Brian, K.G., standard-bearer to the king at Cressy; and dying in the lifetime of his father, left an only son,

Hugh, who m. Matilda, dau. of Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, by Joan Plantagenet, his wife, the celebrated FAIR MAID OF KENT, grandaun. of EDWARD I., (and mother, by the Black Prince, of RICHARD II.) - 1 EDWARD, successor to his grandfather, as 3rd earl.
- 2 Hugh, (Sir) of Haccomb, m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Cogan, and widow of Sir Fulk Fitzwarine, but by her had no issue. He espoused 2ndly, Philippa, dau. and co-heir of Sir William Arcedekene, and had an only daughter, Joane, m. 1st, to Nicholas, Lord Carew; and 2ndly, to Sir Robert Vere.

Sir Hugh Courtenay m. 3rdly, Mand, dau. of Sir John Beaumont, of Sherwell, in Dorsetshire, by whom he had (with a dau., Margaret, m. to Sir Theobald Grenvill, Knt.) a son and heir,

HUGH, (Sir) of Boconnock, who fell at Tewkesbury, leaving, (with four daughters,)

EDWARD, who was created, in 1485, Baron Oakhampton and EARL OF DEVON.

- iv. William, Archbishop of Canterbury in 1381; d. 1396.
- v. John, M.P. for Devonshire, temp. RICHARD II.
- vi. PHILIP, (Sir) of Powderham Castle, of whom hereafter, as ancestor of the present Earl of Devon.
- vii. Peter, (Sir) K.G., standard-bearer to EDWARD III., constable of Windsor Castle, governor of Calais, and chamberlain to RICHARD II.; d. unm. in 1409.
- viii. Humphry.

Hugh, 2nd Earl of Devon, d. 1377, and was s. by his grandson,

EDWARD, 3rd Earl of Devon, commonly called the Blind Earl. This nobleman served to the beginning of the reign of Richard II. as a naval officer, under JOHN of Gaunt and THOMAS of Woodstock, respectively, and was appointed, in the 7th of the same monarch, admiral of all the king's fleet, from the mouth of the Thames westward. In the next year, being then EARL MARSHAL, his lordship was retained to serve the king in his Scottish wars. He m. Maud, dau. of Thomas, Lord Camois; and dying 5 Dec. 1419, was s. by his only surviving son,

HUGH, 4th Earl of Devon, K.B.; who m. Anne, dau. of Richard, Lord Talbot, and sister of the renowned Earl of Shrewsbury; and dying in 1422, was s. by his son,

THOMAS, 5th Earl of Devon. This nobleman commenced his military career at the age of 16, and was engaged for several years in the French wars of HENRY VI., with whom he sided on the breaking out of the unhappy conflict between the Houses of York and Lancaster; and the Courtenays ever after adhered, with desperate fidelity, to the RED ROSE. In 1448, a dispute regarding precedence arose between the Earls of Devon and Arundel, which was decided by parliament in favour of the latter lord, owing to his feudal possession of Arundel Castle. The Earl of Devon d. 3 Feb. 1458, in the Abbey of Abingdon, upon his route to London, as a mediator, with other noblemen, between the king and the Duke of York. He m. Lady Margaret Beaufort, 2nd dau. of John, Marquess of Somerset, and was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS, 6th Earl of Devon. This nobleman, inheriting the political principles, with the honours, of his deceased father, was a strenuous upholder of the Lancastrian interests, and falling into the hands of the Yorkists, at Towtonfield, he was beheaded at York, by order of EDWARD IV., in April, 1462. His lordship was subsequently attainted, and the honours of the house thus became eclipsed; but his next brother,

HUGH COURTENAY, (7th earl, but for the attainder,) finding favour with the new king, had restoration of some part of the estates. Engaging, however, in the Lancastrian quarrel, with the zeal of his predecessors, he was himself attainted, 4 May, 1466, before the king and justices at Sarum, and beheaded, with the Lord Hungerford, on the same day.

(The greater part of the Courtenay estates having been conferred upon Humphrey Stafford, Baron Stafford, of Southwicke, that nobleman was created Earl of Devon in 1469; but falling under the axe as a traitor, in the Aug. following, the dignity expired.)

Upon the demise of Hugh Courtenay, his only surviving brother,

JOHN COURTENAY, assumed the EARLDOM OF DEVON, and the Lancastrian interest prevailing in 1470, by the expulsion of KING EDWARD, his lordship was restored to the honours and possessions of his family by the parliament that replaced the crown upon the head of HENRY VI. The subsequent defeat, however, of Richard Nevil, the Stout EARL OF WARWICK, at Barnet-Field, 14 April, 1471, again placed the fortunes of the house of Devon in jeopardy; and the earl, joining MARGARET OF ANJOU, fell sword in hand, at Tewkesbury, 14 May following, at the head of MARGARET'S rear-guard. Thus the three brothers sealed with their blood their bond of fidelity to the house of Lancaster, and with them expired the senior branch of the ancient and illustrious house of Courtenay. The last earl was buried at Tewkesbury, and being attainted, the honours and estates of DEVON became again forfeited.

This branch being thus extinguished, we proceed to that founded by

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, of Haccomb, brother of EDWARD, 3rd earl, (revert to issue of Hugh, 2nd earl.) This gentleman's only son,

SIR HUGH COURTENAY, Knt., was of Bacconnock, in Cornwall, and M.P. for that shire. He m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Thomas Carminow, (the last heir male of that ancient family, whose other dau. and co-heir was married to Sir Thomas Carew, of Mohun's Ottery,) and had issue,

EDWARD, (Sir) his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to John Trethurffe, and had a son,

THOMAS TRETHURFFE, who left two daughters,

Margaret, m. to Edward Courtenay, Esq. of Larrock.

Florence, m. to John Trelawny.

Sir Hugh, faithful to the red rose, fell, with his noble kinsman, the Earl of Devon, at Tewkesbury; and his eldest son,

SIR EDWARD COURTENAY, being involved, with his brother, in the conspiracy of Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, in favour of Henry, Earl of Richmond, was forced to fly into Brittany upon the failure of the plot and the decapitation of the duke. Participating, subsequently, in the victory of Bosworth, he was elevated to the peerage by HENRY VII., (26 Oct. 1485,) as EARL OF DEVON, and he obtained grants, at the same time, of the greater part of the estates, manors, &c., which had belonged to the late Thomas Courtenay, Earl of Devon. His lordship espoused Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Molland, and had an only son, William, (Sir) K.B., who m. the Lady Katherine Plantagenet, dau. of EDWARD IV. In the year 1502, Sir William was arrested, with Lord William de la Pole, Sir James Tyrrel, and Sir John Wyndham, and accused of holding a traitorous correspondence with Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, then a refugee at the court of his aunt, Margaret, Duchess of Burgundy, and he was attainted in 1504. Tyrrel and Wyndham were beheaded on Tower-hill, while Courtenay was doomed to incarceration during the king's reign.

The earl d. 1509, and HENRY VIII. ascending the throne in the same year, that monarch immediately released

SIR WILLIAM COURTENAY, and took him into favour: but he died in three years afterwards, before he had either letters patent or a formal restoration of the earldom. He was buried, however, "with the honours of an earl," at the especial command of the king. By the Lady Catherine Plantagenet he left an only son,

EDWARD COURTENAY, who, having been restored in blood and honours, became second Earl of Devon of the new creation. In 1522, his lordship obtained a grant of Caleland, in Cornwall, and of "a fair mansion" situate in the parish of St. Lawrence Poultry, in the city of London, forfeited by the attainder of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; and was advanced by letters patent, dated 18 June, 1525, to the dignity of MARQUESS OF EXETER. For some years this nobleman enjoyed the favour of the fickle HENRY, but he fell at length a victim to that monarch's jealousy of the house of POLE. He was committed to the Tower with Henry Pole, Lord Montacute, and Sir Edward Nevill, for conspiring to place Reginald Pole, dean of Exeter, upon the throne, and was beheaded with Sir Edward Nevill, 9 Jan. 1539. On the subsequent attainder of the marquess ALL HIS HONOURS EXPIRED, and the king annexed to the Duchy of Cornwall the lands in that county, which thus came to the crown. His lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth Grey, dau. and heir of John, Viscount Lisle, but by that lady had no issue. He espoused 2ndly, Gertrude, dau. of William Blount, Lord Mountjoy, by whom he left an only child,

EDWARD COURTENAY, who, though but twelve years of age at the death of his father, was committed prisoner to the Tower, and detained there during the remainder of KING HENRY's reign, and that of EDWARD VI.; but upon the accession of QUEEN MARY he was released, and a patent, dated at Richmond, 3 Sept. 1553, was issued, creating him EARL OF DEVON. The words of this patent, though unusual, appear to have been adapted to the particular circumstances of the case:—"In consideration," it is said, "of the nobility of his birth and his proximity in blood to the queen, she was pleased to create him Earl of Devon, with all pre-eminences, honours, &c., thereunto belonging, to hold the title and dignity of Earl of Devon, with the said honours and pre-eminences thereunto belonging to the aforesaid EDWARD, AND HIS HEIRS MALE FOR EVER;" and the patent proceeds thus: "And further, of our more abundant grace we will, and by these presents do grant to the aforesaid now earl, that HE AND HIS HEIRS MALE may have, hold, enjoy, and possess, in all parliaments and other places, the same pre-eminence as any of the ancestors of the said earl, being hereafter Earls of Devon, hath held or enjoyed." In the Oct. following, he was fully restored in blood; but as the attainder of his father was never reversed, he did not succeed to the Earldom of Devon created in the 1st HENRY VII., nor to the earldom created in the 3rd HENRY VIII., neither did he to the Marquisate of Exeter. His lordship had some command in suppressing Wyatt's rebellion, and yet was afterwards, with the PRINCESS ELIZABETH, accused of being accessory thereto, and sent with her highness to the Tower. He was subsequently confined in Fotheringay Castle, but released through the interposition of PHILIP of Spain, upon that monarch's marriage with the Queen; the LADY ELIZABETH being liberated through the same influence. His lordship, after this, obtained the queen's permission to go abroad, and died at Padua, not without suspicion of poison, 4 Oct. 1566. He died unm., and his estates reverted to the issue of his great aunts, and the four daus. of Sir Hugh Courtenay, of Bacconnock, and sisters of Edward, 1st earl. At his lordship's decease, the EARLDOM OF DEVON was considered to have become EXTINCT, and it remained dormant for no less than two hundred and sixty-five years. It was, however, re-established in another branch of the family, as HEIRS MALE of the deceased lord, (to which we shall now proceed,) by the decision of parliament, 15 March, 1831. It is clear, however, that the Courtenays themselves never once previously thought of the earldom's being in existence, or they would not have accepted a baronetcy and a viscounty.

The existing branch of the Courtenays was founded by

SIR PHILIP COURTENAY, of Powderham Castle, (refer to issue of Hugh de Courtenay, 2nd of the original Earls of Devon,) who received the honour of knighthood from Edward, the Black Prince, with his brothers, Hugh and Peter, the day before the battle of Navaret, in Spain, and was constituted, in 1383, lord-lieutenant of Ireland for ten years. Sir Philip m. Anne, dau. of Sir Thomas Wake, by whom he left three sons and two daus., and was s. at his decease, in the 7th HENRY IV., by his eldest son,

RICHARD COURTENAY, Lord Bishop of Norwich. This prelate was one of the ambassadors sent by HENRY V. to the King of France, to demand the crown of that kingdom, as his right by descent, and to denounce war in the event of non-compliance: he d. 1415, and was s. in his estates by his nephew,

SIR PHILIP COURTENAY, Knt., who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Walter, Lord Hungerford, and acquired by the alliance the manor of Molland Botreaux, in Devonshire. He had issue, beside two daus., seven sons, viz.,

WILLIAM, his successor.

ANNA-MARIA PASTON, who wedded George Throckmorton, Esq., and was grandmother of the present ROBERT-GEORGE THROCKMORTON, Esq. of Molland. (See BURKE's Commoners.)

PETER, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER. This prelate was one of the great persons who invited Henry, Earl of Richmond, (HENRY VII.,) to make an effort for the crown, and aided him in his subsequent proceedings.

Edmund, (Sir) of Deviock, ancestor of the Cornish Courtenays.

Walter, (Sir.)

DEVONSHIRE.

DEVONSHIRE, DUKE OF, (William-Spencer Cavendish, D.C.L.,) Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Clifford of Lanesborough, and K.G.; b. 21 May, 1790; s. as 6th duke, on the demise of his father, 29 July, 1811. His grace was nominated ambassador-extraordinary, in 1826, from his Britannic Majesty, to assist at the coronation of the Emperor Nicholas, of Russia. The Duke of Devonshire is lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the co. Derby.

Lineage.

The noble family of Cavendish, of which, in the last century, two branches attained dukedoms, laid the foundations of its greatness originally on the share of abbey lands, obtained, at the dissolution of the monasteries, by Sir William Cavendish, who had been gentleman-usher to Cardinal Wolsey, and d. 1557; and, subsequently, by the abilities and the good fortune of Elizabeth, his widow, who re-married George, Earl of Shrewsbury, and d. 1607, aged eighty-seven. But though thence arose the exalted rank and extensive possessions enjoyed at present by the Cavendishes, be it not supposed that their remote ancestors were obscure. Whether the first of the name who enjoyed the lordship of Cavendish, in Suffolk, was or was not the son of a member of the baronial family of Gernon, whom genealogists have stated to have owned that estate, it is clearly ascertained that

SIR JOHN CAVENDISH, who acquired the lordship of Cavendish-Overhall, by his marriage with Alice, dau. and heiress of John de Odyngseles, was chief-justice of the court of King's Bench in 1366, 1373, and 1377. In the 4th RICHARD II., his lordship was elected chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and was next year commissioned, with Robert de Hales, treasurer of England, to suppress the insurrection raised in the city of York; in which year the mob, having risen to the number of 50,000, made it a point, particularly in the co. Suffolk, to plunder and murder the lawyers, and being incensed in a more than ordinary degree against the Chief-Justice Cavendish, his son John, having killed the notorious Wat Tyler, they seized upon, and dragged him, with Sir John of Cambridge, prior of Bury, into the market-place of that town, and there caused both to be beheaded. The younger son of the judge,

SIR JOHN CAVENDISH, Esquire of the body to KING RICHARD II., is said to be the person who actually slew Wat Tyler. "For William Walworth, mayor of London, having arrested him, he furiously struck the mayor with his dagger, but being armed hurt him not; whereupon, the mayor, drawing his baselard, grievously wounded Wat in the neck; in which conflict, an esquire of the king's house, called John Cavendish, drew his sword, and wounded him twice or thrice even unto death. For which service, Cavendish was knighted in Smithfield, and had a grant of £40 per annum from the king." The great-great-grandson of this Sir John Cavendish was

WILLIAM CAVENDISH, gentleman-usher to Cardinal Wolsey, and the faithful attendant of that celebrated churchman through all fortunes; so faithful, indeed, that after the death of the cardinal, KING HENRY retained him in his own service, especially upon the grounds of his attachment to his late fallen master. In 1530, Mr. Cavendish was appointed one of the commissioners for visiting and taking the surrenders of divers religious houses, and in that year the prior and convent of Sheen surrendered their monastery to him. He had, subsequently, grants from the crown, received the honour of knighthood, and was appointed treasurer of the chamber to the king; an office which he filled in the ensuing reigns of EDWARD VI. and QUEEN MARY, when he was sworn of the privy-council. Sir William m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of Edmund Bostock, Esq. of Walcroft, in Cheshire, by whom he had four surviving daus. He espoused 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Thomas Conynsby, Esq., and had two daus. He m. 3rdly, ELIZABETH, dau. of John Hardwick, of Hardwick, co. Derby, and widow of Richard Barley, Esq. in the same shire, whose large estates she inherited under settlement. By this eminent woman he had a large family, of which,

His grace d. in 1676, and was s. by his only son,

HENRY, second Duke of Newcastle; who d. in 1691, without male issue, when all his honours, save the Barony of Ogle, became extinct. His grace left five daus., the third of whom, Lady Margaret Cavendish, m. John Holles, Earl of Clare, afterwards Duke of Newcastle.

Sir William Cavendish had considerable grants of forfeited church lands in the reign of EDWARD VI. He died in the 4th year of the succeeding reign, having sometime before commenced the erection of Chatsworth. Henry Cavendish, Sir William's eldest son, dying, as stated above, issueless, we pass to the second son,

SIR WILLIAM CAVENDISH, K.B., who eventually inherited the whole estate; and, through his celebrated mother, possessed three of the most splendid seats ever raised by one hand within the same county, (erected by her;) namely, CHATSWORTH, HARDWICK, and OLDCOTES. DICK.

DICK, SIR WILLIAM, of Braid, North Britain; m. 26 April, 1821, Caroline, dau. of John Kingston, Esq. of Rickmansworth, co. Herts, and widow of Lieut.-Col. Alexander Fraser, of the 76th regiment, by whom he has one daughter.

This gentleman established, in 1821, his right to this ancient baronetcy before a respectable jury of the magistrates of the Canongate, Edinburgh, who unanimously served him heir to the title.

Lineage.

This is the parent stock of the house of Dick, whence the Barts. of Prestonfield descend.

I. SIR WILLIAM DICK, Knt., (see Dick of Prestonfield, for an account of this gentleman, who was grandfather of the first bart. of that creation,) was created a Bart. of Nova Scotia, in 1646, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever. Sir William suffered so severely during the Usurpation that, from a state of considerable opulence, he was reduced with his family to very indigent circumstances. He repaired, in consequence, to London, to demand the repayment of a large sum of money which he had advanced to the government, and was there thrown into prison. He d. at Westminster, 19 Dec. 1655. Sir William m. Miss Morrison, and seems to have been succeeded by (the son of his eldest son, John, who had pre-deceased him) his grandson,

WILLIAM DICK, Esq., who was appointed town-major and deputy-governor of New York; and d. s. p. in 1733, when his great-nephew,

ROBERT DICK, Esq. of Frackafield, became representative of the family, and heir to its honours. This gentleman petitioned parliament, during the administration of Sir Robert Walpole, for compensation for the immense sums due to the family; but, owing to the death of the minister who had espoused his interest, the application proved abortive, and it has never since been renewed by his successors. Mr. Dick m. Miss Dixon, aunt of Lady Harris, of Belmont, Kent, and was s. by his elder son,

CHARLES DICK, Esq., who, settling in England, m. Miss Montgomery, and had issue,

Lineage.

The surname of Dick is one of very great antiquity in North Britain, and it is supposed to have had the same origin as the Van Dyke (or Lord of the Dykes) in the Low Countries.

WILLIAM DE DYCK was alderman, or first magistrate, of Edinburgh, 1296, before the institution of the office of lord-provost, and from him descended

JAMES DICK, who was designated, in a charter under the great seal, dated Jan. 1539, Merchant-Burgess of Arbrough: this James left a son, ALEXANDER DICK, who resided chiefly upon his landed property in the Orkneys; and after the Reformation, being a person of knowledge and learning, was appointed provost of the cathedral church of Orkney. He d. in 1580, and was s. by his only son,

JOHN DICK, a merchant of great eminence, who was s. by an only son,

SIR WILLIAM DICK. This gentleman, adopting from his youth the profession of commerce, became one of the most eminent bankers in Scotland, and acquired considerable wealth even before the decease of his father, which appears by his advancing to the king £6000 sterling, to defray the household expenses when his majesty held a parliament in Scotland, in 1618. In 1628, he farmed the customs on wine, at £6222 sterling, and the crown rents in Orkney, at £3000 sterling, per annum, and afterwards the excise. Mr. Dick was elected lord-provost of Edinburgh in 1638 and 1639; and after receiving the honour of knighthood in 1646, was created a Bart. of Nova Scotia. Sir William was fined by the parliamentarians, as a malignant, in no less a sum than £64,934; and afterwards coming to London to demand payment of moneys he had previously advanced upon government security, he was thrown into prison by the usurper CROMWELL, and d. at Westminster, 19 Dec. 1655, when the baronetcy passed to his grandson, but was not, we believe, assumed by that gentleman, (see Dick, of Braid.) The 4th son of Sir William,

ALEXANDER DICK, had already received from his father, in patrimony, the lands of Heug, near North Berwick, and was s. at his decease by his only son,

I. JAMES DICK, a merchant of great eminence and wealth in Edinburgh, who, having purchased the lands of Priestfield, or Prestonfield, was created a Bart. of Nova Scotia, 2 March, 1677, under the title of Sir James Dick, of Prestonfield. Sir James came from London, in 1682, with the Duke of York, and was with his royal highness in the Gloucester man-of-war when that vessel struck upon a sand-bank. He was one of the few who took to the long-boat, (the prince and Mr. Churchill, afterwards the Great Duke of Marlborough, effecting their escape in another boat,) and so saved his life, whilst several persons of the first rank who remained in the ship perished. Of this disaster, the following extract of a letter, dated 9 May, 1682, from Sir James to his correspondent in London, gives some interesting particulars:—"At seven o'clock in the morning of Sunday last, the man-of-war, called the Gloucester, Sir John Berry captain, where his highness was, and a great retinue of noblemen and gentlemen, whereof I was one, the said ship did strike in pieces, and did wholly sink upon the bank of sand, called the Lemon and Oar, about some twelve leagues from Yarmouth. This was occasioned by the wrong calculation and ignorance of a pilot, which put us all in such consternation that we knew not what to do, the duke, and the whole that were with him, being all in bed when she struck; the helm of the said ship having broke, and the man being killed by the force thereof, at the first stroke. When the duke had got his clothes on, he inquired how things stood, she being sunk nine feet of water in the hold, and the sea coming in at the gun-ports; and all the seamen and passengers were not at command, every man studying his own safety, forced the duke to go out at the large window of the cabin, where his little boat was ordered quietly to attend him, lest the passengers and seamen should have thronged so in upon him as to drown the boat; which was accordingly so conveyed as that none but Earl Winton, and the president of the session (Sir George Gordon, of Haddo, afterwards Earl of Aberdeen), with two of his bed-chamber men (one of these was John Churchill), went with him, but were forced to draw their swords to hold people off. We, seeing his highness gone, did cause tackle out, with great difficulty, the ship's boat, wherein the Earl of Perth got in, and then I went, by jumping off the shrouds, into the boat; the Earl of Middleton, immediately after me, did jump into the same, upon my shoulders; withal there came the Laird of Touch, with several others, besides the seamen that were to row.

Among them that were left, were my Lord Roxburgh, and Laird Hopetoun, and Mr. Littledale, Roxburgh's servant, and Dr. Levingston, the president of the session's man; all being at the place where I jumped would not follow, since it seems they concluded more safety to stay in the vessel than to expose themselves to any other hazard; all which persons, in an instant, were washed off, and all drowned. There perished in this disaster above two hundred persons."

In the same year that he had this miraculous escape, Sir James was elected lord-provost of Edinburgh, and again in 1683. He m. Anne, dau. of William Paterson, Esq. of Drumure, co. Fife, by whom he had several children, but none to attain maturity, save one, Janet, who married Sir William Cuninghame, Bart. of Caprington. Sir James, being thus deprived of male issue, made an entail of his estates of Prestonfield and Corstorphine, in 1699, "to himself and the heirs male of his body; which failing, to the second and younger sons, successively, of his dau., Janet, by the said Sir William Cuninghame," &c. He also got a Nova Scotia Baronetcy from QUEEN ANNE, 22 March, 1707, settling the dignity to go according to the entail of his estate. Sir James d. in 1728, and was s. in his estates by his aforesaid dau., to whom s., and to the baronetcy, her son,

II. SIR ALEXANDER DICK, (paternally Cuninghame,) of Prestonfield. This gentleman, previously to the decease of his brother, had studied medicine, and practised with great repute in the county of Pembroke, as Doctor Alexander Cuninghame. In the year 1756, he was unanimously chosen president of the royal college of Edinburgh; and for seven years afterwards successively had the same high honour conferred upon him; at his retirement, the fellows, as a testimony of the sense which they had entertained of his eminent services, hung up a portrait of the ex-president in their hall, a mark of distinction never previously bestowed on any member whatsoever. Sir Alexander m. 1st, in 1736, his cousin Janet, dau. of Alexander Dick, Esq., by whom he had three daus.; and 2ndly, in 1762, Mary, eldest dau. of David Butler, Esq. co. Pembroke, by whom he had three sons and three daus., viz.,

Sir Alexander d. in the eighty-second year of his age, 10 Nov. 1785, and was s. by his eldest son,

III. SIR WILLIAM, who m. Miss Johannah Douglas, heir of Garwaldfoot, co. Peebles, by whom he left one son and three daus., of whom Mary became the wife of the Rev. David Wauchope. The baronet d. 19 Nov. 1796, and was s. by his son,

IV. SIR ALEXANDER; at whose decease unm. 2 June, 1808, the title reverted to his uncle,

V. SIR JOHN, who d. in Dec. 1812, and was s. by his brother, ROBERT-KEITH, the present baronet.

FAMILY OF CUNNINGHAM OF CAPRINGTON.

This family is of very great antiquity in North Britain. According to Camden, the Cunynghames came originally into Scotland from England, with King MALCOLM CANMORE; and he is probably correct, for we find them settled in the shire of Ayr very soon after the time of that monarch. Frederick Van Bussan, a learned Norwegian, who wrote an account of several Scottish families, says, that one Malcolm, son of Friskin, assisted MALCOLM, Prince of Scotland, (afterwards King MALCOLM CANMORE,) to make his escape from the tyranny of MACBETH, who had murdered his father, Duncan; and being hotly pursued, he took shelter in a barn, where Malcolm concealed the prince by forking straw over him. The prince eventually made his escape into England, still attended by his faithful Malcolm. PRINCE MALCOLM was no sooner in possession of his kingdom, after his victory over MACBETH, than he rewarded his preserver by the thanedom of Cunynghame, from which his posterity assumed their surnames, and took a sheaf-fork for their arms, with "Over fork over" for their motto.

ROBERT DE CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, (eldest son of Warnebald de Cuninghame, de Kilmaurs, co Ayr,) m. in 1163, RICHENDA, only dau. of Sir Humphrey de Berkeley, of Gairntully, in Scotland, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT DE CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, whose grandson,

HENRY DE CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, m. Riddele, heiress of Glengarnock; and dying in 1263, was s. by his son, SIR WILLIAM CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who d. 1285, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who d. 1285, and was s. by his eldest son,

GILBERT CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who was s. in 1292, by his son,

SIR ROBERT CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who swore fealty to EDWARD I.; but declaring afterwards for ROBERT BRUCE, had a charter from that monarch of the superiority of the lands of Lambrachtoun and Grugere, in Cuninghame, to be holden of the king, as Alan la Suche and William de Fereres held the same. He d. 1330, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR WILLIAM CUNINGHAME, of Kilmaurs, who had, by his first wife,

WILLIAM, (Sir) continuator of the line of Kilmaurs, and grandfather of ALEXANDER CUNNINGHAM, of Kilmaurs, who was created EARL OF GLENCAIRN, in May, 1488, and fell the next month at Bannockburn.

Thomas, of whom presently.

Sir William espoused 2ndly, ELEANOR BRUCE, Countess of Carrick, and was created, in her right, EARL OF CARRICK; by this lady he appears to have had no issue; and upon his lordship's decease, the Earldom of Carrick reverted to the crown. His 2nd son,

THOMAS CUNINGHAM, was of Braidhead; and dying in 1385, was s. by his son,

ADAM CUNINGHAM, who m. a dau. of Sir Duncan Wallace, the heiress of Caprington; and dying in 1431, was s. by his son,

SIR ADAM CUNINGHAM, of Caprington, who m. Isabella, dau. of Malcolm Crawford; and dying in 1500, was s. by his son,

JOHN CUNINGHAM, of Caprington, who m. Annabella, dau. of George Campbell, of Loudon, and widow of Thomas Boswell, of Auchinlech, and was s. by

WILLIAM CUNINGHAM, of Caprington and Broomhill, who m. a dau. of Sir William Hamilton, of Sanquhar; and d. 1590. His 2nd son,

JOHN CUNINGHAM, of Broomhill, m. Eleanor, dau. of Andrew M'Adam, of Waterhead, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM CUNINGHAM, of Broomhill, who m. 1st, Janet, dau. of Patrick Leslie, Lord Lindores, by whom he had fifteen children in nine years, (the first single, four times twins, and thrice three at each birth,) only three daus. however survived. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of William Sinclair, of Ratter, (great-grandfather of William, 10th Earl of Caithness,) and 13th in descent from KING ROBERT BRUCE. This William Cuninghame was one of the commissioners for the Covenanters in 1639. He was s. at his decease by his son,

I. SIR JOHN CUNNINGHAM, of Lambrughton and Caprington, who was created a Bart. of Nova Scotia, 19 Sept. 1669. This gentleman, a very eminent lawyer, was appointed to plead against the Duke of Lauderdale, before CHARLES II. in council, and succeeded in establishing the mis-government of that nobleman. He m. Margaret, dau. of William Murray, of Polmais and Touchadam, co. Stirling, by whom he had two sons, WILLIAM, his heir, and John, a distinguished lawyer, and one daughter. He d. 1684, and was s. by his elder son,

II. SIR WILLIAM, who m. Janet, only dau. and heir of Sir James Dick, Bart. of Prestonfield, and had six sons and four daughters. (The title and estate of Prestonfield devolved upon the 3rd son, ALEXANDER, as in the above pedigree of the Dicks.) Sir William d. 1740, and was s. by his eldest son,

III. SIR JOHN. This gentleman, who was esteemed one of the most learned and polished personages of the period in which he lived, spent most of his time in literary retirement at his castle of Caprington, (a seat which is said to have belonged to the great Sir William Wallace, and was even then considered ancient.) He is reported to have read over once every year, for the last thirty years of his life, Homer and Ariosto; he was blessed with constant good health, and his faculties continued unimpaired to the last. Sitting at supper, at Caprington, 30 Nov. 1777, with his usual cheerfulness, he was seized with a fit of apoplexy, fell back in his chair, and calmly expired, in the 82nd year of his age. Sir John m. 1749, Lady Elizabeth Montgomery, eldest dau. of Alexander, 9th Earl of Eglinton, and had two sons,

WILLIAM, his successor.

He was s. by his elder son,

IV. SIR WILLIAM, b. 19 Dec. 1752; m. 19 Nov. 1799, Mrs. Græme, and d. without issue, when the baronetcy devolved upon his cousin, the present SIR ROBERT-KEITH DICK, of Prestonfield, the descendant of Alexander Cunningham, 3rd son of Sir William, the 2nd bart., who assumed the surname of DICK upon inheriting the title and estate of Prestonfield. Owing to certain restrictions in the entail of Prestonfield, the bart. is obliged to retain solely the surname of DICK, otherwise he would add that of CUNIGHAM, (originally KONIGHAM,) and he contemplates doing so by the aid of parliament.

Dorset, and of the town of Poole, and of the co. thereof; b. 6 Jan. 1773; s. as 2nd earl, on the demise of his father, 25 Sept. 1793.

Lineage.

The original surname of this ancient family is said to have been TILTON, assumed from their residence at Tilton, co. Leicester; and the alteration is supposed to have taken place in 1256, when that abode was abandoned for Digby, co. Lincoln.

In nearly two centuries afterwards, A.D. 1434, we find

EVERARD DIGBY, Esq. filling the office of high-sheriff of the co. of Rutland, and representing that shire in parliament. He fell at the battle of Towton, in 1440, fighting under the banner of the unfortunate HENRY VI. He m. Jaqueta, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Ellys, of Devonshire, and left (with one dau.) seven sons, of whom the three eldest were,

I. EVERARD, (Sir) Lord of Tilton and Drystoke, ancestor of the celebrated SIR KENELM DIGBY, Knt., one of the most faithful adherents of the royal cause in the civil war, and an exile, in consequence, during CROMWELL's usurpation. This ornament of England, as he has been styled, wrote several learned books, was a great benefactor to the Bodleian library, by presenting it, in 1633, with a large collection of MSS., recovered the reputation of his family, and rendered it famous throughout the Christian world. He returned to England in 1661, was appointed one of the council on the first settlement of the Royal Society; and d. at his house in Covent Garden, 11 June, 1665. He m. the renowned beauty, Venetia, dau. and co-heir of Sir Edward Stanley, K.B., of Tonge Castle, co. Salop, by Lady Lucy Percy, his wife, dau. and co-heir of Thomas, 7th Earl of Northumberland, and left two sons and a dau. The only surviving son, JOHN DIGBY, Esq. of Gothurst, Bucks, left two daus., his co-heirs; viz., Margaretta-Maria, m. to Sir John Conway, Bart. of Bodrythan; and Charlotte-Theophila, wife of Richard Mostyn, Esq. of Penbeddus.

II. SIMON, of Coleshill.

III. JOHN, (Sir) of Eye-Kettleby, ancestor of the DIGBYS of North Luffenham,* whose last male heir, JAMES DIGBY, Esq. of Red Hall, in Lincolnshire, d. s. p. in 1811, leaving his sisters, MARY, m. to John Fowell, Esq. of Blackhall, in Devon, and Henrietta, m. to George Pauncefort, Esq., his co-heirs.

The second son,

SIR SIMON DIGBY, Knt. of Coleshill, co. Warwick, having contributed mainly, with his six valiant brothers, to the Earl of Richmond's success at Bosworth, was rewarded, after the accession of HENRY VII., with large grants of lands and lucrative public employments. Sir Simon m. Alice, dau. and heir of John Walleys, Esq. of East Radston, co. Devon; and dying in 1519, was s. by his elder son,

REGINALD DIGBY, Esq. of Coleshill, co. Warwick; who m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of John Danvers, Esq. of Calthorpe, co. Oxford, and was s. by his son,

JOHN DIGBY, Esq. This gentleman m. Anne, eldest dau. of Sir George Throgmorton, and was s. by his son,

SIR GEORGE DIGBY, who espoused Abigail, dau. of Sir Arthur Henningham, of Kettering, in Norfolk, knight-banneret, and had, with other issue,

ROBERT, his successor.

George, who was elevated to the peerage, in 1618, as Baron Digby, of Sherborne, and created, in 1622, EARL OF BRISTOL. His lordship was an eminent statesman, temp. JAMES I., and a staunch adherent of the unhappy CHARLES, whom he attended at Edgehill; at the termination of the contest, the earl was obliged to withdraw into France, having had his estates confiscated, where he d. in 1652. “Go, fair example of untainted youth,
Of modest reason, and pacific truth;
Go, just of worth, in every thought sincere,
Who knew no wish but what the world might hear;
Of gentlest manners, unaffected mind,
Lover of peace, and friend of human kind;
Composed in sufferings, and in joys sedate,
Good without noise, without pretensions great;
Go, live, for heaven's eternal year is thine;
Go, and exalt thy moral to divine.
And thou, too close attendant on his doom,
Blest maid, hast hasten'd to the silent tomb;
Steer the same course to the same quiet shore,
Not parted long, and now to part no more.
Yet take these tears, mortality's relief,
And till we share your joys, forgive our grief;
These little rites, a stone and verse, receive,
'Tis all a father, all a friend, can give.”

DON

"June 22nd, 1795.—The two Misses Don, daus. of Sir Alexander Don, Bart., accompanied by Miss Agnes Wilson, and Miss Jesse Ramsay, went for a walk by the bridge to the island in the water of Eden. On their return home, apprehensive of being too late for dinner, they resolved to cross the water at the nearest ford, although considerably swelled by the rains, rather than go round by the bridge. Miss Don and Miss Wilson got safely through; but Miss M. Don, in following, was carried down the current, when Miss Ramsay rushed in to her assistance, but without effect. This is all that Miss Ramsay recollected; nor could she even tell how she herself was afterwards saved; for Miss Don and Miss Wilson, there is no doubt, ran in to their aid, and both shared the unfortunate fate of the younger Miss Don. The distracted state of Miss Ramsay, upon getting out of the water and missing her companions, prevented any discovery of the fatal accident, till, going to cross the Eden bridge, she saw the body of Miss M. Don floating down the river, and immediately gave the alarm, but, alas! too late."

His lordship, who is lord-lieut. of the co. Donegal, s. as 2nd marquess, on the demise of his father, 5 Jan. 1799.

Lineage.

The surname of the house of Donegal was anciently written Cirencester, and the family appears to have been one of the most eminent in the co. of Devon; quartering, according to Sir William Pole, in his MS. Survey of Devonshire, the arms of the Raleighs, the Beaumonts, the Willingtons, and many other noble families. The first who settled in Ireland was

SIR ARTHUR CHICHESTER, Knt., a distinguished military officer, (2nd son of Sir John Chichester, Knt., high-sheriff of Devonshire in 1552 and 1578, and M.P. for the same county in 1553 and 1562, by Gertrude, dau. of Sir William Courtenay, Knt. of Powderham Castle, in the co. of Devon.) In 1595, Sir Arthur commanded 200 foot at Carrickfergus; and the end of Nov. in the following year, being garrisoned at that place, laid all the country waste within a circumference of twenty miles. In 1603, he was sworn of the privy-council; and in 1604, appointed lord-deputy of Ireland, in which year he established two new circuits, sending the first justices of assize into Connaught, and reviving the circuit of Munster, which had been discontinued for more than two hundred years, so that the circuits, which had previously been confined to the English pale, thenceforward included the whole kingdom, and with such effect that, in a very short time, there were not found in all the Irish counties so many capital offenders as in the six shires of the western circuit in England. Sir Arthur, in consideration of his eminent services, military and civil, obtained considerable grants of land in the province of Ulster, and was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, 23 Feb. 1612, by the title of Baron Chichester, of Belfast. His lordship continued in the government of Ireland for ten years successively, and was re-appointed in July, 1613; in which year the harp of Ireland was first marshalled with the arms of England, and has since continued to be impressed upon the coin of the realm. In Nov. 1615, he retired from his high office, and was appointed, in 1616, lord-high-treasurer of Ireland. His lordship chiefly resided at Carrickfergus, where he erected, in 1618, a magnificent mansion, called Joymount. In 1622, he went ambassador to the Palatinate, and thence to treat of a peace with the emperor. During his residence at the imperial court, being besieged in the city of Mainchina, or Mainheim, by Count Tilly, he remonstrated against the violation of the law of nations in besieging an ambassador; to which Tilly replying, that he noticed not his being an ambassador; his lordship thus answered the messenger: "Had my master sent me with as many hundred men as he hath sent me on fruitless messages, your general should have known that I had been a soldier as well as an ambassador." His lordship m. Letitia, dau. of Sir John Perrott, sometime lord-deputy of Ireland, widow of Vaughan Blackham, Esq.; and d. in London, 19 Feb. 1624, when, leaving no issue, the barony expired, while his large estates devolved upon his brother,

SIR EDWARD CHICHESTER, in whose favour the dignity was revived, with the additional honour of Viscount Chichester, of Carrickfergus, 1 April, 1625. His lordship m. 1st, in 1605, Anne, dau. and heir of John Coplestone, Esq. of Eggesford, co. Devon, by whom he acquired a large estate, and had two sons and a dau. He espoused 2ndly, Mary, dau. of — Denham, Esq. of Wortham, in the same shire, but had no other issue. His lordship d. in 1648, and was s. by his elder son, ARTHUR, M.P. for the co. of Antrim in 1639; who, in consideration of his eminent services against the rebels when Colonel Chichester, and at the express solicitation of the Marquess of Ormonde, had been elevated to the peerage of Ireland, 30 March, 1647, as EARL OF DONEGAL, with limitation of the honour to the male descendants of his father. His lordship was one of the four hostages sent by the Marquess of Ormonde, in 1647, to the English parliament, as surety for the delivery of Dublin and other garrisons to their commissioners. After the Restoration, he was governor of Carrickfergus; and in 1668, his lordship established a mathematical lecture in the University of Dublin. He m. 1st, Dorcas, dau. of John Hill, Esq. of Honiley, co. Warwick, by whom he had an only dau., Mary, who m. John St. Leger, Esq. The earl m. 2ndly, Lady Mary Digby, dau. of John, 1st Earl of Bristol, but by that lady he had no surviving issue; and 3rdly, Letitia, only surviving dau. of Sir William Hickes, Bart. of Rooksholt, and by her left one surviving dau., Anne, who m. 1st, John Butler, Earl Gowrany, and 2ndly, Francis Aungier, Earl of Longford, but had no issue. The Earl of Donegal d. 18 March, 1674, when his honours devolved, according to the limitation, upon his nephew,

SIR ARTHUR CHICHESTER, as 2nd earl, (eldest son of the Hon. John Chichester, by Mary, youngest dau. of Roger Jones, Viscount Ranelagh.) His lordship m. Jane, dau. of John Itchingham, of Dunbrody, co. Wexford, and was s. by his eldest son,

ARTHUR, 3rd earl. This nobleman, having distinguished himself in the military service of his own country, was appointed, by the Prince of Hesse, in 1704, Major-Gen. of the Spanish forces, and fell, 10 April, 1706, at Fort Monjuich. His lordship's 2nd lady (by the 1st, Lady Barbara Boyle, he had no surviving issue) was Lady Catherine Forbes, dau. of Arthur, Earl of Granard, upon whom the following lines were written by Swift:

Unerring heaven, with bounteous hand,
Has form'd a model for your land,
Whom love endow'd with every grace—
The glory of the Granard race;
Now destined by the powers divine
The blessing of another line.
Then, would you paint a matchless dame
Whom you'd consign to endless fame,
Invoke not Cyntherea's aid,
Nor borrow from the blue-eyed maid,
Nor need you on the graces call;
Take qualities from Donegal.

By this lady he had two sons and six daus.; three of the latter, Jane, Frances, and Henrietta, were unfortunately burnt to death in the house of Belfast, consumed by the carelessness of a servant. His lordship was s. by his elder son,

ARTHUR, 4th earl; at whose decease without issue, in 1757, the honours devolved upon his nephew,

ARTHUR, 5th earl, (eldest son of the Hon. John Chichester, M.P. for Belfast in 1745, by Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir Richard Newdigate, Bart. of Arbury, Warwickshire;) who was created a British peer by the title of Baron Fisherwick, of Fisherwick, county Stafford, 3 July, 1790; and advanced in the Irish peerage, 27 June, 1791, to the dignities of Earl of Belfast and MARQUESS OF DONEGAL. His lordship m. 1st, in 1761, Anne, eldest dau. of James, 5th Duke of Hamilton, by Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Edward Spencer, Esq. of Rendlesham, co. Suffolk, and had issue,

- I. GEORGE-AUGUSTUS, the present peer.

HAYES, b. 1 Oct. 1819.

His lordship s. as 3rd viscount, on the demise of his father, 8 Nov. 1819.

Lineage.

The ancient family of St. Leger is of French extraction, and derives from

SIR ROBERT SENT LEGERE, Knt., as the name was then written, one of the companions in arms of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR; and, according to a tradition in the family, the person who supported that prince with his arm when he quitted the ship to land in Sussex. This Sir Robert, having overcome a pagan Dane who inhabited the manor of Ulcomb, in Kent, fixed his abode there; and in that place his posterity flourished for many generations. The lineal descendant of Sir Robert,

SIR ARTHUR ST. LEGER, Knt., went first into Ireland in 1537, being appointed by HENRY VIII. one of the commissioners for letting the crown lands there, and returning into England, was constituted lord-deputy of Ireland, 7 July, 1540. In 1543, he was recalled to inform the king of his administration of affairs; which gave his highness such satisfaction that he created him a knt.-companion of the Garter, and sent him back lord-deputy, in which high office he continued until 1556, serving three sovereigns, when, being recalled by QUEEN MARY, he retired to his estate in Kent, and d. there, 12 March, 1559. This eminent person has been characterized "as a wise and wary gentleman, a valiant servitor in war, and a good justice in peace, properly learned, and having gravity interlaced with pleasantness." He m. Agnes, dau. of Hugh Warham, Esq. of Warham, and was s. by his second, but eldest surviving, son,

SIR WARHAM ST. LEGER, of Ulcomb, who was appointed chief governor of Munster in 1565, under the lord-deputy Sidney. In 1579, he was constituted knight-mareschal of the same province; and in 1580, he caused James of Desmond, who was denominated a notorious rebel, to be hanged under martial law at Cork. He was killed, eventually, in battle (in single combat), by Hugh Maguire, Lord of Fermanagh, who fell himself at the same time. Sir Warham m. Ursula, youngest dau. of George Nevil, Lord Abergavenny, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM ST. LEGER, a privy-councillor, and lord-president of Munster in 1627. Sir William represented the city of Cork in parliament in 1639, and was appointed in that year sergeant-major-general of the army; he was subsequently employed against the rebels in Ireland; and dying about the year 1642, left with other issue, from which descended the St. Legers of Yorkshire and Gen. St. Leger,

JOHN, successor to his brother.

Heyward, of Castlemore and Heyward's Hill; lieutenant-col. in the army, and M.P.; ancestor of the present HEYWARD ST. LEGER, Esq. of Heyward's Hill, in the county of Cork. (See BURKE's Commoners, vol. iv. p. 485.)

The eldest son,

Lineage.

The Sackvilles, or Saukevilles, as the name was originally written, have been persons of considerable power, wealth, and influence, ever since the CONQUEST; and the house of Dorset can trace its foundation to

SIR ROBERT DE SAUKEVILLE, Knt., 3rd son of Herbrand de Salkavilla, one of the chieftains in the army of the CONQUEROR. From this Robert descended

JOHN SACKVILLE, Esq., sheriff of the cos. of Sussex and Surrey, in the 19th, 32nd, and 38th of HENRY VIII., and M.P. for East Greenwich in 4th and 5th PHILIP and MARY, (being the only return ever made by Greenwich prior to the recently passed Reform Act.) This John m. Anne, 2nd dau. of Sir William Boleyn, Knt., and aunt of QUEEN ANNE BOLEYN, and had a numerous family; of which the eldest son,

SIR RICHARD SACKVILLE, Knt., was member of the privy-council in the reigns of MARY and ELIZABETH; chancellor of the court of Augmentations in the former, and under-treasurer of the Exchequer in the latter; M.P. for the co. Kent, and, subsequently, for the co. Surrey. Sir Richard m. Winefrede, dau. of Sir John Bruges, lord mayor of the city of London; and dying in 1556, was s. by his eldest son,

THOMAS SACKVILLE, Esq., who was knighted in the presence of QUEEN ELIZABETH, by the Duke of Norfolk, 8 June, 1567; and on the same day created a peer of the realm, as Baron Buckhurst, of Buckhurst, co. Sussex. In 1594, his lordship was appointed LORD-HIGH-TREASURER of England; and on 13 March, 1603-4, was advanced to the dignity of EARL OF DORSET. Of this nobleman Warton says—"At both universities (he had been a student of Oxford and Cambridge) he became celebrated as a Latin and English poet; and he carried his love of poetry, which he seems to have almost solely cultivated, to the Inner Temple. It was now fashionable for every young man of fortune, before he began his travels, or was admitted into parliament, to be initiated in the study of the law. But instead of pursuing a science which could not be his profession, and which was unaccommodated to the bias of his genius, he betrayed his predilection to a more pleasing species of literature, by composing the tragedy of 'Gorboduck,' which tragedy was exhibited in the great hall of the Inner Temple, by the students of that society, as part of the entertainments of a grand Christmas festival; and afterwards, before QUEEN ELIZABETH, at Whitehall, 18 Jan. 1561." At the trial of the unhappy Earl of Essex, this nobleman, then Lord Buckhurst, officiated as lord-high-steward of England. His lordship m. Cecile, dau. of Sir John Baker, Knt. of Sisinghurst; and dying suddenly, at the council-table at Whitehall, 19 April, 1608, was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT, 2nd earl; who enjoyed the family honours but a few months; and dying 25 Feb. 1608-9, was s. by his eldest son, by Margaret, dau. of Thomas, Duke of Norfolk,

RICHARD, 3rd earl. His lordship m. Lady Anne Clifford, dau. and sole heir of George, Earl of Cumberland, by whom he had two daughters,

MARGARET, m. to John, Earl of Thanet.

ISABELLA, m. to James, Earl of Northampton.

He d. in 1624, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

EDWARD, 4th earl, K.G.; who m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir George Curzon, of Croxhall, co. Derby, and had two sons,

Edward, m. to Bridget, Baroness Norreys, of Rycote, dau. and heir of Edward Wray, Esq. This gentleman was taken prisoner, and put to death by the parliamentarians, in 1645. He left no issue.

His lordship, before he attained the title, was concerned in a fatal duel, which is thus mentioned by Lord Clarendon:—"He entered into a fatal quarrel, upon a subject very unwarrantable, with a young nobleman of Scotland, the Lord Bruce, upon which they both transported themselves into Flanders, and attended only by two chirurgiens, placed at a distance, and under an obligation not to stir but at the fall of one of them, they fought under the walls of Antwerp, where the Lord Bruce fell dead upon the place; and Sir Edward Sackville (for so he was then called) being likewise hurt, retired into the next monastery, which was at hand." His lordship, for several years after the accession of CHARLES I., was a leading member of the government, and the murder of his royal master preyed so severely upon him that he never afterwards stirred out of his house. He d. 1652, and was s. by his elder and only surviving son,

RICHARD, 5th earl; who m. Lady Frances Cranfield, eldest dau. of Lionel, Earl of Middlesex, and eventually sole heir of her brother, Lionel, 3rd Earl of Middlesex; by whom he had several children. His lordship d. 1677, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHARLES, K.G., 6th earl; who was pre-eminently distinguished as an Anacreontic poet. This nobleman succeeding also, in right of his mother, to the estates of the Earl of Middlesex, had been created, 4 April, 1675, Baron Cranfield, of Cranfield, co. Bedford, and Earl of Middlesex. His lordship's 2nd wife was Mary, dau. of James Compton, Earl of Northampton, and by her he had, with a dau., Mary, m. to Henry, 2nd Duke of Beaufort, a son and heir, (he d. 22 Jan. 1706,)

Mary, m. to Sackville, 8th Earl of Thanet.

- III. GEORGE, b. 26 Jan. 1715-16; assumed, by act of parliament, 16 Feb. 1770, the surname of "GERMAIN," pursuant to the wills of Sir John and Lady Elizabeth Germain, of Drayton, co. Northampton. This nobleman was subsequently distinguished as a soldier and a statesman, under the designation of "Lord George Germain." In the former character less fortunate, however, than in the latter; having incurred the displeasure of the commander-in-chief, Ferdinand, Prince of Brunswick, at the battle of Minden; and being censured by a court-martial, held at his own request, upon returning to England. His lordship was endowed with extraordinary talents, and filled, subsequently to this unpleasant affair, some of the highest offices in administration. He was elevated to the peerage, 11 Feb. 1782, as Baron Bolebrooke and Viscount Sackville. He m. Diana, 2nd dau. and co-heir of John Sambrooke, Esq., and niece of Sir Jeremy Sambrooke, Bart., by whom (who d. 15 Jan. 1778) he had,

CHARLES, 2nd duke, b. 6 Feb. 1711; who m. in 1743, Grace, dau. and sole heir of Richard Boyle, Viscount Shannon; but dying without issue, 6 Jan. 1769, the honours devolved upon his nephew,

JOHN-FREDERICK, 3rd duke. His grace was lord-lieutenant and custos-rotulorum of the co. of Kent and city of Canterbury, and vice-admiral of the coasts of the said county; and in 1783, ambassador to the court of France. He m. in 1790, Arabella-Diana, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Cope, Bart., and by her (who m. 2ndly, Charles, Earl Whitworth, and d. 1 Aug. 1825) had issue,

This suit (known so well by the name of the "Douglas cause") made a noise all over Europe, and is one of the most extraordinary ever litigated.* Mr. Stewart, becoming thus entitled to the es-

DOUGLAS.

DOUGLAS, SIR ROBERT-ANDREW, of Glenbervie, co. Kincardine; capt. 12 regt. of foot; b. 25 April, Paris, her ladyship being then in her 51st year. One of these children, Sholto, died an infant, and against the other, ARCHIBALD STEWART, inheriting the estates of his maternal uncle, Archibald, Duke of Douglas, on that nobleman's decease, 21 July, 1761, to whom he was returned heir of line and provision, the guardians of James-George, (the minor,) Duke of Hamilton, instituted a suit-at-law, and the Scottish courts determined in favour of his grace. From the decision an appeal was made to the House of Lords, which eventually reversed it, and confirmed Sir Archibald in the possession of the Douglas estates. One of the guardians of the duke and institutors of the suit, Sir Andrew Stuart, subsequently published, in Jan. 1773, some very strong letters, addressed to Lord Mansfield, arraigning the conduct of his lordship during the progress of this celebrated litigation, and maintaining the rectitude of the Scottish decision.

1807; s. as 2nd bart., at the decease of his father, 22 Nov. 1833; m. 1835, Martha-Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Joshua Rouse, Esq., and has issue.

Lineage.

If a long line of illustrious ancestors, distinguished by the highest titles of honour, and connected with the most august houses in Europe, can add importance to a name, there is not one in the empire more dignified than that of Douglas. The family has been connected with the first nobles of Scotland, England, and France; and it has intermarried no less than eleven times with the royal houses of Scotland, and once with that of England. The traditional, but probably fabulous, account of the origin of the house is, that about the year 770, in the reign of SOLVATHIUS, King of the Scots, one Donald Bene, of the Western Isles, having invaded the Scottish territory, and routed the royal army, a man of rank and figure came seasonably, with his friends and followers, to the king's assistance, who then renewed the conflict, and obtained a complete victory over the invader. The king being desirous of seeing the person who accomplished for him so important a service, that individual was pointed out to the monarch, by his colour or complexion, in these words of the old Gaelic or Celtic language, Sholto du Glas; in English, "Behold the black or swarthy-coloured man;" from which, the story goes, he was named Sholto the Douglas. The king rewarded this hero with grants of lands in the co. of Lanark, which were denominated Douglas; and hence the family surname. This Sholto is said to have left two sons: Hugh, ancestor of the Douglasses, in Scotland; and William, progenitor of the Scoti Douglassii, in Italy.

The HON. SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, of Glenbervie, 2nd son of Archibald, 5th, and commonly called the Great Earl of Angus, obtained from his father, in patrimony, the lands and Barony of Braidwood, in Lanarkshire, about the year 1510; and by his marriage with Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir John Auchinleck, of Auchinleck, co. Ayr, acquired the lands and Barony of Glenbervie, in the shire of Kincardine, which became subsequently the principal seat of the family; and in consequence of this marriage, Sir William and his posterity have ever since continued to quarter the arms of Auchinleck with their own. Sir William, with his brother, the Hon. George Douglas, fell at the fatal battle of Flodden Field, in 1513, and left an only son,

SIR ARCHIBALD DOUGLAS, Knt., whose eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM DOUGLAS, Knt. of Glenbervie, obtained a charter from JAMES V., in 1591, confirming all the ancient privileges of the family of Douglas; namely, the first vote in council, or parliament; to be the king's hereditary lieutenant; to have the leading of the van of the army in the day of battle; and to carry the crown at coronations; to himself and his heirs male. All these were again confirmed by a charter under the great seal, in 1602. Sir William, upon the demise of Archibald, the 8th Earl of Angus, without male issue, succeeded to the earldom, as heir male, and became the 9th earl. His lordship m. Giles, dau. of Sir Robert Graham, of Morphy, by whom he had six sons and daus.; and at his decease, bequeathed to his 2nd son, DRAKE, SIR FRANCIS - HENRY, of Buckland, co. Devon; b. in Aug. 1756; m. Anne-Frances, dau. of Thomas Maltby, Esq., (of the same family as Dr. Maltby, Bishop of Durham;) succeeded as 6th bart., at the decease of his uncle, 24 Feb. 1794.

Lineage.

This family was founded by the celebrated

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE, one of the most eminent of the naval heroes who immortalized the reign of ELIZABETH. Born of humble parents, near Tavistock, in 1545, Drake attained the height he eventually achieved by his own enterprising spirit and transcendent merit alone. He was the son of an honest sailor named Edmund Drake, and the eldest of twelve brethren. He had the good fortune, however, of being allied to Sir John Hawkins, and was brought up at the expense and under the care of that gallant seaman. When eighteen years of age, he appears to have held the situation of purser of a ship trading to Biscay, and at twenty he made a voyage to Guinea. The next year he had the honour of being appointed captain of the Judith, and in that capacity was in the harbour of St. Juan de Ulloa, in the Gulf of Mexico, where he behaved most gallantly in the glorious actions under Sir John Hawkins, and returned to England rich in reputation, but in nothing else. At this period, he announced his intention of making reprisals upon the King of Spain; and no sooner proclaimed the project, than hundreds volunteered to embark in it. In 1570, he made his first expedition, with two ships, the DRAGON and the SWAN; and the next year in the Swan alone, wherein he returned safe, if not rich. And having now means sufficient to perform greater matters, he laid before the public the plan of a more important design against his enemies. This he put into execution 24 March, 1572, on which day he sailed from Plymouth, himself in the PASCHA, of seventy tons burthen, and his brother, John Drake, in the SWAN, of twenty-five tons, their whole strength consisting of no more than seventy-three men and boys. With this inconsiderable force he attacked, on the 22nd July, the town of NOMBRE DE DIOS, and took it in a few hours by storm. Here, however, he obtained but little plunder, and was obliged eventually to retire to his ships, having been severely wounded in the action. His next attempt was upon VERA CRUZ, which he carried and pillaged, and in returning to his vessels fortunately fell in with a string of mules laden with plate, of which he took possession. From this successful expedition he came back to England in Aug. 1573. He subsequently served as a volunteer in Ireland, under Walter, Earl of Essex; and upon his return, was introduced by Sir Christopher Hatton to QUEEN ELIZABETH, when her majesty immediately took him under her protection; and he was enabled, by her royal favour, to undertake and accomplish, within three years, his celebrated voyage round the world. This famous expedition, consisting of the PELICAN, commanded by Drake himself; the ELIZABETH, Capt. John Winter; the MARYGOLD, a bark of thirty tons, Capt. John Thomas; the SWAN, a fly-boat of fifty tons, Capt. John Chester; and the CHRISTOPHER, a pinnace of fifteen tons, Capt. Thomas Moon, sailed from Plymouth, 15 Nov. 1577, and returned to the same port, 3 Nov. 1580. In a few months after leaving England, Drake committed what has been termed, in gentle language, "the least commendable action of his life," but to which a much more severe description might with justice be applied. Having arrived at PORT ST. JULIAN, 18 June, he took up his abode there for two months, while he made the necessary provision for passing the Straits of Magellan. Here it was that, on a sudden, having conducted the persons engaged in the service to a desert island laying in the bay, he called a kind of council of war, or rather court-martial, where he exposed his commission, by which the queen had granted him the power of life and death, which was delivered with this remarkable expression from her majesty's own mouth: "We do account that he, Drake, who strikes at thee, does strike at us." He then laid open, with great eloquence, (for though his education was but indifferent, he had a wonderful flow of speech,) the cause of the assembly; he proceeded next to charge Mr. John Doughty, who had been second in command during the whole voyage when Drake was present, and first in his absence, with plotting the destruction of the undertaking and the murder of its chief. He said, that he had the first notice of this gentleman's bad intentions before he left England; but that he had hoped his behaviour towards him would have extinguished such disposition, if there had been any truth in the information. He then appealed to the whole assembly, and to the accused himself, for his own conduct: he next exposed the practices of the prisoner, and supported his accusation by papers under Doughty's own hand, to which the accused added a full and free confession. After this, the captain, or, as in the language of those times he is called, the General, quitted the place, telling the assembly he expected that they should pass a verdict upon the accused, for he would be no judge in his own cause. Camden says, that Doughty was tried by a jury, but other accounts affirm that the whole forty persons of which the court was composed adjudged him to death, and gave this in writing under their hands and seals, leaving the time and manner of it to the General. Upon this, Capt. Drake having maturely weighed the whole matter, presented three points to Mr. Doughty's choice: first, to be executed upon the land where they were; next, to be set ashore on the main land; or lastly, to be sent home to abide the justice of his country. The prisoner desired that he might have until the next day to come to a determination, which was allowed him; and then, giving his reasons for rejecting the two last, he declared that he made the first his choice; and having received the sacrament with the General, from the hands of Mr. Francis Fletcher, chaplain to the fleet, and made a full confession, his head was cut off with an axe by the provost-marshal, 2 July, 1578. It is a very remarkable fact, that the same island had been the scene of a precisely similar affair fifty-eight years before, when Magellan caused John de Carthagena, who was joined in commission with him by the King of Spain, to be hanged under a charge of the same description; and hence it was called the Island of True Justice. Of this very questionable proceeding upon the part of Drake Camden says—"Some, who pretending to understand things better than others, gave out, that Drake had in charge from Leicester to take off Doughty upon any pretence whatever, because he had reported that the Earl of Essex had been made away with by the cunning practices of that earl." In this voyage Drake completely surrounded the globe; but his great success, and the immense wealth he brought home, caused many to characterise the expedition as piratical, and as not only a direct violation of all our treaties with Spain, but likewise of our old league with the House of Burgundy. Her majesty, however, set the question at rest, and raised the gallant and enterprising seaman above the power of his foes; for proceeding to Deptford, 4 April, 1581, she went on board Capt. Drake's ship, where, after dinner, she conferred upon him the honour of knighthood, and ordered, at the same time, the preservation of the vessel,* that it might

* It is observed by Camden, that when the queen went to dine on board this celebrated ship, (the GOLDEN HIND,) there was such a concourse of people, that the wooden bridge over which they passed broke, and upwards of one hundred persons fell into the river; by which accident, however, nobody was hurt; as if, he adds, the ship had been built under some lucky constellation. Upon this remain a monument of Sir Francis's and his country's glory.

In 1588, when the Spanish armada menaced the shores of England, Sir Francis Drake was appointed vice-admiral, under Charles, Lord Howard, of Effingham, and had the good fortune to capture the great galleon, commanded by Don Pedro de Valdez, the reputed projector of the enterprise, by which himself and his crew divided 55,000 ducats of gold. As Drake's prior expedition to the West Indies, in 1585, when he took the cities of St. Jago, St. Domingo, Carthagena, and St. Augustin, forms one of the causes of complaint of the court of Spain, we shall give the very curious Latin verses presented to QUEEN ELIZABETH by the Spanish ambassador, setting forth the terms upon which her majesty might avert the threatened invasion of her territories :

Te veto ne pergas bello defendere Belgas
Quæ Dracus eripuit, nunc restituentur oportet :
Quas pater evertit jubeo te condere cellas :
Religio Papæ fac restituatur ad ungulam.

Thus translated by Dr. Fuller :

These to you are our commands :
Send no help to the Netherlands ;
Of the treasure took by Drake
Restitution you must make ;
And those abbeys build anew
Which your father overthrew ;
If for any peace you hope,
In all points restore the pope.

To which the queen extemporaneously replied :

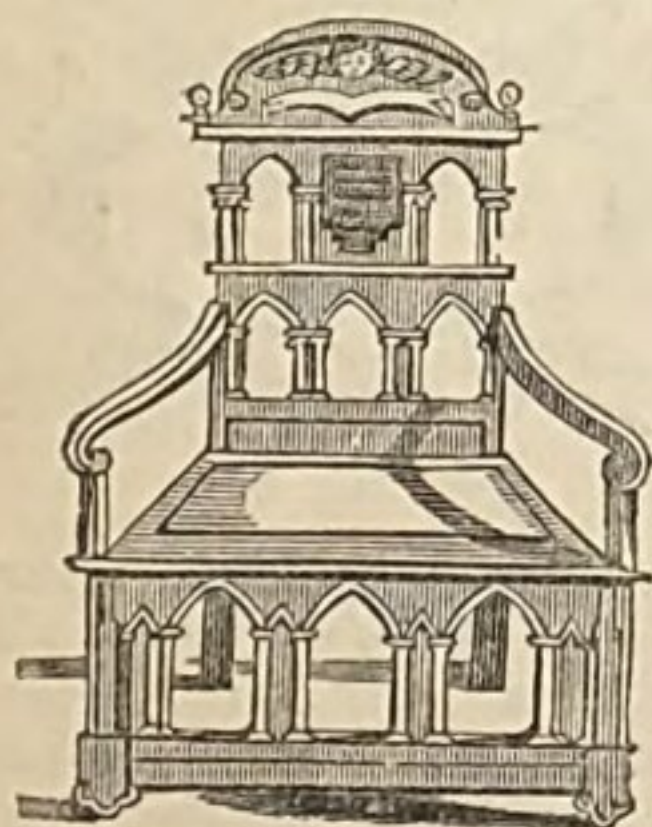

Ad Græcas, bone rex, fient mandata calendas.
Worthy king, know this, your will
At latter Lammas we'll fulfil.

occasion, the following verses, made by the scholars of Winchester College, were nailed to the main-mast :—

“ Plus ultra, Herculeis inscribas, Drace, Columnis, Et magno, dicas, Hercule major ero.”
“ Drace, pererrati quem novit terminus orbis,
Quemque simul mundi vidit uterque Polus ;
Si taceant homines, facient te sidera notum.
Sol nescit comitis non memor esse sui.”

The ship remained for many years an object of public admiration at Deptford, but her timbers falling at length into decay, it was found necessary to break her up, when a chair made out of her planks was presented by John Davies, Esq., to the University of Oxford, upon which the poet COWLEY made the following verses :—

“ To this great ship, which round the world has run,
And match'd in race the chariot of the sun ;
This Pythagorean ship, (for it may claim, Without presumption, so deserved a name,)
By knowledge once, and transformation now,
In her new shape, this sacred port allow.
Drake and his ship could not have wish'd from Fate
A happier station, or more blest estate.
For, lo ! a seat of endless rest is given
To her in Oxford, and to him in heaven.

John-Forbes.

Richard-Hay.

Mary-Drummond.

Jane-Hay.

Sir Francis s. as 2nd bart., at the decease of his father-in-law, 23 May, 1829.

Lineage.

The family of Drummond is of great antiquity, and may be traced through eight centuries to a Hungarian origin.

MAURICE DRUMMOND, a native of Hungary, accompanied Edgar Atheling and his two sisters to Scotland, in the year 1068. Malcolm Canmore m. Margaret, the elder of the Saxon princesses, and under her auspices Drummond acquired large possessions in Scotland, and was the progenitor of the noble family of Drummond of Perth, of which Drummond of Hawthornden is a cadet. Late in the fourteenth century, William Drummond, a younger son of the family, and brother to Annabella, the Queen of ROBERT III. of Scotland, m. Elizabeth, dau. and one of the co-heiresses of Sir William Airth, of Airth, and by this marriage acquired the Barony of Carnock, in Stirlingshire. The elder branch of the line of Carnock is reputed to have terminated in the person of Sir John Drummond, who sold the Carnock estate to Sir Thomas Nicolson, and afterwards fell in the battle of Alford, in 1645, fighting under the banner of the celebrated Marquess of Montrose. John Drummond (afterwards Sir John), 2nd son of Sir Robert, of Carnock, purchased the Barony, and founded the family of Hawthornden.

It appears from a charter in the possession of the family, in favour of Elena de Abernethy, filia natu maxima de Laurentii Abernethy, militis de Hawthornden, that the Barony of Hawthornden belonged, in the year 1338, to the Abernethys, by whom it was sold to the family of Douglas, and by them sold to Drummond of Carnock, with whom it has since remained. The families of Abernethy and Drummond became united by the marriage of Bishop Abernethy and Barbara Drummond.

The most remarkable member of this family was William Drummond, b. in 1585, (son of Sir John Drummond, of Hawthornden,) and unquestionably the most celebrated poet of his day. His "History of the Five Jameses, Kings of Scotland," is also well known; though, perhaps, it is as a poet, rather than an historian, that he is indebted for his literary fame. It is an historical fact, that the famous Ben Jonson travelled from London to Scotland on foot, solely for the purpose of visiting Drummond at his beautiful and romantic seat at Hawthornden. An account of this visit is recorded in Jonson's, as well as Drummond's, works.

ROBERT FORBES, Esq. of Corse, in the co. of Banff, son of John Forbes, of Corse, and a cadet of the Pitsligo family, m. Anne, dau. of John Abernethy, Esq. of Cosbie, and sister of Bishop William Abernethy-Drummond, heir male of the Abernethys of Saltoun, and was father of

I. JOHN FORBES, Esq. commander, R.N.; who m. Mary, dau. of Dr. Ogilvie, M.D., of Murtle, a lineal descendant of Sir John Drummond, 1st of Hawthornden, and heiress, by special settlement, of her cousin, Mrs. Barbara Drummond, (who d. s. p. in 1789, wife of the above-mentioned Dr. William Abernethy-Drummond, and only dau. and heir of William Drummond, Esq. of Hawthornden,) upon which occasion Mr. Forbes assumed the additional surname and arms of DRUMMOND; by this lady he had an only surviving dau., MARGARET-ANNE FORBES-DRUMMOND, who m. Francis, eldest son of the late James Walker, Esq. of Dalry, co. Mid-Lothian, (a descendant of the ancient family of Walker, of St. Fort, Fifeshire,) by Jean-Hay, dau. of Richard-Hay Newton, Esq. of Newton, grandson of John, Marquess of Tweeddale, and the Lady Jane Maitland, his wife, only child of John, Duke of Lauderdale. On his marriage Francis assumed the surname and arms of DRUMMOND.

Mr. Forbes-Drummond was created a Bart. 27 Feb. 1828, with remainder to his son-in-law above-mentioned; and dying 28 May, 1829, was s. according to the limitation.

Creation—27 Feb. 1828.

Arms—Quarterly; first and fourth, or, three bars wavy, within a bordure, gu., for DRUMMOND; second and third, az., three bears' heads, couped close, ar., muzzled, gu., for FORBES.

Crest—A demi-pegasus, ar., winged, or.

Supporters—Two naked men wreathed about the loins, and over the exterior shoulder of each a club, all ppr.

Faithfully and zealously attached to his mistress, this eminent person published, in 1587, his "Martyrdom of MARY STUART, Queen of Scotland," written with all that bitterness of resentment which such an act of flagrant injustice could not but excite in a man of feeling and spirit, who was at once deprived of his sovereign, his friend, and his benefactress. Having departed from his native shores in disgust for France, he became, and continued for many years, a counsellor or senator of the presidial court at Poitiers, where he died in 1613, leaving ample proofs of his talents as a civilian, a poet, and a divine, in his writings, which were collected and published at Paris, by Sebastian Cramoisy, in 1644.

DUFFUS.

DUFFUS, BARON, (Benjamin Dunbar,) co. Elgin, in the peerage of Scotland; and a Bart. of Nova Scotia; b. 28 April, 1761; m. 1785, Anne, eldest dau. of George Mackay, Esq. of Bighouse, by whom he has issue, GEORGE, b. 6 Jan. 1799.

Robert, b. 12 April, 1801.

Louisa, m. to Gordon Duff, Esq. of Hatton.

Henrietta, m. to William Sinclair Wemyss, Esq., and d. 3 Nov. 1820.

His lordship inherited the baronetcy, at the decease of his father, in 1792, and the barony on the demise of his kinsman, James Sutherland, Lord Duffus, 30 Jan. 1827. He is the 6th baron in succession, and the 5th in possession of the dignity.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the noble house of Sutherland, Earls of Sutherland, springing from Kenneth, 3rd Earl of Sutherland, who fell at the battle of Halidon-Hill, in 1333, and left two sons; William, inheritor of the earldom, and

NICHOL, who m. Mary, dau. and heir of Reginald de Cheyne, and acquired by her the Barony of Duffus, co. Elgin, when he added the arms of Cheyne to his paternal coat of Sutherland. From this marriage descended

SIR ALEXANDER SUTHERLAND, of Duffus, who was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 8 Dec. 1650, by the title of BARON DUFFUS. His lordship m. four times, but had issue by his 3rd wife (only), Lady Margaret Stewart, dau. of James, 5th Earl of Moray. He d. 1674, and was s. by his only son,

JAMES, 2nd baron. This nobleman m. Margaret, eldest dau. of Kenneth, 3rd Earl of Seaforth, by whom he had three sons: Kenneth, his heir; Sir James Sutherland, (who changed his name to Dunbar, upon marrying Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir William Dunbar, Bart. of Hempriggs, and is the immediate ancestor of the present peer;) and William Sutherland, of Roscommon. Lord Duffus d. 1705, and was s. by his eldest son,

KENNETH, 3rd baron. This nobleman, a naval officer, was appointed by QUEEN ANNE to the command of a man-of-war; but being implicated in the rebellion of 1715, he was obliged to fly the country: taken prisoner at Hamburg, his lordship was brought back, and incarcerated in the Tower of London, from which he was released by the act of grace, in 1717, and he then withdrew to the Continent, where he served as a flag-officer in the Russian fleet. He m. Charlotte, dau. of Erick de Sioblade, governor and admiral of Gottenburgh, by whom he had an only son,

ERICK SUTHERLAND, who presented a petition to the king, in 1734, setting forth his deceased father's detention at Hamburg, when he was actually on his way to England to surrender himself in the terms of the statute; and urging, that as he was only prevented from so doing by restraint, he could not be deemed attainted within the meaning of the act; and that, therefore, the dignity of Baron Duffus had, upon his father's demise, descended to him. The House of Lords, however, upon taking the petition into consideration, resolved that he had no right to the Barony of Duffus. This gentleman, who was an officer in the army, m. his first cousin, Elizabeth, 3rd dau. of Sir James Dunbar, of Hempriggs, and was s. at his decease, in 1768, by his eldest son, JAMES SUTHERLAND, b. 8 June, 1747, and restored to the honours of his family, by act of parliament, 26 May, 1826. His lordship dying unm. 30 Jan. 1827, the title and estates devolved upon his cousin, Sir Benjamin Dunbar, Bart. of Hempriggs, the present baron, whose maternal lineage we shall now detail.

DUNBAR OF HEMPRIGGS.

There are few families so remotely or distinctly traced as that of Dunbar: by a genealogical tree, in the possession of the present lord, the family of Dunbar is minutely laid down for no less a period than 975 years; but it is not requisite here to trace further back than the last heritable sheriff of Murray,

LODOWICK DUNBAR, from whose seven sons every family of the name extant took its rise. This person, the undoubted chief, was succeeded, for some time, by the lineal descendants of his eldest son; by the male issue failing there, the chiefship and head of the family reverted to the descendant of the sheriff's 2nd son, Dunbar, of Kilbuich, and became vested in

WILLIAM DUNBAR, of Hempriggs, who was created a Bart. of Nova Scotia about the year 1698. This gentleman m. Margaret, dau. of Alexander Sinclair, of Lathorn, by whom he had one son, Benjamin, (who d. without issue, in the lifetime of his father,) and a dau., Elizabeth, upon whom, and her 2nd husband, Sir William entailed his estates after the death of his son. He d. in 1711, when the title reverted to his brother, and with it the chiefship; but the male line again failing with that gentleman's son, Sir Patrick, the title and chiefship reverted to another branch of the family, while the estates of Sir William, according to the deed of entail, devolved upon his daughter,

I. The HON. JAMES SUTHERLAND, 2nd son of James, 2nd Lord Duffus, who assumed the surname and arms of Dunbar, and being created a Bart. in 1706, became Sir James Dunbar, of Hempriggs. The issue of Sir James's marriage were two sons and four daughters. His 2nd son, James, was killed at Carthage; and the elder,

II. SIR WILLIAM, succeeded to the title and estates. This gentleman m. 1st, in 1744, Elizabeth, dau. of Alexander Dunbar, Esq. of Westfield, by whom he had but one dau., the wife of Capt. Thomas Dunbar, of Grange Hill. He m. 2ndly, Jane, dau. of David Sinclair, of Southdun. By these two marriages, Sir William had no less than twenty-three children, not one of whom, except the lady mentioned above, lived to maturity. He m. 3rdly, Henrietta, dau. of Hugh Rose, Esq. of Kilravock, by whom he left at his decease, in 1792, an only surviving dau., Elizabeth, and an only surviving son,

III. SIR BENJAMIN, now Lord Duffus.

Sir Henry is vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, Westminster.

Lineage.

The surname of this family is of Saxon origin, and its earliest known ancestor is

Lineage.

This and the noble house of FINGALL claim a common ancestor in

SIR CHRISTOPHER PLUNKETT, Knt., who was deputy-governor of Ireland under Sir Thomas Stanley, lord-deputy in 1432, and subsequently under Richard, Duke of York. He m. Joan, dau. and sole heir of Sir Lucas Cusack, Knt., Lord of Killeen and Dunsany, by whom he had, with other children, JOHN, ancestor of the Earls of Fingall, who inherited the Lordship of Killeen; and

CHRISTOPHER, that of Dunsany, of which he was created Baron by writ, 17th HENRY VI. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and heir of Richard Fitzgerald, of Ballysonan, co. Kildare, younger son of Maurice, 3rd Earl of Kildare, by whom he had four sons, and was s. by the eldest,

RICHARD, 2nd baron; who m. Joan, dau. of Sir Rowland Fitz-Eustace, lord-treasurer of Ireland in 1471, and lord-high-chancellor in 1474; and was s. by his only son,

JOHN, 3rd baron, K.G. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. of Hussey, feudal Baron of Galtrim, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD, 4th baron. This nobleman was slain by the rebel O'Connor, in 1521, and was s. by his son, (by Anne, dau. and heir of Philip Birmingham,)

ROBERT, 5th baron; who was one of the peers of the parliament held at Dublin in 1541, when he was ranked immediately after his kinsman Lord Killeen. His lordship m. 1st, Eleanor, youngest dau. of Sir William Darcy, Knt. of Platten, vice-treasurer of Ireland, by whom he had four sons and nine daughters. PATRICK, 9th baron; who received a patent of confirmation, from JAMES I., of the several castles of Dunsany, Corbally, &c. His lordship was subsequently summoned to parliament, 1st CHARLES I., and suffered considerably in the cause of that unfortunate prince. A short time before the year 1541, the lords-justices had supplied the lords of the pale with arms, but suddenly recalled them, which occasioned much discontent among the catholic lords, who, having assembled, appointed Lord Dunsany to assure the justices of their attachment and loyalty, and of their readiness to co-operate in every measure that could be conducive to the peace of the country. The lords-justices, however, took no further notice of this proffered service than by confining his lordship in the castle of Dublin, where he remained for several years; but on the restoration of CHARLES II., he again took his seat in the House of Lords, and continued to sit until 1666. His lordship m. Jane, dau. of Sir Thomas Hencage,

RANDALL, 11th baron. This nobleman adhering to the falling fortunes of his legitimate sovereign, JAMES II., was outlawed in 1691; but being included in the treaty of Limerick, his estates were restored; neglecting, however, the forms necessary to re-establish himself in the privileges of the peerage, neither his lordship nor his immediate descendants had a seat in the House of Lords. He m. 1st, Anne, relict of Theobald, 1st Earl of Carlingford, and dau. of Sir William Pershall; but by that lady had no issue. He wedded 2ndly, 1711, Bridget, only dau. of Richard Fleming, Esq. of Stahalmock, co. Meath, (by his 1st wife;) and dying 16 March, 1735, left an only son,

Kildare, M.P. for that shire, (see BURKE's Commoners, vol. ii. page 364,) and had (with two daus., Bridget, wife of Hugh McGuire, Esq. of Kelston, and Rose, of the Marquess de Carondelet) an only son, his successor in 1781,

In April, 1821, her ladyship's sons, John and Charles, obtained a similar licence.

Lineage.

The very ancient family of Tollemache claims Saxon descent, and the name is said to be a corruption of the word "tollmack," tolling of the bell. The Tollemaches having flourished with the greatest honour, in an uninterrupted male succession, co. Suffolk, since the first arrival of the Saxons in England, a period of more than 13 centuries.

TOLLEMACHE, Lord of Bentley, in Suffolk, and Stoke-Tollemache, co. Oxford, lived in the 6th century, and upon the old manor house at Bentley may still be seen the following inscription:

"Before the Normans into England came,
Bentley was my seat, and Tollemache was my name."

HUGH DE TOLLEMACHE subscribed the charter, sans date, (about the reign of KING STEPHEN,) made by John de St. John to Eve, the 1st Abbess of Godstow, in Oxfordshire. This Hugh, in his old age, assumed the cowl at Gloucester, and bestowed upon that monastery a moiety of the town of Hampton, which his son, Peter, confirmed, in the time of the Abbot Hamblin. The descendant of Peter,

SIR HUGH DE TOLLEMACHE, in the 25th of EDWARD I., held of the crown the manor of Bentley, and the fourth part of the village of Aketon, by knight's service. In the 29th of the same monarch,

WILLIAM and JOHN TOLLEMACHE had summons to attend the king at Berwick-upon-Tweed, previous to his expedition into Scotland. This John took the black cross, and his arms are now remaining in the minster at York.

SIR LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, of Bentley, flourished in the reigns of HENRY VI. and EDWARD IV., and was a personage of great influence and authority. He m. the heir of Helmingham, in Suffolk, and by that alliance acquired the inheritance. His son, John, was father of

This gentleman was s. by his son,

SIR LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, of Helmingham, high-sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in 1567. In 1561, QUEEN ELIZABETH honoured Helmingham with her presence, and remained there from the 14th to the 18th of Aug., inclusive, being most hospitably and sumptuously entertained. During her majesty's visit she stood sponsor to Sir Lionel's son, and presented the child's mother with her lute, which is still preserved in the family. Lady Tollemache was dau. of Sir Richard Wentworth, of Nettlested. Sir Lionel was s. by his son, EDEN-JOHNSON, SIR ROBERT, of West Auckland, co. Durham; b. 25 Oct. 1774; s. as 5th bart., on the demise of his father, 23 Aug. 1812. Sir Robert assumed, by sign-manual, in 1811, the additional surname of JOHNSON, in compliance with the request of the late Mrs. Dorothea Johnson, widow of Peter Johnson, Esq., many years recorder of York, whose estates he had inherited in 1810.

Lineage.

This family was resident in the co. Durham for some generations prior to the close of the 14th century. There is no record of its genealogy, however, before the year 1413, when by inquisition of Langly, Bishop of Durham, it appears that

ROBERT DE EDEN died, seised of three messuages and ten oxgangs of land, in Preston-on-Tees, held of the bishop, in capite, by knight's service. His descendant, EDMONSTONE.

EDMONSTONE, SIR ARCHIBALD, of Duntreath, co. Stirling; b. 12 March, 1795; s. as 3rd bart., upon the demise of his father, 1 April, 1821; m. 10 Oct. 1832, his cousin-german, Emma, dau. of Randle Wilbraham, Esq. of Rode Hall, co. Chester, and has issue.

Lineage.

The family of Edmonstone is of great antiquity in North Britain. It dates its origin about the latter end of the 11th century. Among the many foreigners who attended Margaret, dau. of Edgar Atheling, into Scotland, in 1070, and who afterwards rose to distinction, was Edmundus, supposed to be a younger son of Count Egmont, of Flanders. This Edmundus obtained a grant of land in the co. Edinburgh, to which he gave his name, and those lands, called Edmundestoun, thus became the distinctive appellation of the family.

SIR JOHN EDMONSTONE, Knt., had several charters of lands, temp. DAVID II., A.D. 1369. His son,

SIR JOHN EDMONSTONE, Knt., espoused the Princess Isabel Stuart, dau. of ROBERT II., and widow of James Earl of Douglas and Marr, who fell at the battle of Otterbourne. By this lady he left two sons: Sir David Edmonstone, his successor, from whom derived the Edmonstones of Ednum, the chief branch of the family, but lately extinct; and another son,

SIR WILLIAM EDMONSTONE, Knt. of Culloden, the first of the family of Duntreath, who m. (having obtained a papal dispensation) his 1st cousin, Mary, Countess Dowager of Angus, (to whom he was 4th husband,) dau. of ROBERT III., King of Scotland. JAMES II. conferred a grant of the lands and Barony of Duntreath upon Sir William Edmonstone and the Countess of Angus, by a charter bearing date 1452. This, which had previously been a part of the forfeited estate of the Earls of Lennox, has ever since remained the chief seat of the family. Sir William d. 1460, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM, of Culloden and Duntreath, who was nominated one of the lords of Session, by JAMES III., in 1461, and d. the following year. From this eminent person we pass to his lineal descendant,

SIR JAMES EDMONSTONE, Knt., who was constituted, in 1578, justice-deputy under the Earl of Argyll, the justice-general. This gentleman, with others, was indicted for high treason, and convicted, but pardoned, although his accomplices suffered. From Sir James descended in a direct line,

I. ARCHIBALD EDMONSTONE, Esq., (eldest son of Archibald Edmonstone, Esq., by Anne, dau. of the Hon. John Campbell, of Mammore, grandau. of Archibald, Earl of Argyll, and niece of Archibald, 1st Duke of Argyll,) who was created a Bart. 5 May, 1774. Sir Archibald represented the co. Dumbarton for several years in parliament. He m. 1st, Susanna-Mary, only dau. of Roger Harenc, Esq., by whom he had issue, land, George, and James, and six daus.

Wilts; and d. 1791, leaving issue.

II. SIR CHARLES, b. 9 Oct. 1764. This gentleman m. 1st, in 1794, Emma, 5th dau. of Richard Wilbraham Bootle, Esq., and sister of Lord Skelmersdale, by whom (who d. in 1797) he had ARCHIBALD, the present bart., and a dau., Mary-Emma. Sir Charles m. 2ndly, in Dec. 1804, Louisa, youngest dau. of Beaumont, Lord Hotham, by whom (who m. 2ndly, in 1832, Charles Woodcock, Esq.) he left

On the 22nd Oct. 1596, Lord Howard was created EARL OF NOTTINGHAM, and after the accession of JAMES I., (at whose coronation he officiated as lord-high-steward of England,) his lordship was engaged in several diplomatic missions of importance. The earl m. 1st, Catharine, dau. of Henry Cary, Lord Hunsdon, by whom he had two sons and three daus.; and 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of James Stewart, Earl of Murray, by whom he had two sons. Fuller, in his quaint manner, thus speaks of this gallant and eminent personage:

"An hearty gentleman, and cordial to his sovereign, of a most proper person, one reason why QUEEN ELIZABETH (who, though she did not value a jewel by, valued it the more for, a fair case) reflected so much on him.

"His services in the 88th is notoriously known, when, at the first news of the Spanish approach, he towed at a cable with his own hands, to draw out the harbour-bound ships into the sea: I dare boldly say, he drew more, though not by his person, by his presence and example, than any ten in the place. True it is, he was no deep seaman, (not to be expected from one of his extraction,) but had skill enough to know those who had more skill than himself, and to follow their instructions; and would not starve the queen's service by feeding his own sturdy wilfulness, but was ruled by the experienced in sea matters, the queen having a navy of Oak, and an admiral of Osier."

His lordship d. at the advanced age of 87, 14 Dec. 1624, and was s. by his 2nd, but eldest surviving son,

Sir John Montgomerie had three sons; Alexander, (the youngest,) Sir Hugh, who fell in the fight of Otterburn, and whose death is thus recorded in the old ballad of Chevy Chase:

He had a bow bent in his hand,
Made of a trusty tree,

Unto the head drew he.

So right his shaft he set,
The gray-goose wing that was therein
In his heart-blood was wet.

EGMONT.

EGMONT, EARL OF, (Henry-Frederick-Joseph-James Perceval,) Viscount Perceval, of Kanturk; Baron Perceval, of Burton, in the peerage of Ireland; Lord Lovel and Holland, of Enmore, co. Somerset, in the peerage of England; and a Bart. of Ireland; m. in Dec. 1828, Louisa-Maria, youngest dau. of Count d'Orselet, and has issue. His lordship s. to the honours. as 5th earl, upon the demise of his father, 31 Dec. 1835.

Lineage.

DAVID PERCEVAL, Lord of Tykenham, Rolleston, &c., in the co. of Somerset, (lineally descended from Ascelin Gouel de Perceval, who accompanied the CONQUEROR to England,) m. Alice, dau. of Thomas Bythemore of Overwere; and dying in 1534, left issue,

James, d. s. p. 1548.

GEORGE, of whom presently.

Thomas, ancestor of the PERCEVALS of Royton, in Lancashire, and of the PERCEVALS of the co. of Wexford, now represented by

JAMES PERCEVAL, Esq. of Barntown House, in that county, who m. in 1831, Jane-Jones, dau. of Edward Westby, Esq. of High Park, and has issue. (See BURKE'S History of the Commoners, vol. iv.)

The second son,

GEORGE PERCEVAL, Esq., Lord of Tykenham, &c., m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Edward Bamfylde, of Poltimore, in Devon; and dying about 1599, left, with a dau., Elizabeth, m. to Richard Gilbert, Esq., a son,

RICHARD PERCEVAL. The life of this ultimately successful person was chequered and eventful in no ordinary degree. He was b. in 1550, and educated at St. Paul's School, then the most celebrated seminary in England, whence he was sent to Lincoln's-Inn, to acquire some general idea of the laws, esteemed, in those days, an accomplishment of the highest description. In both his progress was brilliant, but his conduct dissipated and disorderly, so much so indeed, that he incurred the displeasure of his father, who, upon his marriage with Joan, dau. of Henry Young, Esq. of Buchorn Weston, co. Dorset, entirely abandoned him, observing, that as he had ruined himself by his riots, he might recover himself by his wits. Thus unnaturally cast off, Mr. Perceval found means, by the credit of his reversionary estates, and the assistance of his friends, to maintain himself several years, during which time he had three sons and two daus.: but at length, through a failure of resources, and the increasing expenses of his family, he was obliged to quit the kingdom, and travelled into Spain, where he remained about four years. Being then informed of his wife's decease, he returned to England, hoping, now that the principal cause of his father's displeasure had been removed, he might again recover his good opinion; but that hope proving delusive, his relations, and particularly Roger Cave, Esq. of Stamford, who had married the Lord-Treasurer Burghley's sister, engaged on his side, and by that gentleman's means, he contracted an acquaintance with Lord Burghley, who, being pleased with his talents, and moved by his misfortunes, and having endeavoured in vain to procure a reconciliation with his father, determined to promote his fortune by employing him in the management of those state affairs which required the greatest trust and secrecy. Thus he continued till the year 1586, when, whilst the court of Spain was meditating the armada, an English ship succeeded in taking from a Spanish vessel letters from the Low Countries, which, by intimations from abroad, were known to contain the secret. Those letters being brought to Lord Burghley, were laid by his lordship before QUEEN ELIZABETH in council; but the contents being in cipher, the lord-treasurer proposed that the papers should be entrusted to this Richard Perceval, who returned them the next day after they were placed in his hand to her majesty in person, deciphered, translated, and fairly transcribed, in Spanish, Latin, and English. This was the first certain intelligence of the Spanish design, and Perceval was admitted instantly into the queen's favour, and from that moment his road to honour and fortune was open and unimpeded. Having subsequently filled the office of secretary of the court of Wards in England for several years, he was nominated, in 1616, registrar of the court of Wards in Ireland, where, after obtaining considerable landed property, he d. in 1620, and was s. by his son, (by his second wife, Alice, dau. of John Sherman, Esq. of Ottrey St. Mary's, co. Devon.)

This noble family deduces its descent from Ailwardus, an eminent Saxon, of the co. Norfolk, who, being possessed of an estate there, in Wymondham, (subsequently called Wyndham,) assumed, soon after the Norman Conquest, the surname of Wyndham. From this person lineally descended

SIR JOHN WYNDHAM, who was in the battle of Stoke, anno 1487, against the Earl of Lincoln, Lambert Simnel, and their adherents, and was knighted immediately after the victory; but being afterwards engaged in the interests of the house of York, he was condemned for high treason and beheaded, with Sir James Tyrrell, lieut. of Guisnes Castle, 17th HENRY VII. Charlotte-Christian.

Augusta-Frederica-Elizabeth.

Frances-Anne.

His lordship is known as the collector of some splendid Grecian antiquities, which he procured during his residence, as ambassador-extraordinary, in Turkey, and which are now deposited in the national museum, under the denomination of the "Elgin Marbles." He is the 6th Earl of Elgin, and 11th Earl of Kincardine, and one of the representative peers of Scotland.

Lineage.

This noble family claims descent from the royal house of Bruce, and that claim is generally admitted.

SIR ROBERT BRUCE, Knt., the 1st of Clackmanan, descended from John de Bruce, a younger son of Robert, 5th Lord of Annandale, d. about 1390, leaving a son and successor,

SIR ROBERT BRUCE, Knt. of Clackmanan, who m. a dau. of Sir John Scrimgeour, of Dudhope, and had issue, DAVID, his heir.

Thomas, of Kennet, ancestor of the Bruces of Kennet, whose heiress, MARGARET, m. Archibald Bruce, of Green, and is now represented by ROBERT BRUCE, Esq. of Kennet.

The elder son,

SIR DAVID BRUCE, Knt. of Clackmanan, living in 1406, was father of

JOHN BRUCE, of Clackmanan, whose son,

SIR DAVID BRUCE, Knt. of Clackmanan, living temp. JAMES IV., m. Marian, dau. of Sir Robert Herries, of Terreagles, and had a son,

SIR DAVID BRUCE, of Clackmanan, who m. Jane, dau. of Sir Patrick Blackadder, of Tulliallan, co. Perth, and had with four daus., four sons, viz.,

I. JOHN, who d. before his father, leaving a son,

SIR ROBERT BRUCE, of Clackmanan, ancestor of the BRUCES of Clackmanan, whose last male heir, HENRY BRUCE, Esq. of Clackmanan Castle, d. 8 July, 1772, when the representation of the family devolved on the descendants of his only sister. That lady, JANET BRUCE, left by her husband, William Bruce, Esq. of Newton, and afterwards of Cowden, an only surviving son, CAPT. WILLIAM BRUCE, of Cowden, who died in 1807, leaving an only dau. and heir, MARGARET, Countess of Airlie.

II. EDWARD, of whom presently.

III. Robert, of Lyntmill.

IV. David, of Green; whose son, ARCHIBALD, m. his kinswoman, MARGARET BRUCE, heiress of Kennet, and was ancestor of the present ROBERT BRUCE, Esq. of Kennet.

The second son,

EDWARD BRUCE, of Blairhall, m. Alison, dau. of William Reid, of Aikenhead, sister of Robert, Bishop of Orkney, president of the court of session from 1543 to his death in France, where he was one of the commissioners to witness the nuptials of QUEEN MARY with the Dauphin, 1558, and supposed to have been poisoned. Mr. Bruce had issue: ROBERT, of Blairhall; Edward; Sir George, of Carnock;* and William. The second son,

* SIR GEORGE BRUCE, of Carnock, settled at Culross, where he established extensive and flourishing coal-works. He also carried on the manufacture of salt to a great extent, and was engaged in a considerable foreign trade. The coal was wrought to a distance under the sea, and was shipped at a moat under the sea-mark. JAMES VI. visiting Sir George Bruce, and expressing a desire to inspect the coal-works, was conducted through them to the moat, to his majesty's no small dismay at finding himself in the midst of the sea: he was conducted back, however, in a pinnace, and sumptuously entertained by Sir George, at the abbey of Culross. By those spirited commercial exertions Sir George Bruce accumulated great wealth. He was M.P. for Culross, and one of the commissioners appointed by the parliament of Scotland to treat of a union with England, in 1604. Sir George m. Margaret, dau. of Archibald Primrose, of Burnbrae, and had, with other issue,

GEORGE, his successor.

Robert, of Broomhall, one of the lords of session in 1649; m. Helen, dau. of Sir James Skene, of Curriehill, and was s. by his only son, ALEXANDER, (Sir) of Broomhall, of whom presently, as FOURTH EARL OF KINCARDINE.

Sir George Bruce d. 6 May, 1625, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE BRUCE, Esq. of Carnock, who m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Preston, Bart. of Valleyfield, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR EDWARD BRUCE, of Carnock, who was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 26 Dec. 1647, in the dignities of Lord Bruce, of Torry, and EARL OF KINCARDINE; and dying without issue in 1662, the honours being to heirs general, devolved upon his brother,

ALEXANDER, 2nd earl. This nobleman took a prominent part in Scottish affairs after the Restoration; and the government of Scotland was placed, anno 1667, in the hands of his lordship, the Earl of Tweeddale, and Sir Robert Murray. Lord Kincardine was appointed an extraordinary lord of session in 1667, and continued in that office until his decease, 9 July, 1680. He m. in 1659, Varonica, dau. of Corneille Van Arson Van Sommelsdyck, Lord of Sommelsdyck and Spyke, in Holland, and was s. by his only surviving son, ALEXANDER, 3rd earl. The late lord having died deeply involved in debt, the estate was brought to a judicial sale, by order of the court of Session, and purchased, in 1700, by Col. John Erskine, son of David, Lord Cardross. The

EDWARD BRUCE, of Kinloss, was appointed a lord of Session in 1597, and accredited by JAMES VI., in 1600, with the Earl of Mar, to the court of ELIZABETH, to congratulate her majesty upon the suppression of Essex's rebellion. He then placed the affairs of his royal master in such a train with Secretary Cecil as to pave the way to the peaceable succession of the Scottish monarch to the English throne. Upon his return, he was created a peer of Scotland, 2 Feb. 1601-2, as Baron Bruce, of Kinloss, in the co. of Elgin. Accompanying KING JAMES into England, on his accession, he was sworn of the new monarch's privy-council, and constituted master-of-the-rolls for life, when he resigned the office of lord of Session. His lordship m. Magdalen, dau. of Sir Alexander Clerk, of Balbirnie, in Fife, and had issue, two sons and one dau., Christian, with whom JAMES I. gave £10,000, with his own hands, as a marriage portion, to William Cavendish, Earl of Devonshire. The earl d. in 1610, and was s. by his elder son,

EDWARD, 2nd baron, K.B. His lordship did not, however, long enjoy his honours, being killed in a duel, in 1613, by Sir Edward Sackville, afterwards Earl of Dorset. Dying unm. the barony devolved upon his brother,

THOMAS, 3rd baron; who was advanced to an earldom, 21 June, 1633, as EARL OF ELGIN, with remainder to his heirs male for ever, bearing the name and arms of Bruce, and created an English peer, 13 July, 1640, as Baron Bruce, of Whorlton, co. York. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir Robert Chichester, Knt. of Raleigh, co. Devon; and dying in 1663, was s. by his only son,

ROBERT, 2nd earl; who, for his loyalty to the Charles's, was created, 18 March, 1663-4, Baron Bruce, of Skelton, co. York; Viscount Bruce, of Amptill, co. Bedford; and Earl of Aylesbury. His lordship m. Diana, dau. of Henry, 1st Earl of Stamford, by whom he had eight sons and nine daughters. He d. in 1685, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

THOMAS, 3rd Earl of Elgin and 2nd Earl of Aylesbury. This nobleman m. twice, and had surviving issue by his first countess, (Elizabeth, dau. of Henry, Lord Beauchamp, and heir of her brother, William, Duke of Somerset,)

CHARLES, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to George Brudenell, Earl of Cardigan.

Earl of Kincardine was an eccentric character, and had the misfortune of losing his sight some years before his death, which happened in Nov. 1705, unm., when a competition arose for the honours between his lordship's sister, Lady Mary Cochrane, and Sir Alexander Bruce, of Broomhall, which terminated in favour of the latter, (refer to the second son of Sir George Bruce, of Carnock,) who s. as

ALEXANDER, 4th earl. This nobleman m. Christian, dau. of Robert Bruce, of Blairhall, who was s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT, 5th earl; who d. without issue, and was s. by his brother,

ALEXANDER, 6th earl. This nobleman dying without male issue, the honours devolved upon his brother,

THOMAS, 7th earl; who m. Rachel, dau. of Robert Pauncefoot, Esq. of the co. Hereford, and was s. by his elder son,

WILLIAM, 8th earl. This nobleman m. in 1726, Janet Robertson, noticed by Hamilton, of Bangour, amongst the first beauties of his time, dau. of James Robertson, Esq., one of the principal clerks of session, and had issue, CHARLES, 9th Earl of Kincardine; who s. as 5th EARL OF ELGIN, and thus united the two dignities, as stated above.

The earl wedded 2ndly, Charlotte, Countess of Sanu, in Brabant, and had an only dau., Charlotte, m. in 1722, to the Count of Horn, in Germany. He d. in 1741, and was s. by his son, CHARLES, 4th Earl of Elgin and 3rd Earl of Aylesbury; who had been called to the upper house in the lifetime of his father, by writ, (1711,) as Lord Bruce, of Whorlton. In April, 1746, his lordship obtained a new patent, creating him Baron Bruce, of Tottenham, co. Wilts, with remainder to his nephew, Thomas-Bruce Brudenell, the youngest son of his sister, Lady Elizabeth, by George, Earl of Cardigan. The earl m. thrice, but leaving no surviving male issue, (although he had two sons by his first wife, Lady Anne Saville, eldest dau. and co-heir of William, Marquess of Halifax; and had besides, two daus., Mary, m. to Henry Bridges, Duke of Chandos; and Elizabeth, m. to the Hon. Benjamin Bathurst, son of Allan, Lord Bathurst,) the Earldom of Aylesbury, the Viscounty of Bruce, of Amptill, and the Barony of Bruce, of Skelton, as well as that of Bruce, of Whorlton, became extinct at his decease, 10 Feb. 1747. "Fort St. Philip, 16th Oct. 1781.

"When your brave ancestor was desired by his sovereign to assassinate the Duke de Guise, he returned the answer which you should have done, when you were charged to assassinate the character of a man whose birth is as illustrious as your own, or that of the Duc de Guise. * At the great contest for Westminster, in 1750, Mr. Murray took an active part in favour of the anti-ministerial candidate. Peter Legh, high-bailiff of Westminster, preferred to the House of Commons a complaint, 28 Jan. 1751, that Mr. Murray, on the 15th of the previous May, encouraged a mob to proceed to acts of violence against him; and to break down the doors of the vestry, saying, with imprecations, "Will nobody knock the dog down? will nobody kill the dog?"

of Scotland, one of the representative lords; Baron

age of the United Kingdom; hereditary lord-high-constable of Scotland, lord-lieut. of Aberdeenshire, and master of the buckhounds; b. 21 February, 1801; s. to the honours, upon the demise of his

WILLIAM, Lord Hay, b. 3 May, 1823.

Adelaide-Augusta.

Agnes-Georgiana-Elizabeth.

His lordship is the 21st high-constable, and 16th earl.

Lineage.

The traditional origin of the noble house of Hay is thus related:—In the reign of KENNETH III., anno 980, the Danes, who had invaded Scotland, having prevailed at the battle of Luncarty, near Perth, were pursuing the flying Scots from the field, when a countryman, with his two sons, appeared in a narrow pass, through which the vanquished were hurrying, and impeded for a moment their flight. "What!" said the rustic, "had you rather be slaughtered by your merciless foes, than die honourably in the field? Come, rally, rally!" and he headed the fugitives, brandishing his ploughshare, and crying out that help was at hand: the Danes, believing that a fresh army was falling upon them, fled in confusion, and the Scots thus recovered the laurel which they had lost, and freed their country from servitude. The battle being won, the old man, afterwards known by the name of Hay, was brought to the king, who, assembling a parliament at Scone, gave to the said Hay and his sons, as a just reward for their valour, so much land on the river Fay, in the district of Gowrie, as a falcon from a man's hand flew over till it settled; which being six miles in length, was afterwards called Errol; and the king being desirous to elevate Hay and his sons from their humble rank in life to the order of nobility, his majesty assigned them a coat of arms, which was, argent, three escutcheons, gules, to intimate that the father and two sons had been the three fortunate shields of Scotland. So much for tradition. But the incontrovertible fact is, that the noble houses of Tweeddale and Errol claim a common progenitor in

WILLIAM DE HAYA, who obtained a grant of the lands of Errol from WILLIAM the Lion, and was king's butler in that monarch's reign. He espoused Juliana, dau. of Ranulph de Soulis, Lord of Liddesdale, and had two sons, WILLIAM, his heir, and Robert, ancestor of the house of Tweeddale. The elder son,

SIR WILLIAM DE HAYA, was father of

DAVID DE HAYA, who wedded Helen, dau. of Gilbert, Earl of Strathern, and had two sons, viz.,

GILBERT, his heir.

WILLIAM, from whom spring the HAYS of LEYS, of PITFOUR, SEGGIEDEN, &c. (See BURKE'S History of the Commoners.)

From the elder son, GILBERT, descended

SIR GILBERT DE HAYE, Lord of Errol, who, adhering to ROBERT I., obtained from that prince a grant of divers crown lands, and was created by charter, dated 12 Nov. 1315, HIGH-CONSTABLE OF SCOTLAND, to himself and his heirs for ever. The great-great-great-grandson and lineal descendant of the constable,

WILLIAM HAY, of Errol, constable of Scotland, was elevated to the peerage, 17 March, 1452-3, as EARL OF ERROL. His lordship m. Beatrix Douglas, dau. of James, 3rd Lord Dalkeith; and dying in 1463, was s. by his elder son,

He m. Lady Anne Lyon, only dau. of Patrick, 1st Earl of Kinghorn; and dying in 1636, was s. by his only son,

The HON. THOMAS ERSKINE, 3rd son of Henry-David, 5th Earl of Buchan, (see that dignity), having served both in the army and navy, devoted, at length, his talents to the bar, to which he was called in 1778. Gifted with the most powerful eloquence, Mr. Erskine attained at once the summit of his profession as an advocate; in which capacity he continued until the year 1806, when he was appointed LORD-HIGH-CHANCELLOR OF GREAT BRITAIN, and elevated to the peerage, 8 April, in the same year, as BARON ERSKINE, of Restormel Castle. Lord Erskine m. 2ndly, Miss Sarah Buck, by whom he also left issue. The success of this eminent lawyer is, probably, the most remarkable upon record as to promptitude; for almost immediately after he was called to the bar he was fortunate enough to find an opportunity for the display of his extraordinary powers. Capt. Baillie, who had been removed from the superintendence of Greenwich Hospital, by the Earl of Sandwich, was proceeded against by that nobleman for the publication of a libel, and the attorney-general having to move the court of King's Bench for his lordship upon the subject, Mr. Erskine was retained by Capt. Baillie to oppose the motion; upon which he displayed so much eloquence and spirit, that he received, when leaving the court, no less than thirty retainers from attorneys who happened to be present. But of all Erskine's cases, those which raised the advocate's reputation the highest were his splendid defences of Lord George Gordon and of Admiral Keppel. He was likewise distinguished in an eminent degree for the prisoners in the memorable state prosecutions against JOHN HORNE TOOKE, Hardy, &c. His lordship died of an inflammation of the chest, 17 Nov. 1823, at Almondell, near Edinburgh, the seat of his nephew, the Hon. Henry Erskine.

ESMONDE.

ESMONDE, SIR THOMAS, of Ballynastra, co. Wexford; b. 10 Dec. 1786; s. as 8th bart., upon the demise of his uncle, 19 Dec. 1803; m. Mary, only dau. of — Payne, Esq., but has no issue.

Lineage.

This family is of very ancient establishment in the co. Wexford, where we find John Esmond was consecrated Bishop of Ferns, about the middle of the fourteenth century. This prelate was soon afterwards deprived of his see by Pope Clement VI., but he did not submit to the papal mandate without considerable opposition, nor before the temporal authorities were obliged to come in aid of the spiritual. He was, however, appointed to another see in 1356, in which he d. 4 April, 1362.

The immediate founder of the present house,

JOHN ESMONDE, Esq. of Johnstown, co. Wexford, m. Isabel, dau. of Thomas Rosseter, Esq. of Rathmacknee Castle, and left a son,

LAURENCE ESMONDE, Esq. of Johnstown. This gentleman m. Eleanor, dau. of Walter Walsh, of the Mountains, by whom he had two sons, and was s. by the elder,

WILLIAM ESMONDE, Esq., who m. Margaret, dau. of Michael Furlong, Esq. of Horetown, and had, with seven daus., four sons, viz.,

ROBERT, living in 1618, who continued the line of Johnstown, which became EXTINCT a few years since in the male line.

James.

Patrick.

The second son,

SIR LAURENCE ESMONDE, abandoning the religious creed of his ancestors, declared himself a partisan of ELIZABETH, and a convert to protestantism. In 1601-2, he commanded a troop of 150 foot and horse in her majesty's service, was knighted by Sir Henry Sydney, the viceroy, and served in Connaught in the same corps d'armée, on the expeditions of the Irish chieftains, Morough-ni-doe O'Flaherty, Dynast, of West Connaught, and Sir Theobald Bourke, first Viscount Mayo, who, to preserve their estates, had made their submission a short time previously to the lord-deputy, and accepted commands in the queen's service. Sir Laurence Esmonde's zeal and activity in his military operations procured for him, in an especial degree, the favour of the court, and his ambition increasing with his fortune, he was raised to the peerage, in 1622, (being at the time major-gen. of all the king's forces in Ireland, and governor of Duncannon Fort,) as LORD ESMONDE, Baron of Limerick, co. Wexford. During one of his campaigns in Connaught, having fallen in love with the beautiful sister of O'Flaherty, he married her and had one son, THOMAS. It happened, however, that Lady Esmonde, a devout Roman catholic, fearing that her child might be brought up a protestant, formed the resolution of carrying off the infant by stealth, and returning to her family in Connaught. This act of maternal devotion appears to have been not at all disagreeable to Sir Laurence, as affording him a pretext for casting suspicion on the legality of his union, that of a protestant with a catholic, yet, without resorting to legal measures to annul the marriage in due form, he some time after espoused Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of the Hon. Walter Butler, 4th son of James, 9th Earl of Ormonde, but by her had no issue. His lordship d. 26 March, 1646, bequeathing all his extensive estates to his only son,

I. SIR THOMAS ESMONDE, 1st bart. The severity and singularity of his case created considerable interest; and there is scarce a doubt that, but for the melancholy state of civil war, usurpation, and destruction of property, at that period, the conduct of Lord Esmonde towards his lady, and the legality of his second marriage, his first undivorced wife still living, upon legal investigation into the matter, and the accompanying circumstances, Sir Thomas Esmonde's right of succession to his father's peerage could not fail to have been acknowledged. Before, however, that could have taken place, Sir Thomas died; and his successor had to occupy himself with entering into possession of his grandfather's property. Sir Thomas Esmonde, as already noticed, was reared and educated with his maternal relations; and upon his uncle being raised in the peerage to the dignity of Viscount Bourke, of Mayo, by privy - seal, dated at Westminster, 8 Feb. 1626, and by patent, the 21 June, 1627, Sir Thomas, who had already been knighted for his eminent services in the cause of royalty, as general of horse in the armies of CHARLES I., was created, through Lord Mayo's influence, a few months later, (28 Jan. 1628,) a Baronet of Ireland. Sir Thomas m. Ellis, widow of Thomas Butler, 4th Lord Cahir, and dau. to Sir John Fitzgerald, of Dromana, co. Waterford, (of the line of Desmonde,) and had issue,

I. LAURENCE, his heir.

II. James, of Ballynastragh, who m. Barbara Vincent, of the co. of Limerick, and had issue, Patrick, Chevalier d'Esmonde, col. in the Austrian service, who was for a considerable time in captivity in Turkey. He left an only dau. and heir, who wedded Charles, Count Kavanagh, (of the family of Borris,) general of cavalry in the imperial army.

The elder son,

LAURENCE ESMONDE, Esq. of Ballynastragh, died at the age of 84, from a fall from his horse while hunting. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Henry Brownrigg, Esq. of Wingfield, in Wexford; 2ndly, Mrs. Wyse, of the Manor of St. John, (previously Miss Masterson, of Castletown;) and 3rdly, Miss Bagg; but had issue only by his first wife, viz.,

JAMES, his heir, who s. as 6th bart.

Frances, m. to Howard Kyan, Esq. of Mount Howard and Ballymurtagh, and had issue, John-Howard Kyan, James Kyan, Major-Gen. Francis Kyan, and Esmonde Kyan, who lost his life in the rebellion of 1798.

Mary, m. to Francis Macgan, Esq. of Emoe, in Westmeath, (uterine brother of the O'Connor Don,) and had three sons, Richard, James, and Thomas; and three daus.; Elizabeth, m. to John Bonyngge, Esq. of Bonyngagh; Margaret, m. to Mathieu de Montmorency Morres, Esq. of Rath, or Rathalin Lodge, in the co. of Tipperary; and Anne, m. to Christopher Fitzgerald, Esq., father of the late Thomas Fitzgerald, Esq. of Fane Valley, M.P. for Louth.

The elder son,

II. SIR LAURENCE, generally resided at Huntingdon Castle, near Clonagall, co. Carlow, which he built and called after the ancient seat of his ancestors at Huntingdon, in Lincolnshire. He m. Lucia, eldest dau. of Colonel Richard Butler, of Kilcash, co. Tipperary, (brother to James, 1st Duke of Ormonde,) and of Lady Frances Touchet, dau. to Mervyn, Earl of Castlehaven, by whom he was father of

I. LAURENCE.

II. Captain Richard, who m. Helen, 3rd dau. of Thomas Butler, of Kilcash, and of Lady Margaret de Burgh, dau. to William, Earl of Clanrickarde, and the widow of Bry Maginnes, Lord Iveagh. Captain Esmonde died of a wound accidentally received by the discharge of his fowling-piece in the hall of Huntingdon Castle, without issue; and his widow wedded 2ndly, Richard Butler, Esq. of Westcourt.

III. JOHN.

IV. WALTER.

The eldest son,

III. SIR LAURENCE, dying issueless, was s. by his next surviving brother,

IV. SIR JOHN, who d. without male issue, 1758, and was s. by his brother, EVELYN.

EVELYN, SIR HUGH, of Wotton Place, in the county of Surrey; b. 31 Jan. 1769; s. as 5th bart., upon the demise of his brother, 14 May, 1833.

Lineage.

This family flourished originally in the co. Salop, at a place now called Evelyn, but formerly written Avelyn and Ivelyn. From Shropshire it removed to Long Ditton, in Surrey; thence to Harrow-on-the-Hill, co. Middlesex, temp. HENRY IV.; and to Kingston, in Surrey, in the reign of HENRY VIII.

GEORGE EVELYN, Esq., the founder of this branch of the Evelyns, in Surrey, was the first person to bring the art of making gunpowder to perfection in England; and for the convenience of his works in the neighbourhood, purchased the estate at Wotton. This gentleman left, at his decease, six sons and two daus. Thomas, the eldest son, was father of Edward, of Long Ditton, who was created a Bart. in 1682; but dying without issue, in 1692, the dignity expired. John, the 2nd son, was father of John, of Gadstone, who was created a Bart. in 1660; but dying without issue, the honour ceased. He (John, the 2nd son) was also father of minister there, m. the only dau. of that gentleman, and, in her right, became possessed of Saye's Court, near Deptford, in Kent. After the Restoration, Mr. Evelyn was most graciously received at court; and upon the establishment of the Royal Society, about the close of the year 1662, he was appointed one of the first fellows and council thereof. In 1669, he was honoured with the degree of doctor of civil laws by the University of Oxford. After the Revolution, he was treasurer of Greenwich Hospital, and, though far advanced in years, wrote some pieces, and translated others, which will confer imperishable fame upon himself and his country. The period of this learned person's life and labours terminated almost together; as he d. soon after he had prepared the 4th edition of his "Silva" for the press, in the 86th year of his age, 27 Feb. 1705-6. Bishop Burnet styles him a most ingenious and virtuous gentleman; and informs us, that he was not satisfied to have advanced the knowledge of his age by his most useful labours, about planting and divers other ways, but he was ready to contribute everything in his power to perfect other men's endeavours. Mr. Evelyn was s. by his only surviving grandson, Brownlow-Thomas-Montague, b. 27 Feb. 1827.

Mary-Frances.

His lordship officiated as grand almoner at the coronation of his majesty GEORGE IV.

Lineage.

The surname of this noble family has been spelt at different periods, Sitsilt, Sicell, Seycil, Cyssel, and Cecil.

WILLIAM CECIL, b. at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, 18 Sept. 1520, (son and heir of Richard Cyssel, an officer of the court in attendance upon HENRY VIII., particularly at the celebrated interview between that monarch and FRANCIS, King of France, upon the field of the cloth of gold,) having attracted the attention and attained the subsequent favour of his sovereign, by a successful disputation with two intemperate chaplains of O'Neale, the Irish chieftain, on the power of the Roman pontiff, the king granted him a reversion of the office of custos-brevium; and from that period he resolved to pursue a political, rather than a forensic course, which latter he had originally intended to adopt, having entered himself at Gray's-Inn in 1541. In the reign of EDWARD VI., Mr. Cecil was appointed secretary of state, when he received the honour of knighthood, and was sworn of the privy-council. Under the rule of MARY, although a zealous reformist previously, Sir William, with the tact of the renowned churchman of Bray, doffed his protestant mantle, and conformed to the ancient faith; outwardly, saith his recent biographer, Dr. Nares; but certainly so far as engaging a catholic domestic chaplain, humbling himself at the confessional, and kneeling before the altar of the real presence, constitute such a conformation. This outward demonstration proved not to have been assumed in vain, for we find the wily politician enjoying again the sunshine of royal favour, and actually nominated with Lord Paget and Sir Edward Hastings, to conduct Cardinal Pole, then invested with a legate commission, into England. In this reign Cecil represented the co. of Lincoln in parliament. Immediately upon the accession of Elizabeth, however, (once more a stanch denouncer of popish errors,) the star of his fortune arose, and few statesmen have been guided through a more brilliant course. His first official employment was the resumption of the secretary-of-stateship, and in that so sensible was his royal mistress of his important services, that she elevated him to the peerage, by the title of Baron Burghley, in 1571, although at this period his private fortune does not appear to have been much advanced, for by a letter written by himself just after his elevation, he says, "that he is the poorest lord in England." A conspiracy was soon afterwards discovered against his life, and the two assassins, Barney and Matter, declared, at their execution, that they were instigated by the Spanish ambassador; for which, and other offences, his excellency was ordered to depart the kingdom. As a consolation for these perils, the secretary was honoured with the order of the Garter in June 1572; and in the Sept. following, at the decease of the Marquess of Winchester, appointed lord-high-treasurer. His lordship m. 1st, in 1561, Mary, sister of Sir John Cheke, tutor to Edw. VI., by whom he had an only son,

THOMAS, his successor.

His first lady dying after a short period, he m. 2ndly, in 1546, Mildred, dau. of Sir Anthony Coke, Knt. of Giddy Hall, co. Essex, by whom he had surviving issue,

ROBERT, who was created Earl of Salisbury. (See Marquess of Salisbury.)

Anne, Countess of Oxford.

Elizabeth, m. to William, eldest son of Lord Wentworth.

The last memorable act of the lord-treasurer's life was an attempt to bring about a peace with Spain, in which he was vehemently opposed by Essex, then in the fire of youth. The young soldier becoming heated in the debate, the venerable minister was induced to pull out a Prayer-Book, and point to the words, "Men of blood shall not live out half their lives." Burghley has been universally condemned for his participation in the destruction of the unhappy MARY of Scotland—and justly. The whole reign of MARY of England, darkly as it has been depicted, is not stained with a more atrocious deed than the murder of that interesting, lovely, and unfortunate woman. Of the manner of living adopted by this eminent person, we are informed that, suitable to his rank and the custom of the times, he kept up an extraordinary degree of splendour in his houses and gardens, and everything belonging to him. He had four places of residence—his lodgings at court, his house in the Strand, his family seat at Burghley, and his own favourite seat at Theobalds. At his house in London, he had fourscore persons in family, exclusively of those who attended him at court. His expenses there, as we have it from a person who lived many years in his family, were, £30 a-week in his absence, and between £40 and £50 when present. At Theobalds, he had thirty persons in his family; and, besides a constant allowance in charity, he directed £10 a-week to be laid out in keeping the poor at work in his gardens, &c. The expenses of his stables were a thousand marks a-year. He kept a standing table for gentlemen, and two other tables for persons of meaner condition, which were always served alike, whether he were in or out of town. Twelve times he entertained the queen at his house for several weeks together, at the expense of two or three thousand pounds each visit. At his decease he left about £4000 a-year in land, £11,000 in money, and invaluable effects about £14,000. His lordship d. 4 Aug. 1598, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR THOMAS FAIRFAX, of Walton, was created, in 1629, Viscount Fairfax, of Emeley, co. Tipperary, in the peerage of Ireland, a dignity that expired with Charles-Gregory, Viscount Fairfax, in 1772, when his estates eventually devolved on Charles-Gregory Pigott, who assumed the surname of Fairfax, and is the present CHARLES-GEORGE FAIRFAX, Esq. of Gilling Castle.

FERDINANDO, 2nd baron. This nobleman, at the beginning of the civil war, was the parliamentary general for York, and became eminently distinguished. After defeating the Earl of Newcastle, in 1642, Lord Byron, in 1643, and Col. Bellasis, whom he took prisoner, in April, 1644, at Selby, he had the chief command at the battle of Marston Moor, in the July of the same year, and there, defeating the royal army under Prince Rupert, he took possession of the city of York as governor. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Mary Sheffield, dau. of Edmund, 1st Earl of Mulgrave; and 2ndly, Rhoda, dau. and co-heir of Thomas Chapman, Esq. of London; by the former of whom he had three sons and six daus.,* and was s. at his decease, in 1647, by his eldest son and companion in arms,

THOMAS, 3rd baron; who had distinguished himself as a republican military leader, as "Sir Thomas Fairfax." He was a participator in the victory obtained by his father at Selby, and he commanded the right wing of the parliamentarians at Marston Moor. In the 34th year of his age he was appointed general-in-chief of the parliament's armies, and soon after routed the king at Naseby, retook Leicester, beat Col. Goring, took Bridgewater, Dartmouth, Bristol, defeated Lord Hopton, forced the Prince of Wales to retire into France, and then, reducing the entire of the west, drove the king from Oxford, in May, 1646; in which year he was made governor of the Tower of London. After succeeding to the barony, he reduced Colchester; but he took no part in the subsequent proceedings of the independents, and was entirely free of any participation in the death of the king. In 1650, he resigned the command of the army to CROMWELL; and, nine years afterwards, his lordship, coalescing with Monk, assisted zealously in restoring the monarchy, and was one of the commissioners deputed, upon that occasion, to the king. Soon after this event, Lord Fairfax represented the co. of York in parliament; but he passed the latter end of his life in rural retirement. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Sir Horatio Vere, Lord Vere, of Tilbury, by whom he had an only child, Mary, who m. George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham. He d. in 1671, when the barony devolved upon his cousin,

* Dorothy, one of the daus., m. Richard Hutton, Esq. of Popleton, Yorkshire.

I. THOMAS, his successor.

II. Henry-Colepepper, d. unm. in 1734.

III. ROBERT, who s. as 7th lord.

I. Margaret, m. to the Rev. David Wilkins, D.D., prebendary of Canterbury.

II. Frances, m. to Denny Martin, Esq.; and dying in 1791, left issue,

2 PHILIP MARTIN, lieut.-gen. in the army; who inherited from his brother Leeds Castle, and assumed the name of FAIRFAX. He d. unm. in 1821, when Leeds Castle passed to the representative of his aunt and heir-at-law, the present FIENNES-WYKEHAM MARTIN, Esq.

The baron was s. in 1710, by his eldest son,

THOMAS, 6th baron. This nobleman inherited from his mother a splendid fortune, consisting of several manors in Kent, estates in the Isle of Wight, and a tract of land in Virginia, called the Northernneck, comprised within the boundaries of the rivers Potowmack and Rappahanock, containing, by estimation, 5,700,000 acres. From his father he inherited Denton Hall and other property in Yorkshire, but he was obliged by his mother and grandmother to dispose of those in order to redeem the Colepepper manors. His lordship had a commission in the horse-guards, but visiting his American estates about the year 1739, he was so captivated with the soil, climate, and beauties of Virginia, that he resolved to spend the remainder of his life there; and he soon after erected two mansions, Belvoir and Greenway Court, where he continued ever afterwards to reside in a state of baronial hospitality. His dress was plain and simple, his manners modest and unaffected, and his style of living magnificent. Such was his generosity, that he gave up his English estates to his brother Robert, and the surplus of his American income was distributed among his poor neighbours. His principal amusement was hunting; and after the chase he was wont to invite the whole field to partake his hospitality. He had been educated in revolutionary principles, and had imbibed high notions of republican liberty. He was lieut. and custorotulorum of Frederick county, and presided at the provincial courts at Winchester, where, during the session, he kept an open table. His lordship d. unm., at Greenway Court, in 1782, when the title devolved upon his only surviving brother, ROBERT, 7th baron. This nobleman m. twice, but d. without issue, in 1793, when his Kentish property devolved upon his nephew, the Rev. Denny Martin, and the barony was claimed by the Rev. His lordship was created an English peer, 16 May, 1832. He is a lord-in-waiting to the queen, a privy-councillor, and a knight-grand-cross of the Guelphic order.

Lineage.

For the early descent of the Cary family, refer to BURKE'S Commoners, vol. ii. p. 33.

SIR JOHN CARY, Knt. of Cockington, co. Devon, a baron of the Exchequer in the reign of RICHARD II., left issue, JOHN, Bishop of Exeter in 1419, and an elder son, his heir,

SIR ROBERT CARY, Knt., who, among other feats of arms, vanquished an Arragonian knight in Smithfield, and as a reward for his valour, received the honour of knighthood, and the permission to adopt the armorial ensigns of his defeated rival; namely, on a bend, three roses. The gallant gentleman m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Powderham, co. Devon, and was s. by his son,

SIR PHILIP CARY, of Cockington, who m. Christian, dau. of William Orchard, Esq., and was father of

SIR WILLIAM CARY, Knt. of Cockington, who, fighting for the house of Lancaster at the battle of Tewkesbury, was taken prisoner in a church whither he had fled for sanctuary, and notwithstanding a promise of pardon, suffered decapitation. Sir William m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Paulet, and had a son,

By his 2nd wife, Alice, dau. of Sir Baldwin Fulford, Knt. of Fulford, Sir William left another son,

THOMAS CARY, Esq., who m. Margaret, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Sir Robert Spencer, by Eleanor, his wife, dau. of Edmund Beaufort, Duke of Somerset; by her he had two sons,

JOHN.

WILLIAM, who m. Mary Boleyn, sister of the unfortunate Queen Anne Boleyn and was ancestor of the Carys, Lords Hunsdon, and Earls of Dover; and of the Carys, Earls of Monmouth; for an account of whom see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.

The elder son,

SIR JOHN CARY, Knt., m. Joice, sister of Sir Anthony Denny, Knt., and left issue,

SIR EDWARD CARY, Knt. of Berkhamstead, master of the jewel-office to ELIZABETH, and JAMES I. This gentleman m. Catherine, dau. of Sir Henry Knaves, and widow of Henry, Lord Paget, by whom he had an only son,

SIR HENRY CARY, K.B., who was elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 19 Nov. 1620, as VISCOUNT FALKLAND. His lordship was constituted LORD-LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND in 1622, and continued in office seven years. He m. Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Sir Laurence Tanfield, chief-baron of the Exchequer, and had issue, LUCIUS, his successor.

Lawrence, killed fighting under Sir Charles Coote, when he defeated the Irish at Swords, in 1642.

Anne, m. to James, 2nd Earl of Home.

Amongst the papers of the viscount, who was a man of letters, was found, and printed in 1680, "The History of the most unfortunate Prince, EDWARD II., with choice political observations on him, and his unhappy favourites, Gaveston and Spencer." His lordship is remarkable for an invention to prevent the counterfeit of his signature—that of artfully concealing within the writing the successive years of his age. He d. in 1633, and was s. by his elder son, LUCIUS, 2nd viscount. This eminent person was born at Burford, about the year 1610, and carried by his father into Ireland when that nobleman was appointed lord-deputy, in 1662, where he received part of his education at Trinity College, Dublin; he was afterwards of St. John's College, Cambridge. At the age of nineteen, he inherited the fortune of his maternal grandfather, and thus became possessed of a landed estate of about £2000 per annum, with considerable personal property. His lordship, after the decease of his father, retired to his seat at Great Tew, and devoted himself entirely to literature. Previously to the breaking out of the civil wars, he was member of parliament for Newport, and a strenuous opponent of the court; but so soon as actual rebellion commenced he as strenuously supported the royal cause. He attended the king at Edgehill, at Oxford, and at the siege of Gloucester. But a view of the calamities brought upon his country, and the still greater impending evils, entirely broke down his lordship's spirits, and though no military man, he sought death as a relief in the field of battle. Frequently, when sitting amongst his friends, after a long silence and deep sighs, he would cry out with a shrill voice, "PEACE," declaring himself incapable of living in such a state of perpetual grief and anxiety. This extreme uneasiness seems to have hurried him on to destruction. Putting himself into the first rank of Lord Byron's regiment, at Newbury, 20 Sept. 1643, he received a musket-shot wound, and falling from his horse, his body was not found until the next morning. "Thus Falkland died, the generous and the just." Lord Clarendon, speaking of Falkland, says, that he was a person of such prodigious parts of learning and knowledge, and of that inimitable sweetness and delight in conversation, and of so flowing and obliging a humanity and goodness to mankind, and of that primitive simplicity and integrity of life, that, if there were no other brand upon the odious and accursed civil war than that single loss, it must be most infamous to all posterity.

"War, civil war, was raging like a flood,
England lay weltering in her own heart's blood;
Brother with brother waged unnatural strife,
Sever'd were all the charities of life;
Two passions—virtues they assumed to be—
Virtues they were—romantic loyalty
And stern unyielding patriotism—possess'd
Divided empire in the nation's breast,
As though two hearts should in one body reign,
And urge conflicting streams from vein to vein;
On either side the noblest spirits fought,
And highest deeds on either side were wrought;
Hamden in battle yesterday hath bled,
To-morrow Falkland joins the immortal dead;
The one for freedom perish'd—not in vain;
The other falls—a courtier without stain."*

His lordship at one time filled the office of secretary of state to CHARLES I. He m. Letitia, dau. of Richard Morrison, Esq. of Tooley Park, co. Leicester, and was s. by his eldest son,

HENRY, 3rd viscount. His lordship represented, after the Restoration, Arundel in parliament, and was nominated lord-lieutenant of the co. Oxford. He was committed to the Tower during the usurpation, upon suspicion of being concerned in Sir George Booth's rising for the restoration of CHARLES II. Lord Falkland was author of the "Marriage Night," a comedy. He espoused Margaret, dau. of Anthony Hungerford, Esq.; and dying in 1663, was s. by his eldest son,

ANTHONY, 4th viscount. This nobleman filled some high official situations during the reigns of CHARLES II. and WILLIAM III., but incurred the displeasure of the House of Commons, which resolved, 17 Jan. 1693-4, that Viscount Falkland, one of its members, by begging and receiving £2000 from his majesty, contrary to the ordinary method of issuing and bestowing the king's money, was guilty of a high misdemeanor and breach of trust, and that he be committed to the Tower. His lordship m. Rebecca, dau. of Sir Rowland Lytton, of Knebworth,

Lineage.

The very ancient and honourable family of Shirley has had the good fortune to have been illustrated by an historical narrative, compiled by a distinguished member of its own house. Sir Thomas Shirley, of Botolph's Bridge, co. Huntingdon, composed three distinct MS. histories of the Shirleys, all of which are preserved in the British Museum.

SIR RALPH DE SHIRLEY, in the 7th year of EDWARD I., held the manor of Eatendon, co. Warwick, of Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, the king's brother, by the service of two knights' fees. In the 28th of the same reign, he had the custodies of the cos. Salop and Stafford, with the castle of Shrewsbury, committed to his charge, and was sheriff of the cos. Derby and Nottingham in the 27th, 28th, and 30th, of the same king. In the 3rd EDWARD II., he was constituted one of the justices of the co. Warwick for the gaol delivery, and in two years afterwards was elected to parliament for that county. He m. Margaret, dau. and co-heir of Walter de Waldeshief, of Fuirfield, co. Derby, cup-bearer to EDWARD II.; and dying in 1327, was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS SHIRLEY, Knt., M.P. for the co. Warwick in the 14th year of EDWARD III. This Sir Thomas is said to be "the great founder of the family of Shirleys, famous in his time for his valour, and for the many services, &c. rendered to the Kings of England against the French." He m. Isabel, grandau. of Ralph, Lord Basset, of Drayton, and eventually heir of her brother Ralph, the last Lord Basset of that line, (since whose decease that barony has been in abeyance,—see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage;) and dying in 1362, was s. by his son,

SIR HUGH SHIRLEY, Knt., who s. also to the estates of his uncle, Lord Basset, of Drayton. This gentleman was made grand-falconer to HENRY IV., in 1400, and he was killed fighting on the side of the same monarch at the battle of Shrewsbury, being one of those who were habited as the king, and taken for him by the opposite party. He

Lineage.

This family is of Saxon origin, and was seated at Fetherston, in Northumberland, before the Conquest; that part of the county having been allotted to its progenitor, a Saxon officer, for his gallant conduct against the Britons.

The surname is said to have been thus derived:—The house in which the family resided was formerly upon a hill, (where were two stones, called fether stones,) and was moated round as a barrier against the Scots; but upon being destroyed, a new edifice was erected in the holme, or valley, under the hill, which valley was locally denominated a haugh, and thence the appellation of "Fetherstonhaugh."

The family of Fetherstonhaugh was first raised to the dignity of Bart. in 1660, in the person of HENEAGE, grandson of CUTHBERT FETHERSTONE, of Hathery Clough, in the parish of Stanhope, co. Durham, who settled in London towards the latter end of the 16th century. The honour, however, expired with his last surviving son and heir,

SIR HENRY FETHERSTONHAUGH, who enjoined his heir-at-law to obtain a revival of the same; which heir, FIFE.

FIFE, EARL OF, (James Duff, K.T., G.C.H.) Viscount Macduff and Baron Braco, of Kilbryde, co. Cavan, in the peerage of Ireland; Baron Fife, in the peerage of the United Kingdom; lord-lieut. of the co. Banff, a lord of the bedchamber, knight of the Spanish order of St. Ferdinand; s. to the Irish honours, upon the demise of his father, 17 April, 1811, and obtained the Barony of the Empire, by patent of creation, dated 27 April, 1827. His lordship m. 1799, Mary-Caroline, 2nd dau. of John Manners, Esq., and Louisa, Countess of Dysart, by whom (who d. 20 Dec. 1805) he had no issue. The earl distinguished himself during the Peninsular war, having volunteered his services, and obtained the rank of major-gen. in the Spanish patriotic army; he was wounded at the battle of Talavera, and again at the storming of Fort Matagorda, near Cadiz.

Lineage.

This noble family derives from FYFE MACDUFF, a chieftain of great wealth and power, who lived about the year 834, and who afforded to KENNETH II., King of Scotland, strong aid against his enemies the Picts. In reward of these services, Macduff received from the monarch a grant of all the lands then called Othelinia, which he himself had conquered from the Picts, and which extended from Fifeness to Clackmannan, from east to west, and from the river Forth, on the south, to the rivers Tay and Erne, on the north. Of that tract of land, which he called Fife, Macduff was appointed hereditary thane. The 8th in descent from him was the

MACDUFF, with whom the genius of Shakspeare has made the world familiar. This powerful thane having mainly contributed to the destruction of the usurper MACBETH, and to the restoration of MALCOLM CEANMOHR, the latter king confirmed to him his co. of Fife, of which he created him earl in 1061. The 13th earl,

DUNCAN, dying in 1353, without issue male, the earldom became extinct. His descendant, however, DAVID DUFF, received, in 1401, from ROBERT III., a grant of considerable lands, and of the Barony of Muldavit, which continued to be one of the chief titles of the family, until alienated in the beginning of the reign of CHARLES II. The descendant of David Duff, WILLIAM DUFF, Esq., was elevated to the peerage of Ireland, by the Queen Regent CAROLINE, as Baron Braco, of Kilbryde, 28 July, 1735; and advanced to a viscounty and earldom, 26 April, 1759, by the titles of Viscount Mac Duff and EARL OF FIFE. Henrietta-Maria.

His lordship s. his father, as 9th earl, 30 July, 1836. He is a privy-councillor in Ireland, and one of the lords-in-waiting to the queen.

Lineage.

This noble family is of Danish origin, but its settlement in Ireland is so remote that nothing certain can be ascertained as to the precise period. So early as the 11th century, we find

JOHN PLUNKET was seated at Beaulieu, or Bewley, co. Meath, the constant residence of the elder branch of his descendants. The successor at Bewley, in the beginning of the 13th century,

JOHN PLUNKET, living temp. HENRY III., had two sons; John, ancestor of the Lords Louth, and

RICHARD PLUNKET, of Rathregan, co. Meath, who, with his son and heir, RICHARD PLUNKET, by royal writs of parliamentary summons, was summoned to, and sat in, the parliaments and great council of 1374; the one as a baron, and the other "de concilio regis." To the same parliament and council was also summoned as a baron, "Waltero de Cusake Militi," Lord of Killeen, whose heir general afterwards, as wife of Christopher Plunket, was heretofore thought to have first brought the dignity of a parliamentary barony into this branch of the Plunket family, but how erroneously may best be seen by reference to the writs of summons* of the 48th of EDWARD III., before alluded to. The younger Richard Plunket was father of

SIR CHRISTOPHER PLUNKET, Knt. This gentleman, as a recompence for the services he had rendered in the wars of Ireland, and an indemnity for the expenses he had incurred, had a grant of a sum of money from HENRY VI., in 1426; before which time he was sheriff of Meath; and in 1432, was deputy to Sir Thomas Stanley, Knt., lord-

* The writs of summons, as taken from the ancient close rolls in Ireland, will be found in a recent legal work on Irish titles—"Cases illustrative of the Law and Usage of the Prescriptive Baronies of Ireland, as distinguished from the law of baronies by writ peculiar to England, by William Lynch, Esq., barrister-at-law. Sweet, Chancery Lane, 1835.

lieutenant of Ireland. Sir Christopher m. in 1403, Joan, only dau. and heir of Sir Lucas Cusac, Knt., Lord of Killeen, Dunsany, and Gerardston, co. Meath, and became, in her right, proprietor of the Barony of Killeen. He d. in 1445, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN PLUNKET, 2nd Lord of Killeen, who was s. by his son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER PLUNKET, (who in an act of parliament, 27th HENRY VI., is called "Christofre Plunket le puisne Seigneur de Killeen,") 3rd Lord of Killeen. This feudal lord m. twice: 1st, Genet, dau. of Bellew, of Bellewstown, by whom he had two sons; the younger of whom, Broughton, fell at the battle of Stoke, in 1487, fighting for Lambert Simnel. Sir Christopher espoused 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William Wells, lord-chancellor of Ireland, by his wife, a dau. of Barnewall, of Crickston; by whom (who was m. 2ndly, to John Fleming, of New-castle, Lord Slane) he had a dau., who m. Nicholas, 16th Baron of Howth, and two sons. Sir Christopher d. in 1487, and was s. by his elder son,

CHRISTOPHER PLUNKET, 4th Lord of Killeen; who had summons to parliament in 1463, and is called in a statute of that year, "Christofre Plunket, Esquier, Fitz and Heire de Christofre Plunket, Chevalier, Jadetz Seigneur de Killeen." He d. without issue, and was s. by his brother and heir male,

EDMUND, Lord of Killeen, whose titles and descent are set forth in a statute of the year 1470, and who is styled, in the roll bearing date 1481, as Edmundus Plunket, Dominus de Killeen. He had issue a son and heir,

SIR JOHN PLUNKET, Lord of Killeen, who was sworn of the privy-council to HENRY VIII., and was found by inquisition to have had four sons,

Patrick, his heir, who d. s. p.

Henry, who d. s. p.

James.

The second son,

CHRISTOPHER PLUNKET, who s. to the titles and estates, as heir to his brother Patrick, was an active and gallant nobleman, who discharged many high functions and commissions under the royal authority. He sat in the parliament of 1509, and having married the grandau. of the Baron of Slane, left issue, three daus., his co-heirs, Maude, m. to the Baron of Louth.

Margaret, m. to Nicholas Aylmer, Esq. of Dullardston.

Christopher was s. by his brother and heir male,

JAMES PLUNKET, Lord Killeen, whose inheritance of the ancient family dignity was not opposed or questioned by the daus., co-heirs of his deceased brother, and he took his place in the House of Peers, in the year 1585. On the 15 April, 1589, he enfeoffed trustees in his family estates, and was s. at his decease by his son and heir,

CHRISTOPHER PLUNKET, Baron of Killeen, when aged 31, who sat in the parliament of 1613; and dying soon after, was s. by his eldest son,

LUCAS, the 10th lord, styled Lucas More. This nobleman had a large grant of territory in 1613, and was created EARL OF FINGALL, 26 Sept. 1628, JAMES I. precluding the honour by a most flattering letter, dated Westminster, 28 June in that year, beginning thus:—"That having received good testimonies of the virtuous and many good parts of his right trusty and well-beloved subject, the Lord Baron Killeen, being one of the ancient nobility of Ireland, his majesty was pleased," &c. &c. His lordship m. four times, and had issue by his 2nd marriage with Susannah, 5th dau. of Edward, Lord Brabazon (only), of which,

CHRISTOPHER, the eldest son, succeeded to the honours. George, the 4th son, a capt. of foot at the siege of Drogheda, in 1641, and afterwards colonel in the rebel army. He m. Cicely, dau. of Sir William Hill, of Allenston, co. Meath, and had,

JAMES, who m. 1st, Catherine, dau. of Edward Plunket, of Loughcrew, and niece of Oliver Plunket, Titular Primate of all Ireland, in 1681, a clergyman of great virtues and ability, who fell a victim to the times in which he lived, being most unjustly executed in 1681, as one of the conspirators in the pretended popish plot. By this lady he had a dau., Mary, m. to William O'Mara. He m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Robert Cusack, Esq. of Jerriestown, co. Meath, and had, with other issue,

ROBERT, who s. as 6th earl.

His lordship d. in 1637, and was s. by his eldest son,

CHRISTOPHER, 2nd earl. This nobleman having been made prisoner at the battle of Rathmines, d. in the Castle of Dublin fourteen days afterwards, A.D. 1649, and was s. by his son, (by Mabell, dau. of Nicholas, Viscount Kingsland,)

LUKE, 3rd earl; who was restored to his estates and honours, by the court of Claims, and was s. at his decease by his only son,

PETER, 4th earl. This nobleman was outlawed by the name of Luke, in 1691, for his loyalty to his legitimate sovereign JAMES II., but the outlawry was reversed in six years afterwards, A.D. 1697. His lordship m. Frances, 3rd dau. of Sir Edward Hales, Bart.; and dying 24 Jan. 1717, left issue,

JUSTIN, his successor.

Margaret, m. to J. Nugent, Esq. of Coolamber.

Mary, m. to Maurice O'Conner, Esq. of Mount Pleasant, King's co.

His lordship was s. by his only son,

JUSTIN, 5th earl; who d. in 1733, without issue, and intestate, and was s. in his titles and estates by his cousin and heir male,

ROBERT, 6th earl, (refer to George, 2nd son of Lucas, 1st earl;) who enjoyed the honours without opposition or question on the part of the three daus. and heirs lineal of Peter, 4th earl. In about a century afterwards, however, the grandson of the youngest dau., Maurice O'Connor, Esq., made claim to the Barony of Killeen, as a barony created by writ, and as such inheritable through females. Like all other claims of the same nature, it has been unsuccessful, though brought forward at a time when the feelings of the Irish government were violently excited against the Earl of Fingall. Robert, 6th Earl of Fingall, was a captain in Berwick's regiment, in the service of France. He m. Mary, dau. of Roger Mageniz, Esq.; and dying in 1738, was s. by his eldest son,

ARTHUR-JAMES, 7th earl, then in his seventh year. His lordship m. in 1755, Henrietta-Maria, only dau. and heir of William Woolascot,* Esq. of Wolhampton, co. Berks, by whom (who d. 12 March, 1806) he had issue,

ARTHUR-JAMES, his heir.

Luke, a capt. in the Austrian service; killed at Alexandria, in Italy, in 1794.

Robert, b. 15 Sept. 1765; and d. unm. in 1823.

William, b. in 1770; a col. in the Austrian service; d. at Prague, in 1806.

Theresa, m. to the late James Dease, Esq. of Turbotstown, co. Westmeath, and has, with other children, Gerald Dease, Esq. of Turbotstown.

His lordship d. 21 Aug. 1793, and was s. by his son,

ARTHUR-JAMES, 8th earl, K.P., b. 9 Sept. 1759; who was created a peer of the United Kingdom, 20 June, 1831, by the title of Baron Fingall, of Wolhampton-lodge, co. Berks. He m. 18 Dec. 1785, Frances, only dau. of John Donnelan, Esq. of Bally Donnelan, in the co. Galway, by whom (who d. 30 Jan. 1835) he had issue,

ARTHUR-JAMES, present earl.

Harriet, m. 11 Sept. 1817, to John Jones, Esq. of Llanarth Court, in the co. of Monmouth. (See BURKE'S History of the Commons, vol. iv. p. 727.)

His lordship d. 20 July, 1836.

* William Woolascot is supposed by the Rev. Thomas Wharton, in his "History and Antiquities of Kiddington," to be of the same family as the Wellescots, or Welleumscots, who formerly held that manor. "Of the name of Wellescote, corrupted from Welleumscott, there is," says Mr. Wharton, "a family seated at Woolhampton, near Newbury, in Berkshire. They write Woollascote. The last heiress, as I apprehend, intermarried with the Earl of Fingall, an Irish peer, within these last twenty years (1733), who is now living in that place."

Lineage.

In 1565, Hugh Fitz William, Esq. of Sprotburgh, co. York, collected the records of his family, and from these records the following particulars are partly deduced:—

SIR WILLIAM FITZ GODRIC, cousin to KING EDWARD the Confessor, left a son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, who, being ambassador at the court of WILLIAM, Duke of Normandy, attended that prince in his victorious expedition against England, as marshal of the army, A.D. 1066; and for his valour at the battle of Hastings, the CONQUEROR presented him with a scarf from his own arm. This Sir William was father of

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, Knt., who m. Eleanor, dau. and heir of Sir John Elmley, of Elmley and Sprotburgh, by which marriage the Fitzwilliams obtained the lordships of Elmley and Sprotborough, which continued with them until the reign of HENRY VIII., when those lordships were carried, by co-heirs, into the families of Suthill and Copley. Sir William was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, Lord of Elmley and Sprotburgh, living in 1117, as appears from a grant made by him of a piece of the wood in Elmley to the monks of Piland. To this grant, in a round seal, is represented a man on horseback, completely armed, and circumscribed, S. Willmi Filiū Willmi Dni de Emmalaia; and on the reverse, the arms of Fitzwilliam; viz., Lozenge. This Sir William, or one of his descendants, caused a cross to be set up in the high street of Sprotborough, with these words engraven on brass:—

“Whoso is hungry, and list, will eate,
 Let him come to Sprotburgh to his meate;
 And for a night, and for a day,
 His horse shall have both corn and hay,
 And no man shall ask him where he goeth away.”

Which cross was pulled down in 1520. From this Sir William we pass to his descendant,

SIR JOHN FITZWILLIAM, who founded, in 1372, the Chantry of St. Edward, in the church of Sprotburgh; and having m. Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Clinton, had three sons, the eldest of whom,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, m. Maud, dau. of Ralph, Lord Cromwell, of Tattershall, and co-heir of the Lord-Treasurer Cromwell, by whom he had one son and two daus., and was s. by the former,

SIR JOHN FITZWILLIAM, who m. Eleanor, dau. of Sir Henry Green, of Drayton, and had six sons and a dau. The youngest son,

JOHN FITZWILLIAM, Esq. of Milton and Green's-Norton, in Northamptonshire, m. Eleanor, dau. of William Villers, Esq. of Brokesby, co. Leicester, by whom he had three sons and two daus., and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, of Milton and Gainspark, co. Essex, and also of the city of London, of which he was sheriff in 1506, and subsequently alderman of Bread-street Ward. He had been for some time in the train of Cardinal Wolsey, and retiring afterwards to his house at Milton, there gave his old master, the cardinal, in the hour of his disgrace, a kind reception; for which conduct, being brought to task by KING HENRY, he replied, that he had not acted in contemptuous disobedience of his highness's orders, but in gratitude to the fallen minister, who had been his master, and partly the founder of his good fortune: at which answer the king was so pleased, that he immediately knighted Mr. Fitzwilliam, and made him one of his privy-council. Sir William m. 1st, Anne, dau. of Sir John Hawes, Knt. of the city of London, and had,

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, who was lord-deputy and lord-justice of Ireland, from 1560 to 1594. This eminent person is thus noticed by Fuller, in his Worthies of England:—“Sir William Fitzwilliam was five times lord-deputy of Ireland, a sufficient evidence of his honesty and ability, QUEEN ELIZABETH never trusting twice where she was once deceived in a minister of state. And she also preserved him in the power of his place, that sending over Walter, Earl of Essex, to be governor of Ulster, the earl was ordered to take his commission from the lord-deputy.” Sir William m. Anne, dau. of Sir William Sydney, and aunt of the 1st Earl of Leicester, and had issue,

ALEXANDER DE FORBES, a man of great personal valour, lost his life in defence of the castle of Urquhart, in Murray, against EDWARD I. The fortress was taken by storm, after a gallant resistance, and the whole garrison put to the sword, none escaping but the wife of the governor, who fled into Ireland, and there gave birth soon afterwards to a son, ALEXANDER FORBES, who returned to Scotland, and attaching himself to the fortunes of KING ROBERT BRUCE, obtained grants of land equivalent to those of which his father had been despoiled. He fell at the battle of Duplin, in 1332, and was s. by his son,

FORBES.

FORBES, SIR JOHN, of Craigievar Castle, co. Aberdeen; b. 2 July, 1785; s. as 6th bart., at the decease of his father, 15 Feb. 1816; m. 15 Sept. 1825, Charlotte-Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of the Rt. Hon. Gen. Lord Forbes, by whom he has a son, b. 8 Aug. 1829, and two daus.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the noble house of Forbes, Lords Forbes, springing from

The HON. PATRICK FORBES, of Corse, (armour-bearer, by charter, dated 13 Oct. 1482, to JAMES III.,) 3rd son of James, 2nd Lord Forbes, by Lady Egidia Keith, dau. of William, 1st Earl Marischal. This Patrick was father of

DAVID FORBES, Esq., Laird of Corse, whose great-grandson,

The RT. REV. PATRICK FORBES, of Corse, was for seventeen years Bishop of Aberdeen, and a distinguished ornament of the reformed church. His lordship d. 1635, and his male line failing with his grandchildren, the representation of the family reverted to the descendants of his brother,

WILLIAM FORBES, Esq. This gentleman having realized a large fortune by commercial pursuits at Dantzic, purchased the unfinished castle of Craigyvar, from the family of Mortimer, and having completed the structure in a splendid manner, furnished it after the most sumptuous fashion of the period, A.D. 1626, and took his designation therefrom. The castle is seven stories high, and though not inhabited, is still kept in good repair. The name of Craigyvar, or, in Gaelic, "Creg a Mhar," means the rock of Mer; and the place from tradition derives considerable interest. In its immediate vicinity are two or three long trenches on the top of the hill of Corse, supposed to be a camp or fortification of Macbeth; and near this there are a great number of small tumuli, now overgrown with short heath, the last memorials of those who fell, "when Birnim Wood came to Dunsinane." At a small distance from these, and upon the same hill, the spot is shewn where Macduff killed Macbeth; and there is still a large cairn called Macbeth's, in which ancient arms were found some years ago. This William Forbes m. Margaret Udward, dau. of the lord-provost of Edinburgh, and was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

I. WILLIAM FORBES, Esq. of Craigyvar, who was created a Bart. of Nova Scotia, 20 April, 1639. Sir William appears to have engaged on the side of the parliamentarians during the civil commotions. In 1641, he was appointed by the republicans one of the commissioners for planting kirks; in 1645, one of the committee of estates; in 1646, one of the commissioners for selling malignants' estates; and in 1647, sheriff of Aberdeen. He m. Bethia, dau. of Sir Archibald Murray, of Blackbarony, and was s. by his eldest son,

Lineage.

This noble family deduces its origin from Sir Richard le Forte, a distinguished soldier in the invading army of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, who protected his royal master, at the celebrated battle of Hastings, by bearing a strong shield before him; from which event the French word "escue" (a shield) was added to the original surname of "Forte," and thus Fortescue produced. The son of this gallant warrior,

SIR ADAM FORTESCUE, Knt., being also a commanding-officer in the same conflict, obtained from the successful monarch a grant of Wimondeston, or, as it is now written, Winston, co. Devon, of which he became lord. The descendant of this Sir Adam,

WILLIAM FORTESCUE, m. Elizabeth, sister and co-heir of Thomas Beauchamp, of Ryme, co. Dorset, and widow of Richard Branscomb, by whom he left two sons,

Sir John was esteemed a very eminent lawyer, and was the author of a celebrated treatise, entitled, "De Laudibus Legum Angliæ," in which he calls himself Cancellarius Angliæ. FOULIS, SIR JAMES, of Colinton, co. John.

Agnes.

Jane.

Sir James s. to the honours of the family, upon the demise of his kinsman, Sir James Foulis, in 1825, and is the 7th Bart. of Colinton.

Lineage.

It is universally admitted that the surname of Foulis is of Norman origin. The progenitor of the family came into England either at or before the Conquest, and his armorial bearings being three leaves, called feuilles, in the old Norman, it is certain that the name was either given to the family whilst residing in South Britain, or else assumed by the individual who first took up his abode in Scotland, in the reign of MALCOLM CAN-MOHR, when surnames were for the first time adopted.

JAMES FOULIS, Esq. of Colinton, living temp. QUEEN MARY, and JAMES VI., of Scotland, m. Agnes Heriot, heir of Lumphoy, and had four sons,

JAMES, his successor.

George, progenitor of the Ravelston family.

John, of Leadhills, whose grandau., Anne, heir of Leadhills, m. Sir James Hope, of Hopetoun, from whom the Earls of Hopetoun descend.

SIR JAMES FOULIS, Knt. This gentleman m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Lauder, of Hatton, and left, with a dau., Margaret, wife of Louis Dick, Esq., an only son,

I. ALEXANDER FOULIS, Esq., who was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever, 7 June, 1634. Sir Alexander m. Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Hepburn, Esq. of Ford, great-grandau. of the Earl of Bothwell, and relict of the great sheriff of Bute, (by whom she had a son, the progenitor of the Marquess of Bute.) By this lady Sir Alexander had one dau., who was m. to the first Earl of Haddington, and an only son, his successor,

II. SIR JAMES. This gentleman had the honour of knighthood conferred upon him during the lifetime of his father, and was actively engaged in the unfortunate warfare which ravaged Scotland after the death of KING CHARLES I. Having, along with others, attended a convention of the committee of estates, at Elliot, in Angus, he was betrayed into the hands of the English, and with his companions, the Earls of Leven, Crawford, Marischal, Lord Ogilvy, and several gentlemen of rank, surprised on Thursday morning, 28 Aug. 1651, by a squadron of dragoons, commanded by Col. Aldridge, who carried the whole party to Brugty, and consigned them thence in a vessel to London. After the restoration of the monarchy, Sir James was constituted, in 1661, one of the senators of the College of Justice, and in 1684, appointed lord-chief-justice-clerk, which high offices he held under the titular designation of Lord Colinton. His lordship m. Barbara, dau. of Alexander Ainslie, Esq. of Dolphington, by whom he had two sons. He d. 19 Jan. 1618, and was s. by the elder,

III. SIR JAMES, a lord of Session, privy-councillor, and member of the last Scottish parliament, in 1706, at which time he joined the Duke of Hamilton, and Atholl, and many others of the nobility and gentry, in their celebrated protest, made by Lord Errol, the earl mareschal, respecting the most constitutional military defence of the house of legislature. He also joined in the protest which declared that an incorporating union of the two nations was inconsistent with the honour of Scotland. Sir James had subsequently a seat in the first British parliament. He m. Margaret, dau. of John Boyd, Esq., dean of the Guild of Edinburgh, descended of the family of Kilmarnock, by whom he had seven sons, of whom six died s. p. Sir James d. in 1711, and was s. by his eldest son,

IV. SIR JAMES; at whose decease unm. in 1742, the title devolved upon his nephew,

V. SIR JAMES, eldest and only surviving son of Henry Foulis, Esq., (3rd son of Sir James, the 3rd bart.,) by Jean, dau. of James Foulis, Esq., merchant in Edinburgh, and niece of Sir John Foulis, Bart. of Ravelston, (so created in 1661.) This gentleman m. Mary, dau. of Archibald Wightman, by whom he had two sons and three daus., and was s. at his decease, in Jan. 1791, by his only surviving son,

VI. SIR JAMES. This gentleman m. twice: 1st, a Spanish lady; and 2ndly, Miss Dallas; but having no issue, the title devolved upon his kinsman, JAMES FOULIS, Esq. of Woodhall, the present bart., great-great-grandson of Sir John Foulis, Bart. of Ravelston; which Sir John was cousin of the 1st Bart. of Colinton. The present Sir James represents, therefore, the house of Colinton, Woodhall, and Ravelston. The second Bart. of Ravelston (who was son of the 1st baronet's eldest son, George-Primrose Foulis, Esq., by whom the lands of Dunhaec were inherited in right of his mother, Margaret, dowager of Sir Archibald-Primrose, and mother of the 1st Earl of Rosebery) bore the designation of Sir Archibald Primrose, of Ravelston; which Sir Archibald m. his cousin, Lady Mary Primrose, dau. of the 1st Earl of Rosebery, and had an

Lineage.

The noble and ancient family of Morres, or Morries, descended from the ducal house of Montmorency, (of which this is a branch,) came into England with the Norman CONQUEROR, and having obtained a grant of lands in the principality of Wales, soon after settled in the Isle of Anglesey.

HERVEY DE MONTE MARISCOE, the nephew of Richard, Earl Strongbow, accompanied his uncle in the expedition to Ireland, and obtained considerable territorial grants in the counties of Wexford, Tipperary, and Kerry, some of which still remain in the possession of the family, but the great part has been carried by intermarriages into the houses of Leinster and Ormonde. From this Hervey descended

SIR JOHN MORRES, Bart. of Knocagh, co. Tipperary, whose grandson,

HERVEY MORRES, Esq., settled in the co. Kilkenny, upon lands obtained from CROMWELL, and through his influence with the usurper (into whose service he had entered) preserved the property of his elder brother from confiscation. After the Restoration, Mr. Morres had the Cromwellian grant confirmed by CHARLES II., and erected into the manor of Castlemorres, with ample privileges attached. This gentleman m. thrice, and left, by his last wife, Frances, dau. of the Hon. Pierce Butler, (son of Lord Viscount Galmoye,) an only son,

Lineage.

This family is undoubtedly of great antiquity in the co. of York, where it is probable it first settled at the time of the Conquest: soon after that event, we find the Norman names of Julian, Sigga, Gilbert, William, and Robert Frankland, or Franckland, attached to grants of lands to the abbeys and priories of Coutin-North, Carleton, near Thirsk, and to several other places in the co. of York. WILLIAM FRANKLAND, of Rye, in Hertfordshire, acquired a considerable fortune in trade as a clothworker, and was one of the principal persons who, in 1530, obtained a charter for the incorporation of the Clothiers' Company. He d. in 1570, leaving all his wealth to his brother,

In consequence, with real or pretended fury, they plundered and slew Mr. Frankland, and every other European they could find.

Lineage.

The family of Gage, which is of Norman extraction, derives its descent from De Gaga, Guage, or Gage, who accompanied WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR into England, and was rewarded with large grants of land in the Forest of Dean, and the co. Gloucester; adjacent to which forest he fixed his abode, and erected a seat at Clerenwell, otherwise Clurewell; he also built a large mansion-house in the town of Cirencester, where he died, and was buried in the abbey there. The ancestor of the present Lord Gage,

JOHN GAGE, whose name is found in deeds temp. HENRY IV., and who was lineally descended from the Norman, left a son,

JOHN GAGE, who m. Joan, dau. and co-heir of John Sudgrove, of Sudgrove, co. Gloucester. The son and successor of this John,

SIR JOHN GAGE, Knt., made great additions to his estate by purchases, and, further, by marrying Eleanor, dau. and heir of Thomas St. Clerc, Esq., lord of the manor of Aston Clinton, co. Bucks. By this lady he had two sons, WILLIAM, his heir, and John, ancestor of the Gages of Rushton, Northamptonshire. The elder,

WILLIAM GAGE, who resided at Bristow, in Surrey, m. Agnes, dau. of Thomas Bolney, Esq.; and d. in 1496, leaving a son and successor,

SIR JOHN GAGE, Knt., a distinguished soldier and statesman, in the reigns of HENRY VIII., EDWARD VI., and QUEEN MARY, whose services are thus detailed in an ancient MS., written by his 3rd son, Robert Gage, of Haling, co. Surrey:—

“Sir John Gage, Knt., who was, after his father’s death, in ward to W. Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; and after his marriage to my mother, dau. of Sir Richard Guldeford, was preferred by the said duke to HEN. VIII.’s service, and distinguishing himself at the siege of Trevon, was thereupon made captain of the castle of Calais, (usually called Gusynes,) shortly after was sent for home, and knighted, and made of the privy-council, vice-chamberlain, and captain of the guards; few years after, for services done on the borders of Scotland, at his return, was made comptroller of the household, and chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, in one day. In a few days after, he was made constable of the Tower of London, and the next St. George’s feast, knight of the most noble order of the Garter; at the winning of Bullogne, (36th HEN. VIII.,) he was in joint commission with Charles, Duke of Suffolk, lord-lieutenant of his majesty’s camp, and for sundry services there with Sir Anthony Brown, Knt., master of the horse, was made general captain of the bands of horsemen. After the death of our sovereign lord EDWARD VI., at the coming of QUEEN MARY, was made her lord-chamberlain. Thus, having served in all these rooms and offices, truly, faithfully, and painfully, from the 1st year of our sovereign lord HENRY VIII., of famous memory, unto the 5th year of QUEEN MARY, untouched with any reproach, or unfaithful service, at this time, being 77 years of age, he ended his life, in favour with his prince, at his own house, at Firle, in Sussex.”

Lineage.

This very ancient family springs from a common ancestor with the Dukes of Leinster in Ireland, and the Earls of Plymouth in England; namely,

OTHO, or OTHER, a rich and powerful lord, temp. KING ALFRED, descended from the Dukes of Tuscany. According to Sir William Dugdale, this Otho was a baron of England in the 16th of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, and was father of

WALTER FITZOTHO, or FITZOTHER, who, at the general survey of the kingdom, in 1078, was castellan of Windsor, and appointed by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR warden of the forests in Berkshire. This Walter left three sons,—Robert, the 2nd son, was Baron of Eston, or Estaines, in Essex, which barony continued with his descendants until purchased by Sir Henry Maynard, temp. QUEEN ELIZABETH, and it now gives title to Sir Henry's descendant, Lord Maynard, of Estaines. William, the youngest son, was ancestor of the Lords Windsor; from which lords descended the Earls of Plymouth; and the eldest son,

GERALD, OR GERARD, generally surnamed Fitzwalter, having m. Nesta, dau. of Rees, son of Theodore the Great, Prince of South Wales, had three sons, viz.,

WILLIAM FITZGERALD, of the Castle of Kerrin, in Carmarthenshire, d. 1173, and left

This nobleman was outlawed in 1691, for his adhesion to JAMES II., and suffered much privation in consequence, having had his estates for sometime laid waste, and afterwards seized upon by the crown. Nichola, m. to Robert French, Esq. of Monivae Castle, co. Galway.

Richard-Grace Gamon, M.P. of Minchenden co. Middlesex, 8 April, 1818, and is the 2nd bart.

Lineage.

This family deduces its descent from

RAYMOND FITZWILLIAM, or LE GROS, 2nd son of William Fitzgerald, or de Carew, who was eldest son of Gerald Fitzwalter, or de Windsor, 3rd son of Baron Walter Fitz-Other, governor of Windsor Castle in 1080. This Raymond was one of the most powerful barons who, with Richard de Clare, surnamed Strongbow, achieved the conquest of Ireland, of which kingdom he, the said Raymond, became viceroy, in 1176, and commander of the English forces there. By his marriage with Basilia, dau. of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Pembroke, and sister of Earl Strongbow, he acquired the extensive district in the co. Kilkenny, still denominated the "cantred of Grace's country." From the 2nd son of this marriage, Maurice Fitz-Raymond, Lord of Lixnau and Clanmaurice, the noble house of Fitzmaurice derives, while from the eldest,

WILLIAM LE GROS, or FITZ-RAYMOND, Lord of Lerc-ton, descended (the 12th in succession)

SIR JOHN LE GROS, (surnamed crios iaram, the iron belted,) Baron of Courtstown, and Lord of Grace's country, living in 1520 and 1534, who m. Catharine, dau. of Pierce, Lord le Poer, of Curraghmore, co. Waterford, and had two sons, John, Baron of Courtstown and Lord of Grace's country, M.P. for the co. Kilkenny, in 1568. This line terminated in 1764, on the death of Robert, only son of John, the last Baron of Courtstown, whose adherence to JAMES II. occasioned the forfeiture of 32,870 acres of land, which had been in the possession of his ancestors for 530 years.

And

SIR OLIVER GRACE, (surnamed ciallmhar, the wise,) of Ballylinch and Legan Castles, co. Sir Robert is one of the claimants to the Earldom of Annandale and Hartfell, as descendant of Sir George Graham and Lady Mary Johnston, (see note.)

Lineage.

This family claims descent from the renowned GRAEME, who, anno 404, commanded KING FERDUS THE SECOND'S army, and was governor of Scotland in the minority of his grandchild, EUGENE II. In the year 420, this gallant person made a breach in the mighty wall which the EMPEROR SEVERUS had erected between the rivers Forth and Clyde, which has ever since borne the name of GRAEME'S DYKE. From the time of this eminent man the GRAEMES are to be found in the records of Scotland, enjoying the very highest influence; but our limits prohibit individual detail; we therefore pass to

SIR DAVID GRAHAM, of Montrose, who was taken prisoner with KING DAVID BRUCE, at the battle of Durham, in 1346, and whose son,

SIR PATRICK GRAHAM, Lord of Dundaff and Kincardine, was appointed one of the hostages for the said KING DAVID'S ransom, in 1357. This Sir Patrick m. twice: from his 1st marriage descend the Dukes of Montrose; and of the 2nd (with Eupheme, dau. of Sir John Stewart, of Railston, brother to KING ROBERT II.) there was a son,

SIR ROBERT GRAHAM, Knt. of Elieston, who m. Eupheme, only dau. and heir of David Stewart, Earl of Strathern, and obtained in consequence that earldom. (From this alliance the family quarters the royal arms of Stuart.) This Sir Robert being slain by Sir John Drummond, in 1413, was s. by his son,

MALISE, Earl of Strathern, who changed the title to Menteith, that of Strathern being annexed to the royal house by KING ROBERT II. This nobleman m. Anne, dau. of Henry Vere, Earl of Oxford, and had three sons and two daus.; the 2nd of which sons,

The Hon. Sir John Graham, of Kilbride, called "John with the bright sword," left

RICHARD GRAHAM, from whom are lineally descended the Grahams of the borders, both of the English and Scottish side, but chiefly the houses of Netherby and Plomp, co. Cumberland.

FERGUS GRAHAM, Esq. of Plomp, m. Sibill, dau. of William Bell, Esq. of God's Brigg, in North Britain, and had four sons; the 2nd of whom,

I. RICHARD GRAHAM, Esq., gentleman of the horse to JAMES I., was created a Baronet, 20 March, 1629, by the style of Sir Richard Graham, of Esk, co. Cumberland. This gentleman purchased Netherby and the barony of Liddell, in the same county, of Francis, Earl of Cumberland. Sir Robert subsequently distinguished himself under the royal banner, particularly at Edge-Hill, where he was severely wounded, and lay amongst the slain for an entire night. He m. Catherine, dau. and co-heir of Sir Thomas Musgrave, of Cumcatch, Cumberland, and was s. in 1653 by his elder son, (the younger, Richard, was created a Baronet in 1662—see GRAHAM, of NORTON-CONYERS,)

II. Sir George, who m. Lady Mary Johnston, dau. of James, 1st Earl of Hartfell,* and had, with other issue,

- i. RICHARD, his successor, of whom presently.
- ii. William, in holy orders, D.D., and dean of Carlisle and Wells, clerk of the closet, and chaplain to QUEEN ANNE; d. in 1712, and left issue,

- 1 Charles, in holy orders, rector of South Church; in Essex; m. Priscilla Billingsley, of Tottenham, and by her (who wedded 2ndly, Joseph Bezeley, Esq.) had issue,

WILLIAM, in holy orders; who inherited the baronetcy upon the decease of the last Viscount Preston.

Thomas-Fane-Charles, in holy orders; m. Anne, dau. of Joseph Harrington, Esq. of Clare, co. Suffolk, and widow of the Rev. Francis Greenwood, (by which 1st husband she had an only son, Charles Greenwood, Esq., the eminent army-agent, and a dau., Anne, m. to Thomas Hammersley, Esq. of Pall-Mall.)

Bridget, m. to Thomas Elkington, Esq. of Coventry.

* JAMES JOHNSTON, of Johnston, had charters of the Barony of Newbie, in 1609; of the lands of Brumell, in Annandale, in 1622; and of other estates in 1629. He was elevated to the peerage, 1633, as Lord Johnston, of Lochwood; and created, 1648, Earl of Hartfell, with remainder to his heirs male for ever. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Margaret Douglas, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Queensberry, and had issue,

JAMES, his successor,

MARY, m. 1st, to Sir George Graham, ancestor of the present Sir Robert Graham, as in the text. Her ladyship espoused 2ndly, Sir George Fletcher, of Huttonhall.

Janet, m. to Sir William Murray, Bart., of Stanhope.

Margaret, m. to Sir Robert Dalzell, of Glenae.

The earl espoused 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Samuel Johnston, of Elphinstone; and 3rdly, Lady Margaret Hamilton, dau. of David, 1st Earl of Haddington, and widow of David, Lord Carnegie, but had no further issue. He d. 1653, and was s. by his son,

JAMES, 2nd Earl of Hartfell. This nobleman made a resignation of his peerage to the crown, 1661, and the Earldom of Annandale having become extinct, by the death of James Murray, 2nd Earl of Annandale, he had a new patent, creating him Earl of Annandale and Hartfell, Viscount of Annand, Lord Johnston, of Lochwood, &c., to the heirs male of his body; failing which, to the eldest heirs female of his body, and the eldest heir male of the body of such heirs female, bearing the name and arms of Johnston; whom all failing, to the nearest heirs whatsoever of his lordship, with the former precedence of 18 March, 1643. The son and successor of the Earl,

WILLIAM, Earl of Annandale and Hartfell, was created Marquess of Annandale, 1701. He was s. by his son,

JAMES, 2nd marquess; who was s. by his brother,

GEORGE, 3rd marquess, a lunatic; who d. 1792, issueless, when the marquessate expired, and the Earldom of Annandale and Hartfell has since been claimed by different branches of the family. It continues DORMANT.

2 Robert, in holy orders, D.D.; who succeeded to the Preston estates upon the decease of Lady Widdrington.

Sir George d. in 1657, and was s. by his eldest son,

III. Sir Richard, who was advanced, in 1680, to the peerage of Scotland, as Viscount Preston, and took his seat in the Scottish parliament in that dignity. His lordship was British ambassador to the court of France for many years, and subsequently secretary of state to JAMES II. Upon the Revolution, the viscount was committed to the Tower, but soon released from imprisonment. Being afterwards, however, apprehended in an attempt to escape to his old master in France, he was sent to Newgate, arraigned for high-treason, and condemned, but pardoned through the intercession of his friends, under the sign-manual, in June, 1691. He m. Anne, 2nd dau. of Charles Howard, 1st Earl of Carlisle, by whom he had (with two daus.) his successor, in 1695,

IV. EDWARD, as 2nd viscount, (the attainder of the deceased lord not affecting the Scottish peerage, as no act of forfeiture passed against him in Scotland.) His lordship m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of Sir Marmaduke Dalton, of Hawkswell, co. York; and dying in 1709, was s. by his only son,

V. CHARLES, 3rd viscount; who m. Anne, dau. of Thomas Cox, Esq. of London, and sister of Mary, Countess of Peterborough; but dying s. p. in 1739, the peerage expired. His lordship's extensive estates passed to his aunts, Lady Widdrington and the Hon. Mary-Susan Graham, daus. of the 1st viscount; and devolved, by the will of the former of those ladies, in 1757, upon the Rev. Robert Graham, D.D., father of Sir James Graham, of Netherby, (see that title,) while the ancient baronetcy of the family reverted to the deceased lord's cousin,

VI. The Rev. WILLIAM GRAHAM, (refer to the younger son of Sir George, the 2nd bart.,) who m. 7 Nov. 1761, Susannah, dau. of — Reeve, Esq. of Ashburnham, co. Sussex, and relict of Richard French, Esq., by whom he had, (with three daus., who d. unm.),

Lineage.

"The ancient and powerful family of Graham," says Sir Walter Scott, in the Lady of the Lake, "held extensive possessions in the counties of Dumbarton and Stirling. Few families can boast of more historical renown, having claim to three of the most remarkable characters in the Scottish annals: Sir John Græme, the faithful and undaunted partaker of the labours and patriotic warfare of Wallace, fell in the unfortunate field of Falkirk, in 1298. The celebrated Marquess of Montrose, in whom De Retz saw realized his abstract ideas of the heroes of antiquity, was the second of these worthies; and notwithstanding the severity of his temper, and the vigour with which he executed the oppressive mandates of the Punic, whom he served, I do not hesitate to name, as the third, John Graham, of Claverhouse, Viscount of Dundee, whose heroic death, in the arms of victory, may be allowed to cancel the memory of his cruelty to the non-conformists during the reigns of CHARLES II. and JAMES II."

The Grahams of Norton Conyers, (of which we are about to treat,) the Grahams of Esk, and the Grahams of Netherby, derive their descent from the same common ancestor; namely,

GRANARD, EARL OF, (George-Arthur Forbes,) Viscount Granard, and Baron of Clanehugh, in the peerage of Ireland; Baron Granard, of Castle

Donnington, co. Leicester, and a Baronet of Nova Scotia; b. 5 Aug. 1833; s. as 7th earl, upon the demise of his grandfather, 9 June, 1837.

Lineage.

The surname of Forbes is said to be a corruption of "Forbeast," which was originally assumed by the founder of the family in Scotland, to commemorate the achievement of having destroyed a ferocious bear, which had infested the country.

SIR ARTHUR FORBES, Knt., (directly descended from the Hon. Patrick Forbes, of Corsse, younger son of James, 2nd Lord Forbes, of Scotland, and Egidia, his wife, dau. of William Keith, earl marshal of the same kingdom,) settled in Ireland in 1620, and was made by patent, dated at Dublin, in 1622, a free denizen of that kingdom. In 1628, Sir Arthur was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia; and having, by petition to the king, made discovery that several royal fishings in the province of Ulster belonged to the crown, an inquiry was thereupon instituted, and Sir Arthur eventually rewarded by a grant of such proportion of the said fisheries as he thought proper to demand, besides the sum of £300 from the first profits of the remainder. He had previously obtained extensive territorial possessions from the crown, particularly a grant of sundry lands in the co. of Longford, in all 1266 acres, which were erected into the manor of Castle Forbes, with the usual manorial privileges. Sir Arthur m. Jane Lowther, and falling in a duel at Hamburg, in 1632, where he had accompanied his regiment (he was lieutenant-col. in the army) to assist Gustavus Adolphus, of Sweden, was s. by his eldest son,

Lineage.

This family is descended from the very ancient family of Grant, of Grant, now Earl of Seafield, Viscount Redhaven, as follows—

JAMES GRANT, of that ilk, a man of bold and daring disposition, of good parts, and in great favour with JAMES V., from whom he obtained a charter, exempting him from attendance in any court of judicature whatsoever, for his good services done and to be done, &c., dated Stirling, anno 1535; afterwards got a charter under the great seal from QUEEN MARY, "Jacobus de Freuchy, Terrarum de Lochelsh, Lochcarron, Lochbrine, &c.," in Invernesshire, dated 4 March, 1548. He m. 1st, Lady Janet Leslie, dau. of George, 4th Earl of Rothes, widow of Crichton, of Naughton, by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Barbara Erskine, a dau. of the family of Mar, by whom he had two sons,

JOHN, his heir, who carried on the line of his family; and

ARCHIBALD GRANT, who got a charter under the great seal—Archibald Grant, fratri Johannis Grant de Freuchy, &c., dated 8 March, 1580. He was progenitor of the Grants of Ballantomb, Cullen, Monimusk, &c. From him, the first of Ballentomb, we proceed to trace the descent of the Monymusk family. I. SIR FRANCIS GRANT, Lord Cullen. He was bred to the bar, and displayed such ability and integrity as an advocate, that soon after the Revolution, he was appointed one of the senators of the College of Justice, by the title of Lord Cullen, from an estate which he possessed in Buchan. About the end of the 17th century, he purchased the estate of Monymusk from the ancestor of the present Sir John Stuart Forbes, Bart. of Pitsligo; in 1705, he was raised to the dignity of a Baronet of Nova Scotia by QUEEN ANNE; and 17 May, 1720, he received a special warrant, under the hand of his majesty GEORGE I., granting him the unusual armorial addition of a bordure ermine, as a testimony of his sovereign's favour, and a memorial of his judicial eminence; together with two angels as supporters, the motto "Suum cuique," on a scroll above, and the motto "Jehovah Jireh," on a scroll below—the only instance in Scottish heraldry of a Hebrew motto. He early foresaw the important advantages that would accrue to Scotland from a union with England; and to this great measure he gave his zealous and influential support. He was endued with great mental qualities. Exalted piety, inflexible integrity, and unbounded benevolence shone in every action of his life; and among his many generous acts, he bequeathed a sum of money to build and endow a school in the northern part of the parish of Monymusk, which was executed some years ago, is now in full operation, and is attended by highly beneficial consequences to all classes, especially to the children of the indigent, who receive a free education. The MACPHERSONS of Invereshie are the chiefs of a large tribe which for ages has been distinguished under the designation of "Slioch Gillies," and which is composed of many considerable families, not only of the name of Macpherson, but of others, such as the Gillieses, Gillespies, &c. The founder of this tribe was GILLIES, or ELIAS MACPHERSON, the first of Invereshie, who lived in the reign of ALEXANDER III. He was a younger son of Ewan, or Eugene Baan, (the fair-complexioned,) and brother of Kenneth Macpherson, ancestor of the MACPHERSONS of Cluny Macpherson, in Invernesshire. Ewan Baan was son of Muriach, or Murdock, and grandson of GILLICATTAN, chief of the powerful clan Chattan, during the reign of DAVID I., who, having devoted himself to the service of the church, became abbot of Kingussie, which title he enjoyed until 1153, when upon the demise, issueless, of his elder brother, DIARMED, the chieftainship devolved upon him. A few years subsequently he procured from the pope a dispensation to enable him to marry, and espoused a daughter of the Thane of Calder. His son, EWAN BAAN, was sometimes called Macpherson, which signifies the son of a parson, (derived from his father's clerical profession;) and surnames about that time becoming hereditary, it was perpetuated in his descendants.

GEORGE MACPHERSON, Esq. of Invereshie, (son and heir of John Macpherson, Esq. of the same place, by Isabella, his wife, dau. of John Cuthbert, Esq. of Drakies,) m. Grace, dau. of Col. William Grant, of Ballindalloch, (by Anne, grandau. of Sir Ludovick Grant, Bart. of Grant,) and had issue,

WILLIAM, of Invereshie, his heir.

JOHN, capt. 17th regt.; who m. 10 Oct. 1778, Isabella, dau. of Thomas Wilson, Esq. of Winton Gilbert, in the co. of Durham, and by her (who d. 3 March, 1784,) left at his decease, 9 May, 1799, Anne, m. to John Mackenzie, Esq. of Woodstock.

Jean, m. to William Grant, Esq. of Burnside.

The elder son,

WILLIAM MACPHERSON, Esq. of Invereshie, d. unm. 12 April, 1812, and was s. by his nephew,

GEORGE MACPHERSON GRANT, Esq., who had inherited, 13 April, 1806, as heir of provision to his father's maternal uncle, Gen. James Grant, the estate of Ballindalloch, and had assumed the surname of GRANT. He was created a Baronet in 1838.

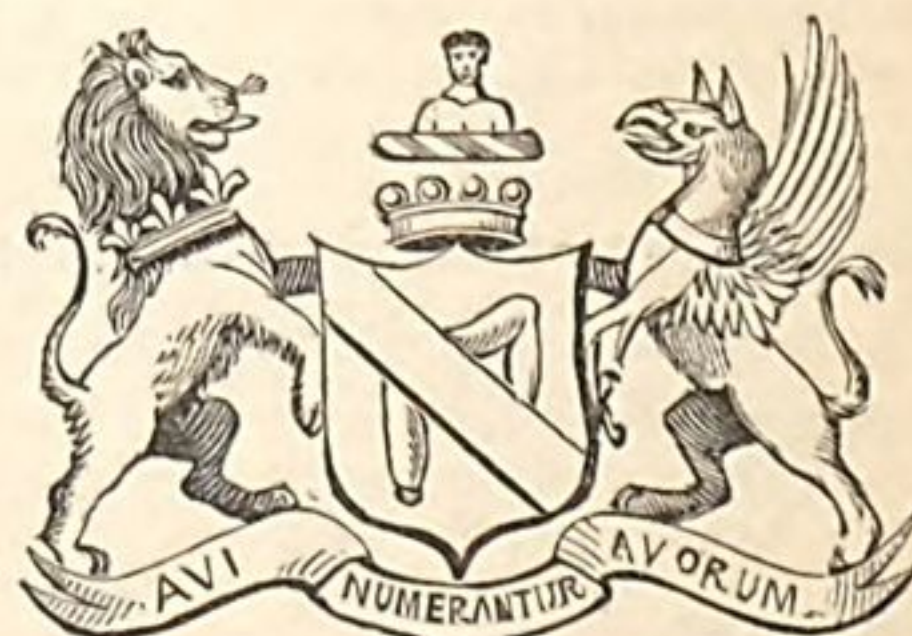

Creation—1838.

GRANTLEY.

GRANTLEY, LORD, (Fletcher Norton,) Baron of Markenfield, co. York, and high-steward of Guild-

Jane-Anne, m. to Captain Ainslie, of the 1st royal dragoons, only son of the Lieut.-Col. C.-P. Ainslie.

His lordship s. as 15th baron, upon the demise of his brother, 12 Dec. 1807.

Lineage.

This family is descended from a common progenitor with the extinct ducal houses of Suffolk and Kent, the baronial houses of Gray and Warwick, and the existing houses of Dorset, Tankerville, and Stamford; namely, Anschetit de Croy, one of the companions in arms of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, who obtained large grants of land in the co. Oxford and other places. From this person sprang

SIR ANDREW GRAY, of Chillingham, co. Northumberland, who, in reward for his good and faithful services, obtained from KING ROBERT BRUCE, in 1306, the manor of Longforgund, co. Perth, with other lands in the co. Forfar, and the lands of Browfield and Broxmouth. From this Sir Andrew directly descended

SIR ANDREW GRAY, of Broxmouth, who was created a Lord of Parliament before 9 Oct. 1437, by the title of LORD GRAY, of Gray. (There is a doubt, however, whether this was the 1st lord, as the precise date of creation is not ascertained—see Creation, at foot.) His lordship m. 1st, Janet, dau. of Sir Roger de Mortimer, with whom he obtained the Barony of Foulis, and by her had a son, Andrew, and six daughters. He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Walter Buchanan, Knt., and had four sons and a daughter. He d. in the year 1449-50, and was s. by his eldest son,

ANDREW, 2nd baron; one of the eminent persons who became hostages for the Scottish KING JAMES I. in 1424. His lordship was ambassador to England in 1449 and 1451. He d. in 1469. This nobleman obtained a licence from the crown to build the strong and beautiful castle of Huntly, in the Carse of Gowrie, (which his family possessed for some ages,) now called Castle Lyon, and belonging to the Earl of Strathmore. His lordship m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir John Wemyss, of Rires, and was s. by his grandson,

ANDREW, 3rd baron, (son of Patrick, master of Gray, by Annabella, dau. of Alexander, Lord Forbes.) This nobleman was one of the privy-council to JAMES IV., and justice-general of Scotland. He m. 1st, Janet, only dau. of John, Lord Keith, son of William, Earl Marischal, by whom he had PATRICK, his successor, and two daughters. He m. 2ndly, Lady Elizabeth Stewart, 3rd dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, uterine brother of JAMES II., and had a numerous family; of which the eldest surviving son,

GILBERT, of Buttergask, m. Egidia, dau. of Sir Laurence Mercer, of Aldie, and had, with other issue,

PATRICK, who inherited as 5th lord.

His lordship d. in 1514, and was s. by his eldest son,

PATRICK, 4th baron. This nobleman m. Janet, 2nd dau. of George, 2nd Earl of Huntly, by whom he had three daus.; viz., Margaret, m. to Sir William Keith, of Innerugie; Isabel, m. to Sir Adam Crichton, of Ruthven; and —, m. to Monorgund, of Monorgund. His lordship d. in 1541, and was s. by his nephew,

PATRICK, 5th baron, (son of Gilbert Gray, of Buttergask;) who m. Marion, dau. of James, Lord Ogilvy, of Airly; and dying in 1582, was s. by his eldest son,

PATRICK, 6th baron. This nobleman m. Barbara, 4th dau. of William, Lord Ruthven, and was s. in 1609, by his son,

PATRICK, 7th baron; who m. Lady Mary Stewart, eldest dau. of Robert, Earl of Orkney; and was s. in 1612, by his elder son,

ANDREW, 8th baron. This nobleman was lieut. of the gens-d'armes in France, under Lord Gordon, in 1624; and was much employed in the wars there. He resigned the heritable sheriffship of Forfarshire to CHARLES I., for which he got his majesty's bond for 50,000 marks, which was never paid. He was banished the kingdom by the parliament for being with Montrose, in 1645, but this sentence does not appear to have been carried into effect. He was excommunicated by commission of the general assembly, in 1649, on account of his being a Roman catholic; and had a fine of £1500 imposed upon him by CROMWELL's act of grace and pardon, in 1654. He was prevailed upon by CHARLES II. and the Duke of York, then in exile, to resign the lieutenancy of the gens-d'armes in France, in favour of Mareschal Schomberg, which office had long been enjoyed by Scotsmen, and never afterwards could be recovered. His lordship m. 1st, Anne Ogilvy, sister of the 1st Earl of Findlater, relict of James, Earl of Buchan, and had,

PATRICK, master of Gray; killed in France, and d. unm. before his father.

ANNE, mistress of Gray; who m. William Gray, son of Sir William Gray, of Pattendrum, by whom (who was slain in a duel by the Earl of Southesk) she had, with two other sons,

PATRICK, who s. as 9th lord.

His lordship espoused 2ndly, Dame Catherine Cadell, by whom he had one daughter, Frances, m. to Capt. Mackenzie, son of the Bishop of Moray.

His lordship having thus no surviving male issue, obtained a new patent, dated 8 Jan. 1638-9, by which the dignity descended to the son of his only dau., Anne, mistress of Gray, by Sir William Gray, of Pattendrum, which son s. at his lordship's decease, in 1663, as

PATRICK, 9th baron; but having no male issue, was himself obliged to obtain a new patent, in 1707, in favour of the husband of his only dau., Marjory, mistress of Gray,

JOHN GRAY, Esq. of Crichtie, who inherited accordingly at his father-in-law's demise, in 1711, as 10th baron. His lordship d. in 1724, and was s. by his son,

JOHN, 11th baron; who d. in Dec. 1738, and was s. by his son,

JOHN, 12th baron. This nobleman m. in 1741, Miss Blair, of Kinfauns, an heiress, by whom he had issue,

ANDREW, master of Gray; who d. unm.

CHARLES, his successor.

His lordship d. in 1782, and was s. by his eldest surviving son,

CHARLES, 13th baron; who d. 18 Dec. 1786, unm., when the title devolved upon his next brother, WILLIAM-JOHN, 14th baron; who also d. unm. 12 Dec. 1807, when the barony descended to his brother, FRANCIS, the present peer.

Lineage.

This family, which is of Norman extraction, traces its descent from Malahulcius, uncle to Rolo, Duke of Normandy, the renowned ancestor of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

NIGELL, younger son of Roger de Toeny, standard-bearer of Normandy, son of the said Malahulcius, arrived in England with an elder brother, Robert, (ancestor of the noble race of the Staffords,) in the train of William; and at the time of the survey held extensive possessions in the cos. of Derby and Stafford, of which Grasele, or Gresley, in the former, where he fixed his abode, was one. Lord Grey was first returned to parliament by the co. of Northumberland, in 1786, and he maintained for twenty-one years afterwards—an eventful era in the annals of England—a leading position in the House of Commons. Upon the accession of the whig administration in 1806, Mr. Grey came into office as first-lord of the Admiralty, and was afterwards, at the decease of Mr. Fox, secretary for foreign affairs. He retired with his party in 1807; and remained in opposition until 1830, when he was constituted first-lord of the Treasury, (prime minister.) He retired again in 1834. His lordship is a commissioner of the land-tax, a trustee of the National Gallery, and a governor of the Charter House.

GREY.

GREY DE RUTHYN, BARONESS, (Barbara Rawdon-Hastings,) Baroness Hastings, of Ashley-Weyford and Valence; b. 20 May, 1810; s. in the same year, as 2nd baroness, (29 Oct. 1810,) upon the demise of her father, Henry, 19th Lord Grey de Ruthyn; m. 1 Aug. 1831, to George, present MARQUESS OF HASTINGS, and has issue.

Lineage.

The descent of this family is deduced, by a French genealogist and antiquary of great repute, (Francis de Belleforest, of Cominges,) from Rollo, chamberlain to Robert, Duke of Normandy, who obtained, by grant from his master, the castle and honour of Croy, in Picardy, whence the surname of De Croy (changed into De Grey) is said to have originated. In the 6th year of RICHARD I., that monarch conferred the manor of Thurrock, co. Essex, afterwards called Thurrock-Grey, upon

HENRY DE GREY, which grant was confirmed by KING JOHN, who vouchsafed, by especial charter, to permit the said Henry to hunt the hare and fox in any lands belonging to the crown, save the king's own demesne parks. Henry de Grey m. Isolda, niece and heir of Robert Bardolf, and had, with other issue,

SIR JOHN DE GREY, of Eaton, near Fenny Stratford, Bucks, who was sheriff of the counties of Buckingham and Bedford, 23rd HENRY III.; and afterwards had summons to attend the king in his wars in France. In the 30th of the same monarch, he was appointed constable of the castle of Gannock, in North Wales; in seven years afterwards, he was made governor of Northampton Castle; and the next year, constituted steward of all Gascoigne; but in two years subsequently, being, according to Matthew Paris, "an aged knight of much esteem for his courtesy and valour, as also chief of the king's council, and being weary of the vanities of the court, he withdrew himself." This Sir John d. 50th HENRY III., and was s. by his only son,

REGINALD DE GREY, who was justice of Chester, 9th EDWARD I., and obtained from that monarch, with other grants, the castle of Ruthyn, co. Denbigh. He m. Maud, dau. and heir of Henry de Longcamp, a great baron, whose principal seat was at WILTON CASTLE, in Herefordshire; and dying in 1307, was s. by his only son,

JOHN DE GREY, of Wilton, who, 4th EDWARD II., was summoned, with other noblemen, to be at London to attend the general council; and in the 10th of the same monarch, was appointed justice of North Wales, and governor of Carnarvon Castle. This nobleman m. for his 2nd wife, Maud, dau. of Ralph, Lord Bassett, of Drayton, by whom he had an only son, (by his 1st wife he had a son, HENRY, his successor, ancestor of the Greys of Wilton,)

ROGER DE GREY, who had, with other considerable estates from his father, the castle of RUTHYN. In 1319, he was summoned to meet the king at Winchester, the second Sunday in Lent, to confer with him before his departure into Aquitaine, and was called to the parliament held at York, in 1322, as LORD GREY DE RUTHYN. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Hastings, of Bergavenny, and Isabel, his wife, dau. of William de Valence, and sister and co-heir of Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, (whereby his posterity became heirs to the last John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, who was killed in a tournament at Woodstock in Dec. 1390—see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage;) and dying 6 March, 1352-3, was s. by his only surviving son,

REGINALD, 2nd baron; who d. in 1388, and was s. by his eldest son,

REGINALD, 3rd baron; who, on the death of John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke, was found to be his next heir. He had afterwards a great contest in the court of Chivalry with Sir Edward de Hastings, touching the title of Lord Hastings and bearing the entire arms of the said John de Hastings, late Earl of Pembroke, which cause coming to a definitive sentence, 11th HENRY IV., the right and title to the said name and arms was adjudged to Lord Grey, and his heirs, as Lord Hastings; and Sir Edward de Hastings thenceforth prohibited to bear them, was sentenced to pay such costs of suit as should be appointed by the court. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of William, Lord Roos, and had an only son,

John, (Sir) who, dying in the lifetime of his father, left two sons by his wife, Constance, dau. of John Holland, Duke of Exeter, and widow of Thomas, Lord Mowbray, EDMUND, who s. his grandfather.

THOMAS, created BARON GREY, of Rougemont; but being an active Lancastrian, was attainted 1st EDWARD IV., when his honours expired, and he d. s. p.

Lord Grey espoused 2ndly, Joane, dau. and heir of William, Lord Astley, and had three sons, of whom EDWARD, the eldest, m. the heir of Ferrers of Groby, and was ancestor to the Duke of Suffolk and the present Earl of Stamford. His lordship d. in 1440, and was s. by his grandson,

EDMUND, 4th baron; created EARL OF KENT, 3 May, 1465, and appointed lord-high-treasurer of England, in which superior dignity (the Earldom of Kent) the barony merged for 174 years, until the earldom became extinct at the demise of HENRY, 8th earl and 11th baron, without male issue, in 1639. His lordship's great-great-grandfather, Henry Grey, 4th earl and 7th baron, never, owing to his poverty, assumed the family honours. Upon the demise of this 8th Earl of Kent, his nephew, (the son of his lordship's sister, Lady Susan Grey, who m. Sir Michael Longueville,)

CHARLES LONGUEVILLE, claimed the barony, and had his claim admitted, in 1640, as 12th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, in despite of the opposition of Anthony Grey, the then Earl of Kent, grounded upon the plea that, "when a barony by writ was once involved in an earldom, it should wait upon such earldom, and might not be subsequently transferred to another family by a dau. and heir, so long as the earldom continued in the male." The decision upon this case established the principle, that an earldom, or other superior dignity, does not attract a barony in fee. His lordship, who m. Frances, dau. and co-heir of Edward Nevile, Esq., d. in three years afterwards, and was s. by his only dau., SUSAN LONGUEVILLE, who then became Baroness Grey de Ruthyn. Her ladyship m. Sir Henry Yelverton,* Bart.

SIR CHARLES YELVERTON, Bart., as 13th baron; who d. unm. in 1679, when the barony devolved upon his brother,

Mary, m. to the Hon. and Rev. Frederick Powys, son of Lord Lilford, and has Frederick-Henry and other issue.

The earl m. 2ndly, Mary, dau. of John Vaughan, Esq. of Bristol, by whom he had no child. His lordship dying thus, in 1799, without male descendants, the Earldom of Sussex and the Viscounty of Longueville ceased, but the Barony of GREY DE RUTHYN devolved upon (the son of his deceased dau., Lady Barbara Gould) his grandson,

HENRY-EDWARD GOULD, Esq., who thus became 19th Baron Grey de Ruthyn, and assumed, in 1800, the name and arms of YELVERTON. His lordship m. 21 June, 1809, Anna-Maria, dau. of Mr. William Kellam, of Ryton-upon-Dunsmore, co. Warwick, by whom he left at his decease, in 1810, an only child and heir, BARBARA, the present baroness. Her ladyship inherits the Barony of Hastings, of Ashley, from Elizabeth, sister of John Hastings, 3rd baron, who m. Roger de Grey, of Ruthyn, and to whose descendant, Reginald, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, the right

He was continued in that employment by EDW. IV., and was created a knight of the Bath at that monarch's coronation. Nevertheless, when HENRY VI. recovered for a short interval the reins of government, Sir William was constituted one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas. From this learned and eminent person we pass to his lineal descendant,

WILLIAM, created a Baronet in 1620, a title that expired with his son,

SIR WILLIAM, 2nd bart.

The third son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON, an eminent lawyer, was appointed queen's-serjeant in the 31st ELIZABETH. He was afterwards chosen speaker of the House of Commons, and constituted one of the judges of the Queen's Bench

GRIERSON.

GRIERSON, SIR ROBERT, of Lag, county Dumfries; succeeded as 5th baronet, upon the demise of his father, in 1813.

Lineage.

This family claims descent from Gilbert, second son of Malcolm, Lord of Macgregor, who d. in 1374; but whether the claim be well founded or not, it is certain that the Griersons of Lag have been settled in that part of Scotland for a period exceeding four centuries.

THOMAS GRIERSON, Laird of Arde, obtained, 6 Dec. 1408, a charter from his cousin, John M'Rath de Lachs, conveying to him all right and claim which he, the said John, had to the lands of Lag. From this Thomas lineally descended,

SIR WILLIAM GRIERSON, Knt. of Lag, who was appointed, in 1623, the keeper of certain rolls. He m. in 1593, Miss Maxwell, sister of William, Lord Herries. Sir William d. about the year 1629, and from this time the family of Lag seem to have made an alteration in their surname, calling themselves "Grier," instead of "Grierson," for some generations. Sir William was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT GRIER, Knt., M.P. in 1639. This gentleman m. in 1622, Margaret, eldest dau. of Sir James Murray, of Cockpool, by whom he had four sons and a dau. Sir Robert d. in 1634, and was s. by his eldest son, Sir John Grier, Knt., but his male issue failing, the line of descent is carried on by the posterity of the second son,

JAMES GRIERSON, Esq., who left a son,

I. ROBERT GRIERSON, Esq., who s. in 1669, to the estates of his cousin, Sir John Grierson, Knt. of Lag, and was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 28 March, 1685. Sir Robert m. Henrietta, dau. of James, 2nd Earl of Queensberry, by whom he had four sons. This gentleman, who enjoyed a pension from the crown of £200 a-year, was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

II. SIR WILLIAM, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Richard Musgrave, of Hayton; but dying without male issue, the title devolved upon his brother,

III. SIR GILBERT. This gentleman m. Elizabeth, dau. of Col. Maitland, of the Coldstream regt. of guards; and dying 7 Feb. 1766, was s. by his son,

IV. SIR ROBERT, who m. Margaret, eldest dau. of the Hon. Alexander Dalzell, of Glenae, by whom he had four sons and six daus.; and dying in 1813, was s. by his son, ROBERT, the present bart.

Creation—28 March, 1685.

Lineage.

EDWARD NORTH was born about the year 1496, and brought up to the profession of the law; in which he made so fair a progress, that he was elected one of the council for the city of London. In the 22nd HENRY VIII., Mr. North was appointed joint-clerk of the parliament, and in six years afterwards (1536) he became one of the king's serjeants-at-law. On the surrender of the former post, he was made treasurer of the court of Augmentations, an office newly erected upon the dissolution of the monasteries; and he became afterwards chancellor of the court. He was soon after knighted, and returned to parliament as representative of the co. Cambridge. We next find Sir Edward a privy-councillor, and in such favour with the king as to obtain various grants of lands from the crown. But knowing how transitory were HENRY's smiles, he seems to have always been in a state of alarm, of which the following occurrence is a sufficient illustration. One morning, a messenger from the king came to Sir Edward to command his immediate presence at court. He then resided at the Charter House; and one of his servants, an attendant in his bedchamber when the message was delivered, observed his master to tremble at it; but Sir Edward made the utmost haste to wait upon the king, and took with him his said servant. On his admittance, he found HENRY walking, who continued doing so with great earnestness, looking at him with an angry eye, which was received with a very still and sober carriage. At last the king broke out in these words: "We are informed you have cheated us of certain lands in Middlesex." And receiving no other than a plain and humble negation, the king, after some little pause, replied, "How was it, then; did we give those lands to you?" Whereunto Sir Edward answered, "Yes, Sir; your majesty was pleased so to do." The king on this, after a brief pause, put on a milder countenance, and calling him to a cupboard, conferred privately with him a long time; whereby his servant (as Dudley, the 2nd Lord North was informed) saw the king could not spare his master's service as yet. From this period Sir Edward advanced still higher in the estimation of the king, and at his highness's death was appointed one of his executors, with a legacy of £300. After the accession of EDWARD VI., he was re-sworn of the privy-council, and re-elected for Cambridgeshire. But upon the decease of that monarch, Sir Edward seems to have espoused the cause of Lady Jane Grey. He made his peace, however, very soon with QUEEN MARY, for on her accession he was again sworn of the privy-council, and elevated to the peerage in the first year of her reign, 17 Feb. 1553-4, being then summoned to parliament as Baron North, of Kirtling, co. Cambridge, (a manor which he purchased about the time he was appointed clerk of the parliament.) In the reign of ELIZABETH, Lord North was constituted lord-lieutenant of Cambridgeshire and the Isle of Ely. His lordship m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Oliver Squyer, Esq. of Southby, co. Southampton, and widow of Edward Myrffun, Esq. and of John Brigadine, Esq. of Southampton. By this lady he acquired a considerable fortune, and had two sons and two daus., viz.,

ROGER, (Sir) his successor.

Thomas, (Sir) a learned man, who translated into English Guevara's Horologium Principum, and Plutarch's Lives.

Mary, m. to Henry, Lord Scroope, of Bolton.

Lord North d. 31 Dec. 1564, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR ROGER NORTH, knight-banneret, as 2nd baron. This nobleman, who was ambassador-extraordinary from QUEEN ELIZABETH to CHARLES IX., King of France, was sworn of the privy-council, and constituted treasurer of the household in the 39th year of her majesty's reign. He m. Winifred, dau. of Robert, Lord Rich, (chancellor of England,) and relict of Sir Henry Dudley; by whom he had two sons,

John, (Sir) who m. Dorothy, dau. and co-heir of Sir Valentine Dale, LL.D., master of the requests; and dying before his father, left, with other issue, DUDLEY, successor to the title.

Henry, (Sir) of Milden Hall, co. Suffolk; whose grandson, SIR HENRY NORTH, of Milden Hall, was created a BARONET in 1660. (See BURKE's Extinct Baronetage.)

His lordship d. 3 Dec. 1600; and he is thus briefly characterized by Camden:—"He was a person of great business and vivacity, with a head and heart fit for the service." He was s. by his grandson,

DUDLEY, 3rd baron; who, according to Camden, "was a person full of spirit and flame; yet after he had consumed the greatest part of his estate in the gallantries of KING JAMES's court, or rather his son's (Prince Henry), retired and lived more honourably in the country upon what was left than ever he had done before." His lordship m. Frances, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Bocket, of Bocket-Hall, co. Hertford; and dying 16 Jan. 1666, was s. by his eldest son,

DUDLEY, 4th baron, K.B. His lordship m. Anne, dau. and co-heir of Sir Charles Montagu, Knt., and niece of Henry, Earl of Manchester, by whom he had six sons and four daus., viz.,

I. CHARLES, his successor.

II. FRANCIS, who applying himself to the study of the law in the Middle Temple, became one of the great law luminaries of England. In 1671, he was appointed solicitor-general, and received the honour of knighthood. In 1673, he succeeded Sir Heneage Finch in the attorney-generalship; and in the next year, was appointed lord-chief-justice of the court of Common Pleas. Upon the death of the Earl of Nottingham, in 1682, Sir Francis North was appointed lord-keeper of the great-seal; and created, 27 Sept. 1683, BARON GUILFORD, of Guilford, co. Surrey. The life of this celebrated man was written by his youngest brother, ROGER NORTH, to which we must refer for a full account of his many virtues. His lordship m. Frances, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Thomas Pope, Earl of Down,* (see BURKE's Extinct Baronetage;) and dying in Sept. 1685, was s. by his son,

FRANCIS, 2nd Baron Guildford; his lordship m. 1st, in 1694-5, Elizabeth, 3rd dau. of Fulk, Lord Brooke,

* WROXTON PRIORY, founded by Michael Belet, early in the reign of HENRY III., for canons-regular of St. Augustin, after the dissolution, falling into the hands of Sir Thomas Pope, the founder of Trinity College, Oxford, was given (part of it at least) to the endowment of that society. But his brother, John Pope, had a seat at that place at least as early as the reign of EDWARD VI. This John Pope d. in 1583, and was s. by his only surviving son, SIR WILLIAM POPE, who was created a Baronet in 1611, and elevated to the peerage of Ireland, in 1629, as Baron of Bellurbet and EARL OF DOWNE. This nobleman built from the ground the present mansion at Wroxton, which he finished in 1618. He m. in 1595, Anne, dau. of Sir Owen Hopton, lieutenant of the Tower of London, relict of Henry, Lord Wentworth, and was succeeded by his grandson, Thomas Pope, as 2nd Earl of Downe, who m. Lucy, dau. of John Dutton, Esq. of Sherborne; and dying in 1660, left an only dau. and heir, married to Sir Henry Lee, of Ditchley. His lordship was s. by his uncle, Sir Thomas Pope, as 3rd Earl of Downe, who was s. by his son, Thomas, 4th Earl of Downe, who d. s. p. in 1668, when the honours expired, while the estates devolved upon his sisters as co-heirs; viz.,

* In 1837, Lady Susan Doyle (dau. of George, 3rd Earl of Guilford) petitioned the crown to terminate in her favour the abeyance supposed to exist between herself and her sister, Lady Bute. The title, meanwhile, is claimed by the present Earl of Guilford, as heir male, upon the presumption that the barony did not originate in a writ, but in a patent of creation.

Lineage.

The family of GYSE, or GUISE, originally of Normandy, settled in England at the time of the Conquest.

SIR WILLIAM DE GYSE obtained from his victorious chief, Duke WILLIAM, after the accession of that prince to the crown of England, several lordships in Bedfordshire, of which the estate and seat of APSLEY GUISE formed part. A descendant of SIR WILLIAM,

ANSELME DE GYSE, espoused, in HENRY II.'s time, Magotta, one of the daus. of the celebrated HUBERT DE BURGH, Earl of Kent, with whom he acquired the manor and royalty of ELMORE, near Gloucester, where the family flourished for a long subsequent period. From this Anselme we pass to HADDINGTON.

HADDINGTON, EARL OF, (Thomas Hamilton,) and Baron of Binning and Byres, in the peerage of Scotland; hereditary keeper of Holyrood Park; and a peer of the United Kingdom, as Baron Melrose, of Tynninghame, co. Haddington; P.C.; b. 21 June, 1780; m. 23 Nov. 1802, Maria, only surviving child of George, 4th Earl of Macclesfield, but has no issue. His lordship s. as 9th earl, upon the demise of his father, 17 March, 1828; and obtained the Barony of the Empire, by patent of creation, dated in July, 1827. The earl was for a short period, in 1833-4, lord-lieutenant of Ireland.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the ducal house of Hamilton springing from

THOMAS HAMILTON, of Orchartfield, who acquired, in 1522, from John, Earl of Lennox, the Barony of Bathgate, co. Linlithgow; and in 1524 purchased the lands of Ballyncriff, in the same shire. He was s. by his son,

THOMAS HAMILTON, who fell at the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, leaving two sons,

THOMAS.

John, a secular priest, who leaving Scotland on account of his religion, took up his abode at Paris, in 1573, and was appointed professor of philosophy in the college of Navarre. He became tutor to the Cardinal de Bourbon in 1576; and to Francis de Joyeuse, afterwards a cardinal, in 1578; and was chosen rector of the University of Paris in 1584. He was a zealous partisan of the league, and one of the council who offered the crown to PHILIP II. of Spain, in 1591. When HENRY IV. entered Paris, in 1594, Hamilton was arrested, but had liberty soon after to depart from Paris. He retired to Brussels, and in 1601, ventured to revisit his native country, after an absence of nearly 30 years. He found a temporary asylum at the castle of Lord Ogilvie; but in 1609 was arrested by a party of life-guards, and committed to the Tower of London, where he died.

The elder son,

SIR THOMAS HAMILTON, of Priestfield, had a charter of Balbyn, Drumcairn, and Priestfield, in the year 1597. He was admitted a lord of Session in 1607, but resigned his seat on the bench to his second son, the next year. Sir Thomas m. Elizabeth, dau. of James Heriot, of Trabroun, and had issue, (besides daus.,)

THOMAS, his successor.

Andrew, (Sir) of Redhouse, having m. Jean, dau. and

John, (Sir) of Magdalene, co. Linlithgow; an extraordinary LORD OF SESSION, and LORD-REGISTER OF SCOTLAND.

Patrick, under-secretary of state to his brother, the Earl of Haddington.

Alexander, general of artillery, who had a high command in the troops sent to the assistance of GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, King of Sweden, under the 1st Duke of Hamilton.

The eldest son,

SIR THOMAS HAMILTON, of Priestfield, b. in 1563, studied the law in France, was admitted advocate in 1587, and soon distinguishing himself at the bar, was appointed a LORD OF SESSION in 1592, by the title of LORD DRUMCAIRN. He was subsequently one of the commissioners of the Treasury of Exchequer called Octavians, and king's-advocate. In 1604, he was nominated a commissioner by parliament to treat of a union with England. In 1612, he was received lord-clerk-register of Scotland; and in the same year, succeeded Sir Alexander Hay as secretary of state. He was elevated to the peerage, 30 Nov. 1613, as Lord Binning and Byres, was appointed lord-president of the court of Session in 1616, and created EARL OF MELROSE, 20 March, 1619. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, dau. of James Bothwick, Esq. of Newbyres, by whom he had an only dau., Christian, m. 1st, to John, Lord Lindsey, and 2ndly, to Robert, Lord Boyd. He m. 2ndly, Miss Foulis, dau. of Sir James Foulis, Bart., by whom he had three sons and three daus.; and 3rdly, Miss Ker, by whom he had no issue. His lordship, with the approbation of the crown, after the death of Sir John Ramsay, Viscount Haddington, changed the title of Earl of Melrose for that of EARL OF HADDINGTON, but with the precedence of the original patent. This nobleman acquired by the lucrative offices he enjoyed one of the largest fortunes of his time, which was considerably augmented by the discovery of valuable mines upon his estates. He d. in 1637, and was s. by his elder son,

THOMAS, 2nd earl; who m. 1st, Katherine, 4th dau. of John, Earl of Marr, by whom he had four sons and a dau.; and 2ndly, in 1640, Jane, 3rd dau. of George, Marquess of Huntly, by whom he left one (posthumous) dau., Margaret, m. to John, 1st Earl of Kintore. The Earl of Haddington having actively espoused the cause of the covenanters, was unfortunately blown up in the castle of Douglas, of which he was governor, 30 Aug. 1640, with several of his kindred and adherents, by the treachery of his page, one Paris, an English boy, who perished in the conflagration. He was s. by his eldest son,

To prevent the junction of the two earldoms, it was contracted, however, at the period of her ladyship's nuptials with the Earl of Haddington, that the Earldom of Rothes should be inherited by the eldest son of the marriage, and the Earldom of Haddington by the second; in consequence of which contract, Lord Haddington was s. at his demise, in 1685, by his 2nd son,

HAMILTON, DUKE OF, (Alexander-Hamilton-Douglas, F.R.S. and S.A.,) Marquess of Hamilton, co. Suffolk, and Baron of Dutton, co. Susan-Catherine-Harriet, m. 27 Nov. 1832, to Henry, Earl of Lincoln, eldest son of the Duke of Newcastle.

His grace s. as 10th duke and 12th marquess, 16 Feb. 1816.

Lineage.

This family is said to be descended from Sir William de Hamelden, one of the younger sons of Robert de Belomont, 3rd Earl of Leicester, which Sir William de Hameldon's son, SIR GILBERT HAMILTON, having expressed himself at the court of EDWARD II. in admiration of KING ROBERT BRUCE, received a blow from John de Spencer, which led the following day to a encounter, wherein Spencer fell; and Hamilton sought security in Scotland, about the year 1323. Being closely pursued, however, in his flight, he and his servant changed clothes with two woodcutters, and taking their saws, were in the act of cutting through an oak-tree when his pursuers passed by. Perceiving his servant notice them, Sir Gilbert hastily cried out to him, "Through;" which word, with the oak, and saw through it, he took for his crest, in commemoration of his deliverance. This detail is, however, liable to many objections. Sir William Dugdale, in his account of the Earls of Leicester, is totally silent as to the descent of the Hamiltons from Robert, 3rd earl. That nobleman, according to Sir William, had three sons, Robert, 4th Earl of Leicester.

Roger, Bishop of St. Andrew's, and chancellor of Scotland; d. 1202.

That this last William pre-deceased his eldest brother without issue is evident from the circumstance of the great inheritance of the Earls of Leicester devolving, on the death of the 4th Earl, in 1204, upon his sisters, and Simon de Montfort, the husband of the eldest, having, in her right, the title of Earl of Leicester. (See BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.)

WILLIAM DE HAMILTON occurs frequently in Rymer's "Fœdera" from 1274 to 1306, being employed by EDWARD I. in various negotiations and transactions of importance. He was appointed dean of York in 1298, and HIGH-CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND, 16 Jan. 1305. This is the first of the name noticed in the "Fœdera;" it appears somewhat earlier, however, in Scotland;

GILBERT DE HAMILTON being on record in the Chartulary of Paisley in 1272. The younger son of this Gilbert, John, was ancestor of the Earls of Haddington; the elder,

SIR WALTER DE HAMILTON, swore fealty to EDWARD I. in 1292 and 1294. Attaching himself to KING ROBERT, he had divers grants of lands; amongst others, the Barony of Kenel (Kinneil) and Cadyow (now Hamilton), in the sheriffdom of Lanark. From this Sir Walter lineally descended

SIR JAMES HAMILTON, of Cadyow, who m. Janet, eldest dau. of Sir Alexander de Levinstoun, and had, with other issue,

JAMES, his successor.

Alexander, ancestor of the Hamiltons of Silverton Hill, Barts.

He was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JAMES HAMILTON, of Cadyow, who was created a Lord of Parliament, by royal charter, 28 June, 1445, as Lord Hamilton. This nobleman obtained a grant, dated 1 July, 1455, of the office of sheriff of the co. Lanark; and subsequently, grants of extensive territorial possessions. He m. 1st, Lady Euphemia Graham, eldest dau. of Patrick, Earl of Strathern, Dowager of Archibald, 5th Earl of Douglas, by whom he had an only dau., Elizabeth, m. to David, 4th Earl of Crawford. Lord Hamilton m. 2ndly, in 1474, Mary, eldest dau. of JAMES II., and relict of Thomas Boyd, Earl of Arran; and dying in 1479, was s. by his only son,

JAMES, 2nd lord; who obtained a charter of the lands and Earldom of Arran, dated 10 Aug. 1503, to himself and his heirs male, in failure of which, to revert to the crown. This nobleman, who took a prominent part in the affairs of Scotland, was constituted lieut.-gen. of the kingdom, warden of the marches, and one of the lords of regency, in 1517. And on the forfeiture of the Earl of Angus, he obtained the Lordship of Bothwell. His lordship m. 1st, Beatrix, dau. of John, Lord Drummond, and by her had an only dau., Margaret, m. to Andrew Stewart, Lord Evandale and Ochiltree.

He m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, sister of Alexander, Lord Hume, lord-high-chancellor of Scotland; from whom being divorced, he m. 3rdly, Janet, dau. of Sir David Beaton, of Crick, in Fifeshire, comptroller, temp. JAMES VI., and widow of Sir Robert Livingston, of Easter Weems. By this lady he had,

JAMES, his successor.

Helen, m. to Archibald, Earl of Argyll.

Jane, m. to Alexander, Earl of Glencairn.

The earl d. in 1530, and was s. by his son,

JAMES, 2nd earl. This nobleman, upon the death of JAMES V., in 1542, was unanimously chosen REGENT of Scotland, by the nobles assembled for that purpose, the public voice applauding their choice; the next year he was declared by parliament HEIR PRESUMPTIVE to the crown, appointed guardian to QUEEN MARY, and governor of the realm during her majesty's minority. In 1548, his lordship was invested with the French order of St. Michael, and made in 1549, by HENRY II. of France, DUKE OF CHATELHERAULT, in Poictou.* He m. Lady Margaret Douglas, eldest dau. of James, 3rd Earl of Morton, and had issue,

JAMES, his successor.

JOHN, successor to his brother.

* The regent was gratified by the Dukedom of Chatellerault, conferred upon him by the French king, with a considerable pension, in order to induce him to consent to the projected match between MARY, the infant Queen of Scotland, and the DAUPHIN of France.—Sir Walter Scott.

DUCHY OF CHATELLAUD.

The town of Chatellraud, in Poictou, conferred the title of viscount only until the reign of FRANCIS I., when that monarch, having joined unto it several other lordships, erected the whole, anno 1514, into a DUCHE PAIRIE, in favour of Francis de Bourbon, Viscount de Chatellraud, 2nd son of Gilbert de Bourbon, Comte de Montpensier, and de Claire de Gonzague. This prince dying the next year, without issue, was succeeded in the Duchy of Chatellraud by his brother, CHARLES, DUKE DE BOURBON, constable of France, upon whose death, (the constable was slain before Rome, 6 May, 1527,) and the confiscation of his possessions, the Duchy of Chatellraud was granted to CHARLES OF FRANCE, Duke de Angoulesme, 3rd son of FRANCIS I. On the death of this prince unm. in 1545, the Duchy of Chatellraud was reunited to the crown, and the peerage became extinct. In three years afterwards, 1548, HENRY II. conferred the duchy, without a peerage, upon James Hamilton, 2nd Earl of Arran, then regent of Scotland, who became Duke of Chatellraud, but his lordship having eventually surrendered the dignity to the French king, no member of the Hamilton family subsequently enjoyed the title. In 1563, CHARLES IX. conferred the Duchy of Chatellraud upon Diane, dau. of HENRY II., King of France, and wife of Francis de Montmerancy, marshal of France, with whom HENRY III. made an exchange, giving the Duchy of Angoulesme and the county of Ponthieu for the Duchy of Chatellraud, which he then conferred upon Francis de Bourbon, Duke of Montpensier. His son Henry, Duke of Montpensier and Chatellraud, left an only dau. and heiress, MARY DE BOURBON, Duchess of Montpensier and Chatellraud, who m. in 1626, GASTON-JEAN BAPTIST, of France, Duke of Orleans, and left an only dau. and heiress, ANNE-MARIE-LOUISA, of Orleans, Duchess of Montpensier and Chatellraud, who by her last will and testament, dated 27 Feb. 1685, bequeathed all her possessions to her cousin-german, PHILIP, of France, DUKE OF ORLEANS, and thus the Duchies of Montpensier and Chatellraud became vested in the line of Orleans.

Claude, ancestor of the Marquess of Abercorn.

Margaret, m. to Alexander, Lord Gordon, son and heir of George, Earl of Huntly, sans issue; and after his death, to James, Lord Fleming.

Anne, m. to George, Earl of Huntly, lord-high-chancellor of Scotland.

Jane, m. Hugh, 3rd Earl of Eglintoun.

His lordship d. 22 Jan. 1575,* when the Earldom of Arran (the Dukedom of Chatelherault having been surrendered to the crown of France) passed to his eldest son,

JAMES, 3rd earl. This nobleman, upon the arrival of QUEEN MARY, in 1561, openly aspired to her hand, but opposing the queen's free exercise of her religion, and entering a protestation against it, his lordship entirely forfeited her favour. His love, however, inflamed by disappointment, and his impatience exasperated by neglect, gradually preyed upon his reason, and after many extravagancies, broke out at last in ungovernable frenzy. He was, in consequence, declared to be in a state of insanity by the cognition of an inquest passed on a brief directed out of the court of Chancery, and the estates of his deceased father devolved upon his brother,

LORD JOHN HAMILTON, who, with his younger brother, Claude, was banished from Scotland in 1579; but returned in 1585, the act of forfeiture which had been passed being annulled, and was elevated to the peerage, 17 April, 1599, as Marquess of Hamilton. This nobleman remained steadfast in his allegiance to the unhappy Queen MARY; and so conscious was the unfortunate princess of his fidelity, that one of her latest acts was to transmit to him a ring (which is still treasured in the family) through the medium of an attendant. His lordship m. Margaret, only dau. of John, 8th Lord Glamis; and dying 12 April, 1604, was s. by his only son,

JAMES, 2nd marquess, K.G.; who upon the demise of his uncle, James (already mentioned as insane), Earl of Arran, in 1609, inherited that nobleman's honours. His lordship obtained an English peerage, 16 June, 1619, by the titles of Baron of Ennerdale, in Cumberland, and Earl of Cambridge, and was installed a knight of the Garter, at Windsor, 7 July, 1623. He m. Lady Anne Cunningham, dau. of James, 7th Earl of Glencairne, by whom he had issue,

JAMES, his successor.

WILLIAM, successor to his brother.

Anne, m. to Hugh, 7th Earl of Eglintoun.

Margaret, m. to John, Earl of Crawford and Lindsay.

Mary, m. to James, 2nd Earl of Queensberry.

He d. 2 March, 1625, and was s. by his eldest son,

JAMES, 3rd marquess, K.G.; who was created, 17 June, 1663, Marquess of Clydesdale; and on 12 April, 1643, DUKE OF HAMILTON, to him, and the heirs male of his body; and in default thereof, to his brother, William, Earl of Lanark, and his male issue; and in default of such issue, to the eldest daughter of the said James, Duke of Hamilton, and her male issue; and in default of such issue, to the heirs whatsoever of the said James's body. * Of this nobleman, so conspicuous in Scottish history, Robertson gives the following character:—

"He was in almost everything the reverse of Cardinal Beaton; he was neither infected with ambition, nor inclined to cruelty. The love of ease extinguished the former, the softness of his temper preserved him from the latter; timidity and irresolution were his predominant failings; the one occasioned by his natural constitution, and the other arising from a consciousness that his abilities were not equal to his station. With these dispositions he might have enjoyed and adorned private life, but his public conduct was without courage, or dignity, or consistence; the perpetual slave of his own fears, and, by consequence, the perpetual tool of those who found their advantage in practising upon them. But as no other person could be set in opposition to the cardinal with any probability of success, the nation declared in his favour with so general a consent that the artifices of his rival could not withstand his united strength."

The duke received a mortal wound in the service of CHARLES II. at the unfortunate battle of Worcester; and by CROMWELL'S Act of Grace, passed in 1654, he was excepted from all benefit thereof, and his estates forfeited, reserving out of them £400 a-year for his duchess for life, and after her death, £100 a-year each to his four daus., and their heirs for ever. His grace's own honours fell under the attainder, and his English dignities expired, while the Dukedom of Hamilton, in virtue of the patent of 1643, devolved upon (the eldest dau. of James, the 1st duke) his niece,

LADY ANNE HAMILTON, as Duchess of Hamilton, who married

LORD WILLIAM DOUGLAS, eldest son of William, 1st Marquess of Douglas, by his 2nd wife, Lady Mary Gordon, 3rd dau. of George, 1st Marquess of Huntly, and obtained, by petition, for her husband, in 1660, the title of Duke of Hamilton for life. His grace was installed a knight of the Garter, and created an English peer, 11 Sept. 1711, as Baron of Dutton, co. Chester, and DUKE OF BRANDON, co. The duke having accepted a challenge from Charles, Lord Mohun, engaged that nobleman in Hyde Park, on Sunday, 15 Nov. 1712; and having slain his opponent, fell himself, it was suspected, through the treachery of Gen. Macartney, Lord Mohun's second, for whose apprehension a reward of £500 was subsequently offered; the General eventually surrendering, was tried, 18 June, 1716, in the court of King's Bench, and acquitted of the murder, but found guilty of manslaughter. JAMES-GEORGE, 7th duke; who s. to the Marquisate of Douglas and Earldom of Angus upon the demise of Archibald, last Duke of Douglas, in 1761. The guardians of his grace (one of whom, Andrew Stuart, Esq., published, in 1773, a series of letters to Lord Mansfield, remonstrating on the course taken in this affair by his lordship) asserted his right to the Douglas estates upon the ground that Mr. Stewart, son and heir of Lady Jane Stewart, sister of the Duke of Douglas, was not her son, and the celebrated "Douglas cause" ensued. (See Lord Douglas, of Douglas.)

His grace dying unm. 7 July, 1769, the honours devolved upon his brother,

DOUGLAS, 6th duke; who, in 1782, again mooted the point decided against his predecessor, James, 4th duke, relative to his seat in the House of Lords; and obtaining, after the opinion of the judges had been taken, a resolution in his favour, was summoned to the House of Lords, as Duke of Brandon. Lineage.

This branch of the Hamiltons springs from

ALEXANDER DE HAMILTON, 2nd son of Sir James Hamilton, Lord of Cadyow, and brother of Sir James, afterwards Lord Hamilton. He had a charter, in 1449, from Alexander, Earl of Crawford, wherein he was styled, "Alexander de Hamilton, of Quhitecamp, afterwards Silverton-hill. In a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates granted to his brother, the 1st Lord Hamilton, of date 23 Oct. 1455, this Alexander was called next in succession after his brother's dau. Elizabeth, and his natural sons.
 He appears to have left issue, two sons,

JAMES, his heir.

William, ancestor of the Hamiltons of Westport.

The elder son,

JAMES HAMILTON, of Silvertonhill, in a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates granted to James, 1st Earl of Arran, of date 16 Jan. 1512-13, was called next in succession after Sir James Hamilton, of Fynnert, Patrick Hamilton, of Kineavil, and John Hamilton, of Brumehill.
 He m. a dau. of the family of Douglas, with whom he got the lands of Newton, in the barony of Drumsarguard, and by whom he had issue,

JOHN, his heir.

A dau., m. to James, Viscount Teviot.

He was s. by his son,

JOHN HAMILTON, designed of Newton, who obtained from Hugh, Lord Somerville, a charter of the lands of Tweedie, Catcastle, &c., confirmed under the great seal, of the date 26 March, 1531. He m. a dau. of Sir John Somerville, of Quodquan, by whom he had issue,

ANDREW.

Margaret, m. to Archibald Hamilton, of Raplock.

He d. 1535, and was s. by his grandson,

ANDREW HAMILTON, who, on his father's resignation, had a charter—"Andreas Hamilton, filio et hæredi apparenti James Hamilton de Newton, terrarum de Gosling-town, infra Baroniam, de Stonehouse. Dated 17 Sept.
 1528." He d. before his father, and left issue,

ANDREW.

Alexander, tutor of Silvertonhill, who carried on the line of this family.

John Hamilton, of Cubardy.

The eldest son,

ANDREW HAMILTON, of Silvertonhill, had a charter under the great seal—"Andreas Hamilton, nepoti hæredi et successori Joannis Hamilton de Newton, terrarum de Madinburn, Overtoun, &c. Dated 19 Nov. 1541." He had another charter, of the same date, of the lands of Newton, and superiority of the lands of Braconrig. In a charter of settlement of the Hamilton estates granted to the Duke of Chatelherault, of the date 15 Sept. 1540, he was called next in succession after David Hamilton, of Brumehill.
 He m. a dau. of James Hamilton, of Stanehouse; and d. in the beginning of the reign of QUEEN MARY, leaving issue an infant son,

ANDREW HAMILTON, of Silvertonhill, who was carefully educated under the guardianship of his uncle, Alexander.
 He m. Elspeth, a dau. of Baillie, of Carfin, by whom he had issue, several children, but only one son survived him,

FRANCIS HAMILTON, of Silvertonhill, a very enthusiastic, wrong-headed man: he fancied himself bewitched by Dame Isabel Boyd, Lady Blair, which appears by several extravagant petitions to parliament from him in 1641. He d. not long after this, having greatly squandered away the family estate; and as he never was married, this branch of the family expired, and the representation devolved on the descendants of his grand-uncle, Alexander;

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, tutor of Silvertonhill, got from his father the lands of Goslingtown, which sometime continued to be the title of his family. He had a charter under the great seal—"Alexandro Hamilton, tutori de Sil. terrarum de Longkip, &c. Dated 16 Jan. 1545." He
m. Catherine Hamilton, by whom he had issue,

SIR ANDREW HAMILTON, of Goslingtown. This gentleman was a faithful and loyal subject of QUEEN MARY, who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He was at the battle of Langsyde, for which he was attainted; but had his possessions restored to him by the treaty of Perth, in 1572. He d. in 1592, leaving issue, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT HAMILTON, of Goslingtown, who m. Elizabeth, dau., and at length sole heir, of Sir William Baillie, of Provan; and d. in 1642, leaving issue, and was s. by his 2nd son,

EDWARD HAMILTON, designed first, of Balgray, afterwards of Silvertonhill. He had a charter under the great seal of the lands of Tweedie, Goslingtown, Provan, &c., containing an entail, first to himself and the heirs male of his body, which failing, to his brother James, &c., dated 8 July, 1635. In this charter there are some lands mentioned which had been evicted from Francis Hamilton, of Silvertonhill, by John Crawford, and again acquired by Edward, all of which are now confirmed to him; and he accordingly took the title of Silvertonhill, which afterwards continued to be that of the family. He d. in 1649, and was s. by his son,

I. SIR ROBERT HAMILTON, of Silvertonhill, a steady loyalist, and in great favour with CHARLES I., who made him a Baronet of Nova Scotia about the year 1646. He
m. the Hon. Anne Hamilton, 2nd dau. of John, 1st Lord Belhaven, by whom he had, with other issue, his successor,

II. SIR ROBERT, of Silvertonhill, who embraced a military life, and rose to the rank of colonel in the army; dying at Fort William, in 1708, he was s. by his eldest surviving son,

III. SIR JOHN, who d. in 1748, leaving issue. The title came to his eldest son,

IV. SIR ROBERT. This gentleman having adopted the profession of arms, attained the rank of lieut.-gen., and was col. of the 108th foot, a regiment reduced at the peace in 1763, when General Hamilton was appointed to the colonelcy of the 40th. Sir Robert m. 1st, Mary, dau.

CLAUD HAMILTON, of Strabane and Montalony, who was father of

I. JOHN-JAMES HAMILTON, b. 4 Aug. 1755, a distinguished military commander. This gallant officer entered upon active service at an unusually early age, and for a period of upwards of fifty years, ending with the general peace of 1815, he was never unemployed, was never on half-pay, and what is perhaps without parallel in the British army, he was never, during more than half a century, relieved from duty by official leave of absence, excepting for one fortnight only,—a relaxation to which he was solely prompted by filial affection. Having distinguished himself by extraordinary intrepidity and judgment at the escalade of the fortress of Gualiar, the storming of the strong forts of Lahar and Bangalore, and in many similar daring exploits, he was permitted, while still extremely young, and while even in the subordinate situation of lieutenant, to raise an Indian regiment; a favour which, as it had never before, and has never since, been conferred upon any officer beneath the rank of colonel, marks in the very strongest manner the high sense entertained of his personal merits. In 1795, he commanded a light brigade at the capture of St. Domingo; and his services elsewhere in the West Indies were likewise eminently conspicuous. While in Africa, it devolved upon him, as military commissioner, to make, in 1803, the mortifying surrender to the Dutch of our newly-acquired territory at the Cape of Good Hope. Being appointed, in 1806, to the command of the Northern District of Ireland, the city of Londonderry being the head-quarters of his staff, he evinced, in a manner at once openly decisive and wholly unprecedented, his respect for the laws and tranquillity of his country, and his generous abhorrence of wanton insult towards his unprotected and inoffensive catholic fellow-subjects, by forcibly suppressing all exhibitions of religious party triumph. During the conflict in Spain, Portugal, and France, his science and courage were still more importantly exhibited in discharging the many arduous duties of the trust imposed on him by the Duke of Wellington, who confided to his command a large division of the allied army. While inspector-general of Portugal, the national force of that kingdom became, through his indefatigable exertions, as effective and as distinguished for high discipline, as it had previously been for want of energy and military character. For this and other valuable services, his Portuguese Majesty conferred upon him the insignia of the highest class of the royal order of the Tower and Sword. Nor did his active merit as a British general, both there and in Spain, pass unrecorded in the Duke of Wellington's official dispatches. Few achievements, even amidst numberless scenes of brilliant exploit, were more gallant or more deservedly the theme of universal admiration than his unexampled and almost incredible defence of the unfortified town and dismantled castle of Alba de Tormes, in the latter kingdom, with fifteen hundred men, exhausted by a fatiguing retreat, against the pursuing army of Marshal Soult, fifteen thousand strong and supported by twenty pieces of artillery. For this most important service the dignity of a Baronet of Great Britain was conferred upon him by patent, 21 Dec. 1814; and he likewise received his majesty's permission to bear an augmentation in his arms commemorative of this signal instance of military skill and personal heroism. Sir James m. 1 May, 1794, Emily-Sophia, dau. of George-Paul Monck, Esq. and Lady Araminta Beresford, 6th dau. of Marcus, 1st Earl of Tyrone, by whom he had issue, HANMER, SIR JOHN, of Hanmer, co. Flint; born 22 Dec. 1809; succeeded as 3rd bart., at the decease of his grandfather, 4 Oct. 1828; married 3 September, 1833, Georgiana, youngest dau. of Sir George Chetwynd, Bart. of Grendon Hall, Warwickshire.

Lineage.

In the reign of EDWARD I.,

SIR JOHN DE HANMERE, Knt., was appointed governor of Carnarvon Castle. This gentleman, who was possessed of Hanmer in the year 1258, m. Hawys, dau. of Eynion ap-Griffith ap-Gwynwynwyn, Lord of Powis, from which marriage the descent in the male line is unbroken to the present day. Sir John was one of the first who assumed their surname from the place of their residence, as appears by a letter from the celebrated Campden to Mr. John Hanmer, preserved among the Harleian manuscripts in the British Museum. The grandson of Sir John Hanmer,

SIR DAVID HANMER, was appointed a judge in the court of King's Bench in the 6th year of RICHARD II., and received the honour of knighthood from that monarch. His lordship left a dau., Margaret, m. to the famed Owen Glendower, and a son and successor,

SIR JOHN HANMER, Knt., who fell under the banner of his brother-in-law at the battle of Shrewsbury. The grandson of this Sir John,

RICHARD HANMER, Esq. of Hanmer, m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Roger Kynaston, of Hordley, (by Elizabeth, dau. of Henry Grey, Earl of Tankerville, by Antigone, dau. of Humphrey Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester,) and had a son and successor,

SIR THOMAS HANMER, who received the honour of knighthood from HENRY VIII. at Boulogne. He m. Jane, dau. of Sir Randle Brereton, Knt., and left a son,

SIR THOMAS HANMER, knighted, by royal mandate, 1st EDWARD VI.; whose son,

JOHN HANMER, Esq. of Hanmer, M.P. for the town of Flint, m. Jane, dau. of Sir John Salisbury, of Llewenny, Knt., and left issue,

SIR THOMAS HANMER, Knt., who was M.P. for the co. of Flint, and one of the council of the president of the Marches of Wales. He also attended the Earl of Derby into France with the ensigns of the Garter to HENRY III. from QUEEN ELIZABETH; and was himself knighted by JAMES I. in 1603. He m. 1st, Anne, dau. of John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Sir Thomas Mostyn, Knt. of Mostyn, by whom he had a son and successor,

SIR JOHN HANMER, Knt., who was created a Baronet, 8 July, 1620, and represented the co. of Flint in parliament in 1621. Sir John was s. by an only son,

SIR THOMAS HANMER, M.P. for the co. of Flint, and cup-bearer to CHARLES I., in whose cause he raised, during the civil war, two troops of horse. Sir Thomas was to have been one of the knights of the Royal Oak had the institution of that order actually taken place. He m. 1st, Elizabeth Baker,* of Wittingham, co. Suffolk, maid-of-honour to QUEEN HENRIETTA-MARIA, by whom he left a son, JOHN; and 2ndly, Susan, dau. of Sir William Hervey, Knt. of Ickworth, by whom he also left issue. He was s. in 1678, by his elder son,

SIR JOHN HANMER, M.P. for the co. of Flint, and col. of a regiment, under KING WILLIAM, at the battle of the Boyne. Sir John attained the rank of major-gen. in the army; but dying without issue, in 1701, the title devolved upon his nephew,

SIR THOMAS HANMER, b. in 1676, son of William Hanmer, Esq., (eldest son of Sir Thomas, the 2nd bart., by his 2nd marriage,) by his wife, Peregrine, sister and heir of Sir Henry North, Bart.† of Mildenhall. Sir Thomas Hanmer was returned to parliament, at the accession of QUEEN ANNE, for the co. of Flint; elected, in 1707, for the co. of Suffolk; and chosen speaker of the House of Commons in 1712. Alluding to this latter event, Dr. Johnson says:

Illustrious age! how bright thy glories shone
When Hanmer filled the chair and Anne the throne.

Sir Thomas was no less distinguished as a man of letters than a statesman; and a superb edition of Shakspeare's Plays, with his annotations, published by the University of Oxford, (to which he presented the MS.,) in six vols., fully establish his refined taste and critical acumen. Sir Thomas m. 1st, in 1698, Isabella, Duchess-Dowager of Grafton, only dau. and heir of Henry Bennet, Earl of Arlington, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Thomas Folkes, Esq. of Barton, co. "Wee are upon an engagement very difficult; the enemie hath blocked up our way att the passe, at Copperspeth, through which wee cannot gett without almost a miracle. He lieth so upon the hills that we knowe not how to come that way without great difficulty; and our lying here dayly consumeth our men, who fall sick beyond imagination. I perceive your forces are not in a capacitye for present reliefe; wherefore (whatever becomes of us) itt will be well for you to get what forces you can together in the south, to helpe what they can; the businesse nearly concerneth all good people. If your forces had been in readiness to have fallen upon the back of Copperspeth, itt might have occasioned supplies to come to us, but the only wise God knows what is best; all shall work for good; our spirits are comfortable, (praised be the Lord, of whose mercy we have had large experience.) Indeed, do you get together what forces you can against them; send to friends in the south to help with more. Lett H. Vane know what I write. I would not make it publick, least danger should accrue thereby. You know what use to make hereof. Let me hear from you. I rest your servant.

"It is difficult for me to send to you: let me heare from you after.

PAULYN-REGINALD-SERLO, Earl of Rawdon, b. 2 June, 1832.

His lordship inherited as 2nd marquess, upon the demise of his father, 28 Nov. 1826.

Lineage.

The illustrious family of Rawdon deduces the pedigree from Paulinus de Rawdon, to whom WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR granted considerable estates (part of which the present marquess enjoys) by the following deed:—

“I, William Kyng, the thurd yere of my reign,
Give to Paulyn Roydon, Hope and Hopetowne,
With all the bounds both up and downe,
From heven to yerthe, from yerthe to hel,
For the and thynne ther to dwel,
As truly as this kingright is myn;
For a crossebow and an arrow,
When I sal come to hunt on Yarrow.
And in token that this thing is sooth
I bit the whyt wax with my tooth
Before Meg, Mawd, and Margery,
And my third sonne, Henry.”

This Paulyn, or Paulinus, commanded a band of archers in the Norman invading army, and derived his surname of Rawdon from the lands of that denomination, near Leeds, which constituted a portion of the royal grant. From this successful soldier lineally sprang, (19th in descent,) through a line of eminent ancestors,

GEORGE RAWDON, Esq., (only son of Francis Rawdon, Esq. of Rawdon,) who settled in Ireland, and took an active part, as a military commander, during the rebellion, in 1641, in that kingdom; and subsequently, until his decease in 1684, in the general affairs of Ireland. The elder,

SIR EDWARD SEYMOUR, who received the honour of knighthood for his conduct in the battle of Musselburgh, and was seated at Berry Pomeroy, in Devonshire, obtained, in the 7th EDWARD VI., an act of parliament restoring him in blood, so far as to enable him to enjoy lands that might subsequently come to him from any collateral ancestor. Sir Edward was sheriff of Devon in the 25th ELIZABETH. He m. Mary, dau. of Mr. Justice Walsh, of the court of Common Pleas, and was s. by his son,

In Feb. 1672-3, he was unanimously chosen SPEAKER of the Long Parliament, on the resignation of Sir Job Charlerton. In the April following, he was sworn of the privy-council, and made soon after treasurer of the navy. FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Esq., who also assumed the surname and arms of CONWAY, and was elevated to the peerage, 17 March, 1702-3, as Lord Conway, Baron Conway, of Ragley, co. Warwick. Part of his extensive inheritance being situated in the north of Ireland, his lordship was created a peer of that kingdom likewise, 16 Oct. 1803, by the title of *Baron Conway, of Killultagh, co. Sir William m. 2ndly, 30 Aug. 1813, Emma, youngest dau. of the late Patrick Tobin, Esq. of the Isle of Man. Sir William Hillary passed much of his early life upon the continent of Europe, partly with H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, to whom he is equerry. Upon the renewal of the war with France, in 1803, Sir William raised, at his own expense, and many years commanded, the 1st Essex legion of infantry and cavalry, amounting to 1400 men, the largest force then offered by any private individual for the defence of the country; in consideration of which, and other services, the baronetage was conferred by the personal direction of his majesty KING GEORGE III. The baronet has since become the projector and, through his successful efforts, happily, the founder of the Royal National Institution for the Preservation of Life from Shipwreck.

Lineage.

There are few names of greater antiquity in Italy, France, and England, than that of Hilary, St. Hilaire, or St. Hillary, as it has been variously written. In the fifth century, according to the Roman calendar, it gave a successor to St. Peter; and in the third, fourth, and fifth centuries, no less than three saints to the church of Rome, two of whom are recorded as of ancient and noble families. The name was ennobled in France long before the time of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and it still so continues in the person of the Marquess St. Hilaire, of Normandy.

HILLARY, afterwards Bishop of Chichester, accompanied HENRY II. into England; and, according to Fuller, "was in great favour with that monarch, and had charge of the shire of Surrey."

Dugdale, in his Baronetage, states the marriage of Roger, Earl of St. Clare, with MAUD, dau. of James de St. Hillary. These and numerous other proofs which could be adduced, confirm the ancient dignity and high importance of the family. The Hillarys subsequently settled in the cos. of Warwick and Stafford, and continued to maintain their rank in those shires until the era of the Reformation, when the last and remaining branch of the family removed into Wensley Dale, in the North Riding of the co. York, and purchased estates there.

WILLIAM HILLARY, of Wensley, m. in 1561, Elizabeth Jaykes, and was s. by his son,

MATTHEW HILLARY, of Wensley; whose grandson,

WILLIAM HILLARY, Esq., m. for his 2nd wife, Anne, only child of Trinian Metcalfe, Esq. of Birkkrigg, (by whom the estates of Birkkrigg and Rigg House came into the Hillary family,) and was s. by his only child,

RICHARD HILLARY, Esq., b. in 1703; m. in 1764, Hannah, dau. of George Wynne, Esq., by Elizabeth Lascelles, of the co. York, by whom he had surviving issue, Richard, who s. to his father's Yorkshire and Jamaica estates; and d. unm. at the latter place, 17 Nov. 1803, being a member, at that time, of the House of Assembly of the island.

WILLIAM, present bart., and last remaining male representative and heir of this ancient family.

Lineage.

This noble family and that of Fox, Earls of Ilchester, have had a common progenitor in

SIR STEPHEN FOX, a distinguished senator during the reigns of CHARLES II., JAMES II., WILLIAM III., and QUEEN ANNE. By his marriage, in 1703, with Christian, dau. of the Rev. Charles Hope, of Naseby, co. Lincoln, this gentleman had two sons: Stephen, created Earl of Ilchester, (see that dignity;) and

HENRY FOX, who filled several high official situations in the reign of GEORGE II., (amongst others, those of secretary at war, and secretary of state,) from 1735, when he was first returned to parliament for Hendon, until the accession of his majesty GEORGE III., at which period he was a member of the privy-council, and enjoyed the office of paymaster-general to the forces, but which he soon afterwards resigned. The right hon. gentleman m. in 1744, Georgiana-Carolina, eldest dau. of Charles, 2nd Duke of Richmond, and had issue,

I. STEPHEN, his successor.

II. CHARLES-JAMES, (b. Jan. O.S. 1748-9,) one of the most eminent statesmen of modern times, distinguished alike by the soundness of his political principles, the force of his senatorial eloquence, and the ardour of his attachment to freedom. Mr. Fox first came into parliament from Midhurst, in 1768, before he was of age. In 1770, he was appointed a lord of the Admiralty, which post he retained till May, 1772. In 1773, he was made lord of the Treasury, an office he resigned the following year, to oppose Lord North and the American war. Upon the fall of the North administration, March, 1782, Mr. Fox was constituted SECRETARY OF STATE, but held the seals only till the death of Lord Rockingham, in the following July. When the brief-lived Lansdowne cabinet ceased, Mr. Fox formed the celebrated coalition with Lord North, and became again secretary of state, 2 April, 1783. His power was as fleeting, however, as before, and he retired on the 19th of Dec. following, to make room for Mr. Pitt, who at once became premier. After the death of Mr. Pitt, Mr. Fox came again into office, and he died, deeply lamented, in 1806, when nominally secretary of state for foreign affairs, but virtually prime minister of England. He had m. Elizabeth-Bridget Armstead, but had no issue.

HOME, EARL OF, (Alexander Ramey-Home,) Baron Home, and Baron of Dunglas, in the peerage of Scotland; and one of the representative lords; lord-lieut. of the co. Berwick, and col. of its militia; b. 11 Nov. 1769; s. as 10th earl, upon the demise of his father, 8 Oct. 1786; m. 9 Nov. 1798, Elizabeth, 2nd dau. of Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry, by whom he has one surviving son,

COSPATRICK-ALEXANDER, Lord Dunglas, b. 27 Oct. 1799; m. 4 December, 1832, the Hon. Lucy-Elizabeth Montague, eldest dau. of Lord Montague, and has two sons; of whom the elder,

CHARLES-ALEXANDER, b. 11 April, 1834.

The earl assumed the surname of his maternal grandfather, "Ramey," in addition to that of Home, by royal permission, in 1814.

Lineage.

This noble family yields to few of its native country in antiquity of descent, being a branch of the great house of Dunbar and March, springing from

The Hon. PATRICK DUNBAR, second son of Cospatrick, Earl of Dunbar and March; whose son,

WILLIAM DUNBAR, m. for his second wife, Ada, dau. of Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, and widow of Courtenay, who had obtained from her father the lands of Home in free marriage. Courtenay d. s. p., and the lady brought those lands to her second husband, whence his posterity assumed the name of "HOME." This Ada made a grant to the monastery of Kelso, for the salvation of her soul and the souls of her father and mother, prior to the year 1240. The son of her marriage with William Dunbar,

WILLIAM DE HOME, confirmed, under that designation, the grant of his mother to the Abbot of Kelso, in 1268. From this William lineally descended

SIR ALEXANDER HOME, of Home, who founded the collegiate church of Dunglas, for a provost and several prebendaries. He m. Mariota, dau. and heir of Sir Robert Lauder, of Bass, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ALEXANDER HOME, of Home, who was ambassador-extraordinary to England in 1459, and was created lord of parliament, as Baron Home, 2 Aug. 1473. He m. 1st, Mariota, dau. and heir of Landals, of Landals, in Berwickshire, by whom he had, with other issue,

ALEXANDER, master of Home; who m. Elizabeth Hepburn; and dying before his father, left issue,

ALEXANDER, 2nd baron; who m. Nicholas, dau. of George Ker, of Samuelton; and dying in 1506, was s. by his eldest son, ALEXANDER, 3rd baron. This nobleman commanded the van, with the Earl of Huntly, at the battle of Flodden Field, dispersed the English opposed to him, and was one of the few who escaped the carnage of that disastrous day. His lordship joined the queen-dowager and her husband, Angus, in 1515, and embraced the English interest in opposition to the Regent Albany, who took Home Castle and Fast Castle, the fortlets of Lord Home, and ravaged his lands. Albany having caused the French ambassador to offer an amnesty, and to send a pardon to Lord Home, with a request of a conference, he agreed to meet the Regent at Dunglas, where he was instantly arrested, and committed to Edinburgh Castle, then under the governorship of the Earl of Arran; but Lord Home prevailed on Arran to permit him to escape, and to accompany him to the borders. Lord Home made his peace with the regent in 1516, and was restored to his honours and estates; but visiting the court in the September of that year, with his brother, William, they were arrested, tried for treason, and convicted. Lord Home was executed, 8 Oct. 1516, his head placed on the tolbooth of Edinburgh, and his honours and estates forfeited to the crown. His brother suffered the next day. His lordship left by his wife, Agnes Stewart, two daughters,

He was subsequently appointed king's-advocate, and created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 11 Feb. 1628. (See lineage of Sir John Hope, Bart., the chief of the house of Hope, for a further account of this learned person.) Sir Thomas left a very large family; from the eldest son of which descend the Hopes of Craighall. The sixth son, Lanark, acquired the valuable mines there, and applying himself to mineralogy, brought the art of mining to the highest perfection ever before known in Scotland. Lineage.

The family of Lord Howden is of the most ancient Welsh origin, claiming descent from Caradoc, and the earliest Princes of Wales. After the final defeat of Cradoc (the Caractacus of the Romans) near a mountain still called Caer Caradoc, in the neighbourhood of Shrewsbury, his descendants settled partly in Leicestershire, and partly in Staffordshire, but a larger portion went as far north as Richmond, in Yorkshire; some even crossed the sea, and took refuge in Brittany, where a village, not far from Rennes, still bears their name. His lordship is descended from a younger son of

SIR MATTHEW CRADOCK, of Caversal Castle, co. Stafford, and his wife, the Lady Katherine Gordon, called the White Rose of Scotland, upon whose tomb, in St. Herbert's Isle, Swansea Church, the following inscription appears:—"Here lie Sir Matthew Cradock, Knt., sometime Deputie unto the Right Honorable Charles, Erle of Worcester, in the countie of Glamorgan: R. Attor—& R. Chancellor of the same, Steward of Gower and Helvie; and my Lady Katherine his wife."

Sir Matthew Cradock and his lady above mentioned had two daughters. The elder, Mary, was m. to Sir Edward Herbert, son of the 1st Earl of Pembroke; and from that union descended the Earls of Pembroke, and Powis, Hans Stanley, Esq., George Price, Esq., &c. The younger, less fortunate, espoused the famous Perkin Warbeck, whose life was as extraordinary as his death was ignominious, though his real pretensions are to this day a subject of dispute.

The elder branches of the Cradocks of Staffordshire terminated in heiresses, by whom the estates were carried into other families.

Lineage.

The original surname of this very ancient family was Tristram, and it is said to have been exchanged for the present one, of ST. LAWRENCE, under the following circumstances:—A member of the house of Tristram having the command of an army against the invaders of his native soil, attacked and totally routed them on St. Laurence's day, near Clontarffe, and assumed, in consequence of a vow made previously to the battle, the name of the saint, which his descendants have ever since borne. The sword with which this warrior fought and vanquished still hangs in the hall of Howth, where the family has resided since its first arrival in Ireland, a period of six centuries at least.

SIR AMORICUS TRISTRAM, the brother-in-law and companion in arms of Sir John Courcy, having, in the year 1177, effected a landing at Howth, defeated the Irish in a pitched battle, at the bridge of Ivora, and obtained the lands and barony (by tenure) of Howth, as a reward for his distinguished valour during the conflict. After this successful commencement, Sir Amoricus, with his brother-in-law, Sir John Courcy, reduced the whole province of Ulster; but in 1189, when Sir John was removed from the government of Ireland by RICHARD I., Sir Amoricus, who was then in Connaught, being attacked by O'Connor, the king of that province, and overwhelmed by numbers, himself and his whole party, consisting of thirty knights and two hundred infantry, perished to a man. Prior to the battle, the horse evincing a disposition to seek safety in flight, Sir Amoricus thus addressed them:—"Who will may save his life by flight on horseback if he can; but, assuredly, my heart will not suffer me to leave these my poor friends in their necessity, with whom I had rather die in honour than live in dispraise; but to all those that will stand this day, I can say no more than this,—as our lives shall together depart, so shall my soul accompany with yours to the latter day; and in doing this I give you all my most humble thanks, and this day will live and die in the field. And my fellows and friends, all bear witness with me the latter day, that to God I render and yield my soul; my service to my natural prince; my heart to my brother, Sir John Courcy, and my wife; my force, might, pain, and good will, to my poor friends and fellows here." This he spoke kneeling, and kissing the cross of his sword, thrust it through his horse, saying,

"He should never serve against them, with whom he so worthily and truly had served afore." His example was followed by all the horsemen, except two young gentlemen, whom he ordered to stand upon the next hill to witness the conflict, and after it was over, to convey the news to his brother; which they accordingly did, and testified all the circumstances of this transaction. "Thus died Sir Amorey Tristram, who, among a thousand knights, might be chosen for beauty and heroic courage, for humility and courtesy to his inferiors, yielding to none but in the way of gentleness." By the sister of Sir John Courcy, Earl of Ulster, Sir Amorey left three sons, the two younger of whom were slain on Good Friday, 1203, in assisting their uncle Courcy against Lacie's men, in the churchyard of Downpatrick; and the eldest,

SIR NICHOLAS FITZ AMOREY, 2nd baron, was obliged to content himself with the lands of Howth, and relinquished to religious houses the conquests of his father in Ulster. From this Sir Nicholas the barony descended uninterruptedly to

SIR ROBERT ST. LAWRENCE, the 15th baron; who was appointed, 23 Feb. 1467, chancellor of the green-wax of the Exchequer; and constituted, 10 July, 1483, LORD-CHANCELLOR OF IRELAND. His lordship m. Joan, 2nd dau. of Edward Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, by whom he had four sons and two daus.; and the deed of feoffment by which he settled all his estates on trustees for the uses and purposes of that marriage, and which contains most of the names of the prime nobility of England, as the lady's trustees, is duly enrolled in Ireland. By this marriage Lord Howth's descendants derived descent from EDW. III., and became inheritors of the blood royal. Further, it is well deserving here of observation, that it was formerly and long considered that the instrument by which the children of John of Gaunt, "time-honoured Lancaster," were legitimated had a special reservation of their right to inherit the royal dignity, but the accuracy of modern research has discovered the fallacy of this opinion, and torn away the mystery with which the fact was surrounded. The act of parliament confirming the legitimation was lately found, on strict examination, to contain no such clause or reservation; and consequently, though KING HENRY IV.'s right to the throne became questionable, if, as was thought, any of the Duke of Lancaster's children happened to have been born before him, and he thereby had a positive interest in inserting such a clause in his patents, and did so, yet in England, the king's letters, or patents, never have had the power to annul or defeat the express statute law of the realm. Hence, HENRY VII. but truly described himself when he said, he was heir lineal of John of Gaunt, and representative of the house of Lancaster. The second son, Thomas, was appointed, in 1532, attorney-general of Ireland; and in 1535, second justice of the court of King's Bench. He left an only dau., Margaret, m. to William, son of Patrick Birmingham, chief-justice of the King's Bench in 1530. Sir Robert was s. by his eldest son,

SIR NICHOLAS ST. LAWRENCE, the 16th baron. This nobleman, for his fidelity to HENRY VII., in the affair of Lambert Simnel, was presented by that monarch with three hundred pieces of gold, and confirmed by charter, dated 4 March, 1489, in the lands of Howth, &c. He subsequently attended the Lord-Deputy Kildare at the famous battle of Knocktough, in Connaught, fought against the Irish, 19 Aug. 1504, where his lordship headed the billmen on foot. Sir Nicholas was made Lord Chancellor of Ireland, 10 June, 1509; and dying in 1526, was s. by his eldest son by his first wife, Genet, only dau. of Sir Christopher Plunkett, 3rd Lord of Killeen,

SIR CHRISTOPHER ST. LAWRENCE, the 17th baron; who was s. by his eldest son,

EDWARD, 18th baron. This nobleman dying without male issue, in 1549, was s. by his brother,

SIR RICHARD ST. LAWRENCE, 19th baron; at whose decease without issue, 1558, the lineal heirship of whatever honours accrued to the family of Lord Robert's inter-marriage as above, with Joan, one of the co-heirs of "the most illustrious and powerful Prince Edward, Duke and Earl of Somerset, Marquess of Dorset, and Earl of Moreton, by his wife the noble Princess Eleanora, dau. and co-heir of the most noble Lord Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick and Albemarle," (as the record has it,) devolved on Lord Richard's two sisters, ANNE, wife of B. Dillon, Esq. of Keptoch, and Alison, wife of John Goulding, Esq., while the Irish dynasty of Baron of Howth passed over undisputedly to the nearest heir male of the family, according to the usual course. This happened to be his brother,

CHRISTOPHER, 20th baron, generally called the "blind lord;" who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir John Plunket, of Beaulieu, by his wife, Anne, dau. of Robert Barnewall, Esq. of Dromenagh; and was s. at his decease, in 1589, by his eldest son, HUNTINGDON.

HUNTINGDON, EARL OF, (Francis-Theophilus-Henry Hastings,) b. 28 Nov. 1808; s. as 12th earl, at the decease of his father, 9 Dec. 1828; m. 8 Sept. 1835, Elizabeth-Anne, dau. and heir of the late Richard Power, Esq. of Clashmore, co. Waterford.

Lineage.

This illustrious house, so renowned in the cabinet and the field, derives its surname from the sea-port of Hastings, in Sussex, (the lastage of which its senior members farmed for many years from the crown,) and deduces its pedigree from Robert de Hastings, Portgrave of Hastings, Lord of Fillongley, in Warwickshire, and dispensator, or steward, to WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. The successor of this Robert was

WALTER DE HASTINGS, who became steward to HENRY I., as owner of the manor of Ashill, co. Norfolk, a grant from the crown, upon the condition of taking care of the naperie (table linen) at the coronation. From this Walter descended

HENRY, LORD HASTINGS, who m. Ada, 4th dau. of David, Earl of Huntingdon, by Maud, dau. of Hugh, and sister and co-heir of Ranulph, Earl of Chester, (refer to BURKE's Extinct and Dormant Peerage, article Meschines, Earls of Chester,) and was s. by his only son,

HENRY, LORD HASTINGS, who adhering to Simon Montford, Earl of Leicester, against HENRY III., was knighted, and was made governor, by that nobleman, of the castles of Scarborough and Winchester in 1264; and in the following year, of Kenilworth Castle. This feudal baron m. Joane, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of George de Cantilupe, Barons of Bergavenny; and dying in 1268, was s. by his elder son,

JOHN DE HASTINGS, Lord Hastings and Bergavenny, seneschal of Aquitaine, and, in 1290, one of the aspirants to the Scottish throne, in right of his grandmother, Ada, who was niece to MALCOLM IV. and WILLIAM the Lion, Kings of Scotland. This nobleman had summons to parliament from 1295 to the time of his death. He m. Isabel, dau. of William, and sister and co-heir of Aylmer de Valence, Earls of Pembroke, by whom he had two sons and three daus.; the second of which daus., Elizabeth, m. Roger, Lord Grey de Ruthyn, and her ladyship's grandson, Reginald, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn, eventually inherited the estates of this branch of the family, with the Baronies of Hastings, Bergavenny, and Weishford. His lordship m. 2ndly, Isabel, 5th dau. of Hugh Despenser, Earl of Winchester, and had two sons. He d. 9 March, 1312-13, and was s. by the elder son of the first marriage,

JOHN, LORD HASTINGS, Bergavenny, and Weishford, governor of Kenilworth Castle in 1323; who d. in 1325, and was s. by his only son,

LAURENCE, who, upon the decease of his granduncle, Aylmer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, s. p., was created Earl of Pembroke, by patent, dated 13 Oct. 1389; a dignity that expired with John, 3rd earl, who was accidentally slain in a tournament by Sir John St. John, at Woodstock. His lordship's minor honours, however, Lord Hastings, Bergavenny, and Weishford, devolved upon Reginald, Lord Grey, of Ruthyn. This terminated the elder branch of the noble house of Hastings; but a younger, deriving from

THOMAS DE HASTINGS, great-grandson of Walter de Hastings, steward to HENRY I., and elder son of William de Hastings, by his second wife, Ida, dau. of Henry, Earl of Ewe, laid the foundation of the present Earldom of Huntingdon. From this Thomas lineally descended

SIR WILLIAM DE HASTINGS, Knt., who was nominated by EDWARD IV. master of the Mints at London and Calais, steward of the honour of Leicester, and of the manors and castles of Donnington, Higham Ferrers, and Daventry; and created by the same monarch, 26 July, 1461, Baron Hastings, of Ashby-de-la-Zouch, when his lordship was installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. His lordship m. Catharine, relict of William, Lord Bonville and Harington, and dau. of Richard Nevil, Earl of Salisbury, by whom he had four sons and two daughters. In 1465, we find this nobleman entering into an agreement with Dame Elizabeth Grey, late wife of Sir John Grey, Knt., and heir of Edward Grey, late Lord Ferrers, that he should have the wardship of her son, Thomas, afterwards Marquis of Dorset, on whose part it was stipulated, that he should, within five or six years afterwards, marry the eldest dau. of Lord Hastings that might then be living. His lordship, about this time, undertook, in his capacity of master of the Mint, a new coinage of gold, consisting of pieces of eight shillings and four-pence sterling each, called nobles; other pieces of one-half, and a third, of one-fourth that value. For several years afterwards Lord Hastings was one of the most powerful persons in the kingdom. In 1474, he obtained a licence from EDWARD IV. to impark three thousand acres of land and wood in Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and he accordingly built, at Ashby, a magnificent castle for the residence of his family, which it continued to be for two hundred years. This castle was afterwards remarkable as the temporary prison of MARY, Queen of Scots. Of his lordship Fuller says—"The reder needeth not my dim candle to direct him to this illustrious person, whom KING EDWARD IV., or rather Edward Plantagenet, (because more in human than in his royal capacity,) so delighted in, that he made him his lord-chamberlain, Baron Hastings, of Ashby-de-la-Zouch," &c. Lord Hastings fell a victim, eventually, to the Protector Gloucester, (RICHARD III.,) and was beheaded in the Tower, 13 June, 1483, when his estates were confiscated, but soon afterwards restored, partly by RICHARD, and the remainder by HENRY VII., to his son,

EDWARD, K.B., 2nd baron; who having m. Mary, dau. and sole heir of Thomas, Baron Hungerford, Botreux, Moulins, and Moels, had been summoned to parliament, 15 Nov. 1482, as Lord Hungerford. By this union his lordship had a dau., Anne, who became the wife of Thomas Stanley, Earl of Derby, and, after his decease, of John Radcliffe, Lord Fitz-Walter; and a son, his successor at his demise, 8 Nov. 1507,

GEORGE, third baron. This nobleman attended HENRY VIII., in 1513, at the taking of Serouane and Tournay, and was created by that monarch, 3 Nov. 1529, EARL OF HUNTINGDON. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Henry Stafford, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, and widow of Sir Walter Herbert, Knt.; and dying 21 July, 1544, was s. by his eldest son, FRANCIS, 2nd earl, K.G.; who m. Katherine, dau. and co-heir of Henry Pole, Lord Montagu, and grandau. of Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, (which Margaret was dau.

and sole-heir of George Plantagenet, Duke of Clarence, brother of EDWARD IV.) On new year's day, 1553, we find this nobleman presenting to EDWARD VI., in a purse of red silk, five sovereigns and eight half sovereigns; and receiving in return, a gilt cup and cover, weighing twenty ounces. His lordship d. 20 June, 1561, having had six sons and five daus.; of the youngest dau., the beautiful Lady Mary Hastings, the following circumstance is related:—"John Vassilivich, Great Duke and Emperor of Russia, having a desire to marry an English lady, was told of the Lady Mary Hastings, who being of the blood royal, he began to affect: whereupon making his desires known to QUEEN ELIZABETH, who did well approve thereof, he sent over Theodore Pissemkoie, a nobleman of great account, his ambassador, who, in the name of his master, offered great advantages to the queen in the event of the marriage. The queen hereupon caused the lady to be attended with divers ladies and young noblemen, that so the ambassador might have a sight of her, which was accomplished in York House garden, near Charing Cross, London. There was the envoy brought into her presence, and casting down his countenance, fell prostrate before her, then rising back with his face still towards her, (the lady with the rest admiring at his strange salutation,) he said, by his interpreter, 'it sufficed him to behold the angelic presence of her who, he hoped, would be his master's spouse and empress.'" The alliance did not, however, take place, and the lady died unmarried. Of the earl's sons,

Lineage.

Although there are numerous histories of this illustrious family extant, yet the historians do not coincide as to its origin and first settlement in Great Britain. Some bring the Gordons from Greece to Gaul, and thence into Scotland, at least a thousand years ago; while others convey them from Spain, Flanders, &c. The most probable conjecture, however, is, that some of those Gordons came into England with WILLIAM, Duke of Normandy, and into Scotland with KING MALCOLM CANMORE. Indeed, there is a tradition in North Britain that the first of the name who crossed the Tweed was a valiant knight, a favourite of MALCOLM's, who having killed a wild boar which greatly infested the borders, obtained a grant of lands in the Merse, or Berwickshire, which he called Gordon, after his own surname; and settling there, assumed the boar's head for his armorial bearing, in commemoration of the exploit. Be the early origin, however, what it may, and there is no doubt that it was distinguished, the ducal family of which we are about to treat deduces its direct maternal descent from

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, Knt., who obtained, in the 28th year of DAVID II., a charter, dated 20 March, 1357-8, confirming the donation which ROBERT I. had made to his grandfather, Sir Adam de Gordon, of the lands of Strathbogie, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE GORDON, who obtained a confirmatory charter of the same lands from ROBERT II., dated 16 June, 1376. In the next year, the Earl of March having attacked and burned the town of Roxburgh, the English borderers retaliated on the lands of Sir John Gordon, who, passing the border, encountered Sir John de Lilburn, and, after a desperate affray, defeated him at Carham. Sir John Gordon had also a chief hand in the defeat and capture of Sir Thomas de Musgrave, governor of Berwick, in 1378, after a severe conflict. Sir John fell, eventually, at the battle of Otterburn, in Aug. 1388, leaving a son,

SIR ADAM GORDON, Knt. of Huntly, who was slain in 1402, at the battle of Homildon, and was s. in his estates by his only dau., (by his wife, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir William de Keith, great-marischal of Scotland,)

ELIZABETH GORDON, who m. Alexander Seton, (2nd son of Sir William Seton, of Seton,) and obtained, in conjunction with her husband, from Robert, Duke of Albany, a charter, dated 20 July, 1408, to their joint heirs, and, in default, to the heirs of the said Elizabeth, of the Baronies of Gourdown and Huntly, &c., and thenceforward the said Alexander was styled Lord of Gordon and Huntly. Of this marriage there were two sons and a dau.,

ALEXANDER.

William, ancestor of the Setons of Meldrum.

Elizabeth, m. to Alexander, Earl of Ross.

The eldest son,

ALEXANDER SETON, Lord of Gordon and Huntly, was created, 29 Jan. 1449-50, Earl of Huntly, with limitation to his heirs male by his 3rd wife, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Crichton, chancellor of Scotland, such heirs assuming the surname and bearing the arms of Gordon. His lordship m. thrice: 1st, Jane, dau. of Robert, son and heir of William, 1st Earl Marischal, by whom he acquired a great estate, but had no issue; 2ndly, Egidia, dau. and heir of Sir John Hay, of Tullibody, by whom he had a son, Sir Alexander Seton, who s. to his mother's estates, and was progenitor of the Setons of Touch; the earl m. 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. of Lord Crichton, by whom he had (with other children) his successor,

GEORGE, 2nd Earl of Huntly; who m. 1st, Princess Annabella, dau. of JAMES I., of Scotland, and relict of James, Earl of Angus, by whom he had,

ALEXANDER, his successor.

Adam, Lord of Aboyne, who marrying Elizabeth, Countess of Sutherland, became Earl of Sutherland in her right.

William, (Sir) ancestor of the Gordons of Gight, fell at Flodden.

James, (Sir) of Letterfourie, admiral of Scotland in 1513. And six daus.

Lord Huntly m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of William, 1st Earl of Errol, and relict of Patrick, master of Grey; and dying in 1470, was s. by his eldest son, ALEXANDER, 3rd earl; who m. 1st, Lady Johanna Stewart, eldest dau. of John, Earl of Atholl, by whom he had, with other issue,

William, Bishop of Aberdeen.

Alexander, Laird of Strathaven, ancestor of JOHN-TAYLOR GORDON, M.D. late of Clifton. (See BURKE's Commoners.)

The earl m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of Andrew, Lord Gray and relict of John, 6th Lord Glamis. He d. in 1523, and was s. by his grandson,

GEORGE, 4th earl; who was constituted LORD-CHANCELLOR OF SCOTLAND, and had the great seal delivered to him, 10 June, 1546. His lordship took an active part in the political affairs of his country during the reign of KING JAMES V., the regency of that monarch's dowager, and the reign of the unfortunate MARY, his daughter; and having taken up arms in the feuds which then agitated Scotland, he was defeated by his rival, the Earl of Moray, at Corrichie, near Aberdeen. The consequences of the loss of this battle were most disastrous to the family of Huntly. The earl himself, thrown from his horse, and too unwieldy to rise from the ground, was smothered in the retreat, 28 Oct. 1562, and his body, brought to town on a pair of panniers, was afterwards produced in parliament, when a doom of forfeiture was pronounced against him and his family, which was not reversed until 19 April, 1567. His son, Sir John Gordon, condemned to be beheaded, was butchered at Aberdeen by a unskilful executioner. The earl was s. by his eldest surviving son, (by Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Robert, Lord Keith, and sister of William, 4th Earl Marischal,)

GEORGE, 5th earl. This nobleman, after the unhappy death of his father, was tried for high treason, in 1563, sentenced to be hanged, drawn, and quartered. He was, however, pardoned by the QUEEN, and appointed LORD-CHANCELLOR OF SCOTLAND in 1565. His lordship m. Lady Anne Hamilton, dau. of James, Earl of Arran, Duke of Chatelherault, Regent of Scotland; and dying in May, 1576, was s. by his only son,

GEORGE, 6th earl; who had been created, 17 April, 1599, Baron of Badenoch, Lochabar, Strathaven, Achindoun, Balmore, Garthie, and Kincardine, Viscount Inverness, Earl of Enzie, and MARQUESS OF HUNTLY. His lordship m. Lady Henrietta Stewart, eldest dau. of Esme, Duke of Lennox, by whom he had a numerous family. This nobleman was heard to say, "that he never drew a sword in his own quarrel. In his youth, a prodigal spender; in his old age, more wise and worldly; yet never counted for cost in matters of credit and honour; a great householder; a terror to his enemies, whom he ever with his prideful ken held under subjection and obedience; just in all his bargains, and never heard for his true debt; he was mightily envied by the kirk for his religion, and by others for his greatness, and thereby had much trouble." His master, KING JAMES, loved him dearly, and he was a good and loyal subject to that prince. He d. 16 June, 1636, and was s. by his eldest son,

GEORGE, 2nd marquess. His lordship was a stanch adherent of the unfortunate CHARLES I., and was beheaded in consequence, 30 March, 1649. He m. Lady Anne Campbell, dau. of Archibald, 7th Earl of Argyll, and had, (with daughters,)

This nobleman joined the banner of Montrose during the civil wars, but was eventually obliged to fly into France, where he died of grief, upon hearing of the melancholy fate of CHARLES I., in 1649; dying unm., the viscounty expired.

LEWIS, successor to his father.

In 1711, her grace excited no small attention by sending to the dean and faculty of advocates a silver medal, with the head of the Chevalier on one side, and on the other, the British isles, with the word Reddite. The dean having presented the medal to the faculty at their next meeting, a debate ensued about the propriety of admitting it into their repositories, when the affirmative was carried, and a vote passed, to return thanks to the duchess for her present. Two advocates, delegated for that purpose, waited upon her grace, and expressed their hopes that she would soon have an opportunity to compliment the faculty with a second medal on the Restoration. The duke was bred up in the catholic religion, which his

Lineage.

This noble family deduces its descent from the ancient and honourable house of Villiers, seigneurs of Lile-Adam, in Normandy; and its establishment in England is fixed at the period of the Conquest. For six centuries subsequently it ranked amongst the most considerable gentry, serving the office of sheriff, receiving the honour of knighthood, &c. &c., and was amongst the earliest distinguished by a baronetcy, that dignity having been conferred, 19 July, 1619, upon

WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq. of Brookesby, eldest son of Sir George Villiers, Knt., (by his 1st marriage, with Audrey, dau. and heir of William Sanders, Esq. of Harrington, co. Northampton.) The title, however, ceased in 1711, at the demise of the grandson of the first possessor, without issue. The eldest son, by his 2nd marriage, of Sir George Villiers, and the half-brother of Sir William, the 1st bart., was George, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, the celebrated favourite of JAMES I. and CHARLES I., who fell by the hand of the assassin Felton, 23 Aug. 1628, (for an account of VILLIERS, DUKES OF BUCKINGHAM, see BURKE'S Extinct and Dormant Peerage.) The 2nd son of the above Sir George Villiers, Knt., by his 1st wife, and, consequently, brother of Sir William Villiers aforesaid,

EDWARD VILLIERS, received the honour of knighthood 7 Sept. 1616, and from him the present Earl of Jersey directly derives. This gentleman having been employed, in 1620, as ambassador to Bohemia, was nominated in 1622, through the interest of his half-brother, the Duke of Buckingham, president of the province of Munster, in Ireland, upon the decease of the Earl of Thomond. Sir Edward m. Barbara, eldest dau. of Sir John St. John, of Lidiard Tregose, co. Wilts, and niece of Sir Oliver St. John, created, 3 Jan. 1620, Viscount Grandison, in the peerage of Ireland, with limitation of the honour to her (Lady Villiers') posterity. By this marriage Sir Edward had four sons and three daughters. He d. 7 Sept. 1626, lamented more deeply than any governor who had previously ruled the province, and was interred in the Earl of Cork's chapel, at Youghall, where the following lines were engraven on his tomb:—

“Munster may curse the time that Villiers came
To make us worse by leaving such a name,
Of noble parts, as none can imitate,
But those whose hearts are married to the state;
But if they press to imitate his fame,
Munster may bless the time that Villiers came.

WILLIAM VILLIERS, Esq., the eldest son of Sir Edward, succeeded to the estate of his father, and upon the demise of his uncle, in 1630, became Viscount Grandison. Actively espousing the cause of CHARLES I., his lordship received a wound at the siege of Bristol, 26 July, 1643, of which he died in the following month, at Oxford, leaving by Mary, dau. of Paul, Viscount Bayning, an only dau., Barbara, (wife of Roger Palmer, Earl of Castlemain, in Ireland,) afterwards Duchess of Cleveland, and mistress of CHARLES II., and transmitting his title to his brother,

JOHN, 3rd Viscount Grandison, who d. s. p., when the honours devolved upon his brother,

GEORGE, 4th viscount; who m. Lady Mary Leigh, 2nd dau. and co-heir of Sir Francis Leigh, Bart., created Lord Dunsmore in 1628, and Earl of Chichester in 1644, (honours which expired with his lordship, in 1653,) and had two sons and two daus. The elder son,

EDWARD, a brigadier-gen. in the army, and lieut.-col. of the Queen's regiment of horse; m. in 1677, Catherine, dau. and heir of John Fitzgerald, Esq. of Dromana, co. Waterford, by whom he obtained a considerable landed property in that county. He d. in 1693, leaving

- 1 JOHN, who s. to the viscounty.
- 2 William.
- 3 Mary, m. to Brigadier-Gen. Stuart.
- 4 Harriet, m. to Robert Pitt, Esq., by whom she was mother of WILLIAM PITT, FIRST EARL OF CHATHAM.

Mrs. Villiers obtained a patent from KING WILLIAM, in 1699, granting her the privilege to enjoy the same title and precedence as if her husband had survived his father, and had actually been possessed of the honour of VISCOUNT GRANDISON. She married with Lieut.-Gen. William Steuart, appointed, in 1711, commander-in-chief of the army during the Duke of Ormonde's absence. General Steuart was M.P. for the co. of Waterford, and a privy-councillor in Ireland.

Kent; and being appointed ambassador-extraordinary to the States-General in 1697, was created EARL OF THE ISLAND OF JERSEY, 13 Oct. in that year. Retiring from the troubles in his own country, he removed to the north of Scotland, and was well received by Thomas, Earl of Marr, then one of the most powerful persons there. This Stiven m. Margaret, dau. and heir of Sir Andrew Garioch, Knt. of Caskieben, with whom he obtained a very considerable fortune; and from this marriage lineally descended, through a long line of distinguished ancestors,

He had subsequently, however, the misfortune to assist his friend, the Hon. Capt. Campbell escaped into Scotland; but Sir John being betrayed by his landlord for fifty pounds, was tried at the Old Bailey, and condemned, and executed in Dec. 1690; although it appeared upon the trial, by the evidence of the clergyman who performed the marriage ceremony, and the people of the house in which the parties lodged, and where they remained two days, as well as by Miss Wharton's own letter to her aunt, informing her of her marriage, that no force had been used, but that she had acted with her free will. The marriage was ultimately dissolved by act of parliament, and Capt. Campbell marrying in Scotland, became the father of Gen. Campbell, afterwards Duke of Argyll. In the battle of Sheriff Muir young Johnston fell; and Sir John being obliged to fly, sunk into the grave broken hearted, his hopes frustrated, and his branch of the family extinct. The name of Kemp is derived from the Saxon word kemp, or combat, which in Norfolk is retained to this day, a foot-ball match being called camping, or kemping; and thus, in Saxon, a kemper signifies a combatant, a champion, a man of arms.

The family of Kemp has been of long standing in the cos. of Kent, Essex, Suffolk, and Norfolk; and we meet with two very eminent churchmen of the name—John Kemp, LL.D., Bishop successively of Rochester, of Chichester, and of London, then Archbishop of York, and finally Archbishop of Canterbury; and Thomas Kemp, his grace's nephew, who was consecrated Bishop of London in 1449.

KENMARE.

KENMARE, EARL OF, (Valentine Browne,) Viscount Castlerosse and Kenmare, and Baron of Castlerosse, in the peerage of Ireland; and a baronet of the same part of the United Kingdom; b. 15 Jan. 1788; s. as 2nd earl, upon the demise of his father, 3 Oct. 1812; m. 1 July, 1816, Augusta, 2nd dau. of Sir Robert Wilmot, Bart. of Osmaston, co. Derby, by whom he has no issue. His lordship is lord-lieutenant of the co. of Kerry.

Lineage.

This family deduces its descent from

SIR VALENTINE BROWNE, Knt. of Crofts, co. Lincoln, who was constituted auditor-general of Ireland, and d. in 1567, leaving

SIR VALENTINE BROWNE, his heir, who, in 1583, received instruction, jointly with Sir Henry Wallop, for the surveying several escheated lands in Ireland. He was subsequently sworn of the privy-council, and represented the co. of Sligo in parliament in 1585. On the 28th June, in the same year, Sir Valentine purchased from Donald, Earl of Clancarty, all the lands, manors, &c., in the cos. of Kerry and Cork, which had been in the possession of Teige

Dermot Mac Cormac, and Rorie Donoghomore. Sir Valentine m. Thomazine, sister of the Lord-Keeper (Sir Nicholas) Baron, and had two sons; the second of whom, SIR NICHOLAS BROWNE, Knt. of Ross, co. Kerry, d. in 1616, and was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Valentine, after his father's decease, presented a petition to JAMES I., praying an abatement of the yearly rent reserved on the estate which he held from the crown, as an undertaker, at the annual sum of £113. 6s. 8d., in regard of the small profit he made of it, being set out in the most barren and remote part of the county of Kerry; which request was complied with, and he received a confirmation, by patent, of all his lands at a reduced rent. KENMURE.

KENMURE, VISCOUNT, (John Gordon,) and Lord Lochinvar, in the peerage of Scotland; restored by act of parliament, 17 June, 1824, to the honours forfeited by the 6th viscount; was b. in 1750; m. in 1791, Miss Morgan, by whom (who d. in 1815) he has no issue. The viscount is vice-lieutenant of the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, is the 10th viscount in succession, and the 7th in the enjoyment of the dignity.

Lineage.

The Gordons are believed to have come from Gaul to England with WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR; and thence to Scotland with MALCOLM III., in whose reign the public records exhibit Richard de Gordoun, the head of this family, as holding the Barony of Gordoun and other extensive possessions in the Merse, in the southern frontiers of Scotland. From this Richard descended

SIR ADAM DE GORDOUN, a knight of great renown, and the representative of the family in the momentous period of Scottish history, who, though his possessions were almost on the borders of England, long held out against the tyranny of EDWARD I., and for a long time resisted the bond of fealty and submission prescribed by EDWARD in 1292; but that bond having become generally subscribed by the successively conquered Scotch nobility, and Sir Adam's own son, William de Gordoun, having been obliged to do so, the valiant knight was compelled to succumb, 28 July, 1296. Baliol's subsequent resignation of the crown to EDWARD gave Sir Adam a pretence to fly to arms, and thereafter, like Wallace and others, he leagued his fortunes with those of ROBERT BRUCE, from whom he obtained for his services a grant of the lands of Strathbogie in the north, forfeited by the desertion of the Earl of Atholl. These Sir Adam never however possessed, for the donation became ineffective by the return of the earl to his allegiance. Sir Adam had another son, who shone conspicuously at Hallidon Hill, in 1333, but it has not yet been ascertained whether William or Alexander was the elder son. But it appears from the records, that Sir Adam, in 1306, took a charter of his barony of Stitchill in life-rent to himself, and in fee to his son,

SIR WILLIAM DE GORDOUN, who subscribed the bond of fealty, 12 July, 1296, and was designed in a writ, in 1331, as Signor de Stitchill. He was s. by his son,

ROGER DE GORDOUN; who was s. by his son,

SIR ALEXANDER DE GORDOUN; who d. in 1432, leaving a son and successor,

WILLIAM DE GORDOUN, who fixed his residence in Galloway, and was the first who designated himself of Lochinvar. He d. in 1450, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN GORDON, of Lochinvar, who had three sons,

K E N

ALEXANDER, a valiant knight, who d. before his father, falling with his sovereign, JAMES IV., at Flodden, in 1513.

ROBERT, (Sir) successor to his father.

Sir John d. in 1517, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT GORDON, who m. Marion, dau. and sole heir of John Accarson, of Glenshireburne; and dying in 1520, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM, of Pennygame, who left two sons,

John, d. s. p. in 1662.

ALEXANDER, of whom hereafter, as 5th VISCOUNT KENMURE.

Sir James fell at the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR JOHN GORDON, of Lochinvar. This gentleman m. 1st, in 1563, Juliana, dau. of Home, of Wedderburne, and had an only dau., Margaret, m. to Hugh, 1st Lord Loudoun. Sir John espoused 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord Herries; and dying in 1604, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT GORDON, of Lochinvar, remarkable for his great bodily strength and activity, who, at a tournament proclaimed by JAMES VI., obtained, as one of the three successful champions, a prize from the hands of the Princess Elizabeth. He m. Lady Isabel Ruthven, dau. of William, 1st Earl of Gowrie; and dying in 1628, was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN GORDON, of Lochinvar. This gentleman disposed of Stitchill, the ancient inheritance of the family, and is said to have given the produce in a purse to the Duke of Buckingham, to insure his grace's interest in forwarding his claim to the Earldom of Gowrie. But the duke falling the very next day by the hand of the assassin Felton, the expectation proved abortive. Sir John was, however, elevated to the peerage, as Lord Lochinvar and VISCOUNT KENMURE, by patent, dated 8 May, 1633, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever bearing the surname and arms of Gordon. His lordship m. Jane, dau. of Archibald, 7th Earl of Argyll; and dying in 1634, was s. by his only son,

JOHN, 3rd viscount. This nobleman d. unm. in Oct. 1643, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

ROBERT, 4th viscount, b. in Nov. 1622. This nobleman was a devoted adherent to the house of Stuart, and suffered in consequence. He d. s. p. in 1663, when the peerage descended to his cousin,

ALEXANDER GORDON, Esq. of Pennygame, as 5th viscount. His lordship m. thrice, and was s. in 1698, by his eldest son, (by his 2nd wife, Marian, dau. of Maculloch, of Ardwell,)

WILLIAM, 6th viscount. This unfortunate nobleman inheriting the attachment of his family to the Stuarts, took up arms, in 1715, against GEORGE I. He was made prisoner at Preston Pans the following year, and thence conveyed to London, where he was tried, condemned, and executed on Tower Hill, 24 Feb. ensuing, when the honours of his house fell under an attainder. He m. Mary Dalzell, only sister of Robert, 6th Earl of Carnwath, (a title also forfeited, and recently restored,) by whom he left three sons (the eldest and youngest d. unm.) and a dau., Harriet, m. to John Dalzell, Esq. When his lordship's estate was brought to the hammer, his dowager purchased it; and when her son Robert came of age, delivered it up to him free of debt; which son,

ROBERT GORDON, was styled 7th viscount. He d. unm. 1 Aug. 1741, when the estates devolved on his brother,

JOHN GORDON, by courtesy 8th viscount; who m. Frances, only dau. of William, 5th Earl of Seaforth, and had issue,

Sir Eyre Coote, K.B., in the Carnatic, during the invasion of Hyder Ali, until the battle and siege of Cuddalore. A general peace soon after taking place, Captain Kennaway returned to Bengal; was appointed, in 1786, aide-de-camp to Marquess Cornwallis, and sent by his lordship, in 1788, as envoy to the court of Hyderabad, to demand from the Nizam the cession of the maritime province of Guntoor, which, contrary to treaty, had for many years remained in his highness's possession; Captain Kennaway was in this embassy eminently successful, and soon after concluded with the Nizam a treaty of alliance against Tippoo Sultan, for which services his majesty was pleased to create him a Baronet, 25 Feb. 1791, and the court of directors of the East India Company to take out his patent at the public expense. In 1792, he was appointed, by Marquess Cornwallis, commissioner to adjust, in concert with agents of the Nizam and the Mahrattas, a preliminary and definitive treaty of peace with the commissioners of Tippoo Sultan, by which the latter prince ceded half his dominions, and agreed to the payment of three millions three hundred thousand pounds to the three allied powers, for the expenses of the war, and to deliver up two of his sons as hostages for the due performance of the treaty. The branch of the family raised to the peerage removed into Flintshire in the beginning of the 18th century, and acquired the estates and mansion of Gredington, by the marriage of

LLOYD KENYON, Esq., in 1730, with Jane, eldest dau. of Robert Eddowes, Esq. of Eagle Hall, co. Chester. The issue of this marriage were,

LLOYD KENYON, Esq., the second son, b. at Gredington, in Flintshire, 5 Oct. 1732, having received the elementary part of his education at Ruthin, in Denbighshire, was articulated, at an early age, to Mr. W.-J. Tomkinson, an eminent attorney at Nantwich, in Cheshire. At the expiration of his articles, Mr. Kenyon determined to pursue the higher walk of the profession, and became, accordingly, in Trinity Term, 1754, a member of the society of Lincoln's-Inn, by which he was called to the bar in Hilary Term, 1761. His subsequent success was slow, but not the less certain; and about the year 1773, we find him enjoying very considerable practice in the court of Chancery; his reputation was, however, firmly established in 1780, by his able defence, in conjunction with Mr. (afterwards Lord) Erskine, of Lord George Gordon. In 1782, soon after the accession of the Rockingham administration, Mr. Kenyon was appointed attorney-general, without serving the intermediate office of solicitor-general, and was constituted, at the same time, chief-justice of Chester. In March, 1784, he was appointed master of the Rolls, and created a Baronet. Upon the Roll's bench Sir Lloyd continued until the end of May, 1788, when he succeeded Lord Mansfield as LORD-CHIEF-JUSTICE of the court of King's Bench, and was elevated to the peerage (9 June, 1788) in the dignity of LORD KENYON, *Baron of Gredington, co. Robert Fowler, Archbishop of Dublin, but has no issue. Her ladyship d. 30 Dec. 1830. His lordship s. to the viscounty, on the demise of his father, 16 July, 1793, and was advanced to the earldom by patent, dated 20 Dec. 1793.

Lineage.

This is a branch of the noble house of Butler, Earls and Marquesses of Ormonde, springing from

The HON. RICHARD BUTLER, (2nd son of Pierce, 1st Earl of Ossory and 8th Earl of Ormonde,) who was created Viscount Mountgarret, of the kingdom of Ireland, 23 Oct. 1550. He m. 1st, Eleanor, dau. of Theobald Butler, Esq. of Nechum, co. Kilkenny, and had one son, Edmund. He m. 2ndly, Catherine, dau. and heir of Peter Barnewall,

Esq. of Stackallan, co. Meath, and had Barnewall, who d. unm., Pierce, and other issue. His lordship m. 3rdly, in 1541, Anne, dau. of John, Lord Killeen, from whom he was divorced in the first year of his marriage. He d. 20 Dec. 1571, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDMUND, 2nd viscount; who m. Grissel, dau. of Barnaby, 1st Lord of Upper Ossory; and dying in 1602, was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD, 3rd viscount. This nobleman took up arms in 1642, under an apprehension that the extirpation of the catholics was in contemplation; and obtaining possession of the city of Kilkenny, was appointed general of the Irish forces. He was soon afterwards defeated by the Earl of Ormonde, at Kiltrush, and forced to fall back upon Kilkenny, where he was chosen president of the supreme council assembled there in the summer of 1642. He continued subsequently an active leader in the war until his decease, in 1651, when (although dead) he was excepted from pardon, for life or estate, by Cromwell's Act, passed in 1652, for the settlement of Ireland. His lordship m. 1st, Margaret, eldest dau. of Hugh O'Neile, Earl of Tyrone, by whom alone he had issue, and was s. by his eldest son,

EDMUND, 4th viscount; who espoused the cause in which his father had so actively engaged, and was eventually restored to his estates and honours by CHARLES II. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Dorothy Touchet, 2nd dau. of Mervyn, Earl of Castlehaven, by whom he had two sons and two daus.; and 2ndly, before the 20 Jan. 1637, Elizabeth, dau. of Sir George Simeon, of Brightwell, by his wife, the Hon. Mary Vaux, one of the sisters and co-heirs of HENRY VAUX, 5th Baron Vaux, of Harrowden, and by that lady had an only son, EDWARD BUTLER, b. about 1640, upon whom he settled Ballyragget and other extensive estates in the co. of Kilkenny. From this gentleman descended

Mary Butler, who was m. to Charles Mostyn, Esq. of Kiddington, in the co. of Oxford, and was mother of GEORGE MOSTYN, LORD VAUX.

The viscount dying in 1679, was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD, 5th viscount. This nobleman leading the forlorn hope, as captain of a troop of horse in the service of JAMES II., against Londonderry, 4 June, 1689, fell into the hands of the enemy, and an outlawry and confiscation of his estates followed. In 1692, his lordship claimed his seat in parliament, and subscribed the oath of allegiance; but being required to take the oath of supremacy, he declined, when the Lord Chancellor apprised him, that in consequence of such refusal he could not sit in the House of Lords. His lordship m. 1st, Emilia, dau. of William Blundel, Esq. of Crosby, co. Lancaster; and 2ndly, Margaret, only dau. of Richard Shee, Esq. of Shee's Court. By the former he left at his decease, in 1706, a son,

EDMUND, 6th viscount; who, by petition to the House of Lords, claimed, in 1721, his privilege of parliament, which (upon proof that the outlawry of Richard, Lord Mountgarret, for the rebellion of 1641, had been reversed in the year 1687) being allowed by resolution, he delivered his writ of summons, and took the oath of allegiance. His lordship d. in 1735, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD, 7th viscount; who d. s. p. in 1736, and was s. by his brother,

JAMES, 8th viscount; at whose decease s. p. in 1743, the honours devolved upon his brother,

EDMUND, 9th viscount. This nobleman conformed, in 1736, to the established church, and took his seat in parliament in 1749. His lordship m. Anne, dau. of Toby Purcell, Esq. of Ballymartin, co. Kilkenny, and was s. in 1750, by his only son, Catherine-Adela.

His lordship s. as 28th and PREMIER baron, on the demise of his father, 25 Jan. 1832. Lord Kingsale enjoys the hereditary privilege (granted by KING JOHN to De Courcy, Earl of Ulster) of wearing his hat in the royal presence.

Lineage.

The family of Courcy claims alliance with most of the royal houses of Europe, paternally through the Dukes of Lorraine, and maternally through the ducal house of Normandy.

LOUIS IV., King of France, b. in 920, m. in 939, Gerberga, dau. of HENRY I., Emperor of Germany, by whom he had two sons, Lotharius, who succeeded to the French throne, (and with whose son, Louis V., the race of monarchs descended from Charlemagne ceased,) and

CHARLES, Duke of Lorraine; whose immediate descendant,

ROBERT DE COURCY, was Lord of Courcy, in Normandy, in 1006, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD DE COURCY, who accompanied his sovereign, WILLIAM, into England, and distinguishing himself at the battle of Hastings, participated largely in the Conqueror's spoil, having been allotted numerous lordships; amongst which was that of Stoke, co. Somerset, and thence denominated Stoke Courcy. His lordship d. in 1098, and was s. by his son,

ROBERT, as Lord de Courcy, in Normandy, and Baron of Stoke Courcy, in England. This nobleman was steward of the household to HENRY I., and to his dau., Maude, the empress; by the former of whom he was made one of the greater Barons of Westminster. His lordship m. Rohesia, dau. of Hugh de Grant Mesnil, Lord of Hinckley, co. Leicester, and lord-high-steward of England, by whom he had five sons, and was s. by the eldest,

WILLIAM, Baron of Stoke Courcy, and Dapifer to HENRY I. This nobleman, having no issue, was s. by his brother,

ROBERT, Baron of Stoke Courcy, who, temp. KING STEPHEN, had a principal command at the battle of Northampton, against the Scotch. This feudal lord m. Avicia, dau. and co-heir of William de Meschines, Earl of Cambridge, and was s. by an only son,

WILLIAM, Baron of Stoke Courcy, and Dapifer to HENRY II. This nobleman d. in 1171, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR JOHN COURCY, who having distinguished himself temp. HENRY II., in that monarch's wars in England and Gascony, was sent into Ireland, in the year 1177, as an assistant to William Fitz-Adelm in the government of that kingdom. Sir John having prevailed upon some of the veteran soldiery to accompany him, invaded the province of Ulster with 22 knights, 50 esquires, and about 300 foot soldiers, and, after many hard fought battles, succeeded in attaching that quarter of the kingdom to the English monarchy. For which important service he was created, in 1181, (being the first Englishman dignified with an Irish title of honour,) EARL OF ULSTER. His lordship continued in high favour during the remainder of the reign of his royal master, and performed prodigies of valour in Ireland; but upon the accession of KING JOHN, his splendour and rank having excited the envy of Hugh de Lacie, appointed governor of Ireland by that monarch, the Earl of Ulster was treacherously seized while performing penance unarmed and barefooted in the churchyard of Down-Patrick, on Good Friday, anno 1203, and sent over to England, where the king condemned him to perpetual imprisonment in the Tower, and granted to Lacie all the earl's possessions in Ireland. After his lordship had been in confinement about a year, a dispute happening to arise between KING JOHN and Philip-Augustus of France, concerning the Duchy of Normandy, the decision of which being referred to single combat, KING JOHN, more hasty than advised, appointed the day, against which the King of France provided his champion; but the King of England, less fortunate, could find no one of his subjects willing to take up the gauntlet, until his captive in the Tower, the gallant Earl of Ulster, was prevailed upon to accept the challenge. But when everything was prepared for the contest, and the champions had entered the lists, in presence of the monarchs of England, France, and Spain, the opponent of the earl, seized with a sudden panic, put spurs to his horse, and fled the arena; whereupon the victory was adjudged with acclamation to the champion of England. The French king being informed, however, of the earl's powerful strength, and wishing to witness some exhibition of it, his lordship, at the desire of KING JOHN, cleft a massive helmet in twain at a single blow. The king was so well satisfied with this signal performance, that he not only restored the earl to his estates and effects, but desired him to ask anything within his gift, and it should be granted. To which ULSTER replied, that having estates and titles enough, he desired that his successors might have the privilege (their first obeisance being paid) to remain covered in the presence of his majesty, and all future kings of England, which request was immediately conceded. This heroic warrior and able statesman d. in France, about the year 1210, and was s. by his only son, MILES, upon whom HENRY III. conferred, in 1181, the Barony of Kingsale, in Ireland, as a compensation for the Earldom of Ulster, which was retained by Hugo de Lacie.

This nobleman, in observance of the ancient privilege of his house, appeared in the presence of KING WILLIAM covered, and explained to that monarch, when his majesty expressed surprise at the circumstance, the reason thus:—"Sire, my name is Courcy; I am Lord of Kingsale, in your majesty's kingdom of Ireland; and the reason of my appearing covered in your majesty's presence is, to assert the ancient privilege of my family, granted to Sir John de Courcy, Earl of Ulster, and his heirs, by JOHN, King of England." The king acknowledged the privilege, and giving the baron his hand to kiss, his lordship paid his obeisance and continued covered. He d. in 1719, without issue, when the peerage reverted to his first-cousin,

His lordship s. to the Irish honours, as 3rd earl, on the demise of his father, 17 April, 1799, and obtained the peerage of the United Kingdom by patent of creation, dated 17 July, 1821.

The Earl of Kingston sits in parliament as one of the representative peers of Ireland, although, since his election, he has obtained an hereditary seat.

Lineage.

The family of King was originally of Feathercock Hall, co. York; and the first of its members we find upon record in Ireland is,

SIR JOHN KING, Knt., who obtained from QUEEN ELIZABETH, in requital of his military services, a lease of the Abbey of Boyle, co. Roscommon; and from KING JAMES I., numerous valuable territorial grants, and several of the highest and most lucrative political employments. He m. Catherine, dau. of Robert Drury, Esq., and grand-niece of the lord-deputy Sir William Drury, and was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

SIR ROBERT KING, Knt., muster-master-general of Ireland; who m. 1st, Frances, dau. of Sir Henry Folliott, 1st Lord Folliott, of Ballyshannon, and had, with other children,

- i. JOHN, who received the honour of knighthood, and, although an active Cromwellian, was elevated to the peerage by CHARLES II., for his zeal in restoring the monarchy, by patent, dated 4 Sept. 1660, in the dignity of Baron Kingston. His lordship m. Catherine, dau. of Sir William Fenton, of Mitchelstown, co. Cork, and grandau. of Sir Geoffry Fenton, principal secretary of state. By this lady Lord Kingston's family acquired the estate of Mitchelstown. He d. in 1676, and was s. by his elder son,

- 1 ROBERT, 2nd lord; who d. s. p. in 1693, having settled and limited his estates in remainder to his uncle, Sir Robert King, in consequence of his brother, and the inheritor of his honours,

- 2 John, 3rd lord, having conformed to the church of Rome; but this nobleman appears afterwards to have enjoyed the estates. He was made a gentleman of the privy-chamber to KING JAMES II., and following the fortunes of his master into France, was outlawed. But after his brother's death, returning into Ireland, he had a pardon from the crown. His lordship d. in 1727, and was s. by his only surviving son, William-Francis-Spencer Ponsonby, and grandau. of the Earl of Bessborough, and has issue.

Lineage.

The feudal Barony of Kinnaird, in Perthshire, was conferred (by charter) upon RADULPHUS RUFUS, or the Red, by WILLIAM the Lion, King of Scotland, whence the family assumed the name of Kinnaird. From this personage directly descended

SIR GEORGE-PATRICK KINNAIRD, of Inchtute, (an estate which came into the family by the marriage of Reginald Kinnaird with Marjory, dau. and heir of Sir John Kirkaldy, of Inchtute, about the close of the 14th century,) who, for his loyalty to the house of Stuart, was knighted by CHARLES II., in 1661; and elevated to the peerage of Scotland, 28 Dec. 1682, as BARON KINNAIRD, of Inchtute, with limitation to the heirs male of his body. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of James Crichton, Esq. of Ruthven, and had six sons, of whom the eldest and youngest alone left issue; the former,

Mr. Kinnaird, the next heir, however, brought an action in the Commissary court, for the purpose of establishing the surreptitiousness of these children; and Lord and Lady Kinnaird refusing to answer the interrogatories directed to be put by the commissaries, it was decreed that his lordship should pay to Mr. Kinnaird £600, for not appearing personally in court. The affair terminated by Lord Kinnaird's declaring that both the children were dead. His lordship d. 16 July, 1758, when the barony devolved upon his kinsman,

PETER HAY, Esq. of Melginche, m. Margaret, dau. of Crichton, of Ruthven, and had issue,

PETER, of whom presently.

James, (Sir) of Kingask, whose son,

SIR JAMES HAY, of Pitcorthie, co. Fife, accompanied JAMES VI. into England, and became, subsequently, celebrated as the favourite of that monarch. Sir James was created a Baron of England, in 1615, as Lord Hay, of Sauley, co. York, without a solemn investiture, being the first peer so created, the lawyers declaring that the delivery of the letters patent was sufficient without any ceremony. In 1616, his lordship went ambassador to France; and was advanced, in 1618, to the Viscounty of Doncaster; and being again deputed upon a similar embassy, was created Earl of Carlisle. His lordship was groom of the stole to KING JAMES, and knight of the Garter. Upon the accession of CHARLES I., he obtained a grant of the island of Barbadoes. This nobleman was remarkable for the extravagancy of his voluptuousness, and left behind him, according to Lord Clarendon, "the reputation of a very fine gentleman and a most accomplished courtier: after having spent in a very jovial manner, about £400,000, which, upon a strict computation, he received from the crown, he left not a house nor acre of land to be remembered by." His lordship d. in 1636, and was s. by his only son, (by Honora, dau. and sole heir of Edward, Lord Denny,)

JAMES, 2nd Earl of Carlisle; at whose decease, s. p., in 1660, the honours expired, (see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage;) and the island of Barbadoes devolved upon the Earl of Kinnoul.

PETER HAY, the elder son, m. Margaret, dau. of Sir Patrick Ogilvie, and had three sons, viz.,

THOMAS, M.P. for the co. of Perth, created Viscount Dupplin, 31 Dec. 1697, of whom hereafter, as 6th EARL OF KINNOUL.

GEORGE, of whom presently.

The third son,

GEORGE HAY, Esq. of Kinfauns, being a highly-accomplished person, was introduced at court by his uncle, Lord Carlisle, and acquired immediately the full confidence and favour of KING JAMES. He was appointed a gentleman of the bedchamber, honoured with the dignity of knighthood, and granted (18 Feb. 1598) the dissolved Carthusian Priory of Perth. He was subsequently nominated clerk-register of Scotland; and, in 1622, appointed to the high dignity of LORD CHANCELLOR of that kingdom. Sir George was advanced to the peerage by CHARLES I., 4 May, 1627, by the titles of Baron Hay, of Kinfauns, and Viscount Dupplin, with reversion to his heirs general whatsoever; and created, 25 May, 1633, EARL OF KINNOUL, with the same reversionary clause in the patent. His lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir James Haliburton, of Pitcur, by whom he had issue, two sons and a dau. The earl d. 16 Dec. 1634, (up to which period he continued chancellor, with the approbation of the whole kingdom,) and was s. by his second, but eldest surviving son,

GEORGE, 2nd earl; captain of the yeomen of the guard to CHARLES I., and one of his majesty's privy-council. His lordship was distinguished, during the civil wars, by unshaken fidelity to his unfortunate sovereign and gallant and active services as a soldier in his cause. He m. Anne, eldest dau. of William (Douglas), Earl of Morton, lord-treasurer of Scotland, by whom he had issue two daus., and his successor, at his demise, in 1644,

WILLIAM, 3rd earl; who became, upon the decease of his cousin, James, Earl of Carlisle, without issue, in 1660, proprietor of the island of Barbadoes, granted by KING CHARLES I. to the 1st Earl of Carlisle, which his lordship disposed of to CHARLES II. in 1661. This nobleman, during the civil wars, was taken by the republicans, and committed prisoner to the castle of Edinburgh, whence he made his escape, 28 May, 1654, over the wall, by tying sheets and blankets together. Joining the Earl of Middleton in the north, he was made prisoner again by the English, in the braes of Angus, in the November of the same year. The earl m. 1st, Mary, dau. of Robert, 2nd Earl of Cardigan, by whom he had no issue; and 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Charles Viscount Cranbourne, and grandau. of William Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, by whom he had two sons, successive earls. Lineage.

SIR WILLIAM KEITH, Knt., was created Earl-Marischal of Scotland, by JAMES II. of that kingdom, in 1458, which dignity passed in regular succession to

GEORGE,* the 10th earl; but this nobleman joining in the rising of 1715, his honours and estates fell under an

* George, 10th earl-marischal. This nobleman, who, as mentioned, was attainted in consequence of his participation in the rising of 1715, had the good fortune to effect his escape into Spain, and thence removing into Prussia, obtained the confidence and friendship of FREDERICK III., who appointed him, in 1750, ambassador to France, invested him with the order of the Black Eagle, and constituted him governor of Neufchatel. In 1759, his lordship being ambassador from Prussia to the court of Madrid, discovered the secret of the family compact, by which the different branches of the house of Bourbon had bound themselves to assist each other; and communicating the same to Mr. Pitt, that minister represented his case so favourably to GEORGE II., that his majesty granted his lordship's pardon in 1759; and an act of parliament passed act of attainder in 1716. His lordship was for many years subsequently in the service of the King of Prussia; and his only brother, the Hon. George Keith, following his fortunes, distinguished himself first in the Russian service, where he attained the rank of field-marshal, and had the command of the Russian army in the war of 1740. He was afterwards in the service of the King of Prussia. He fell at Hockirchin, 14 Oct. 1758; and a superb monument to his memory, at Berlin, records his achievements, as the celebrated Marshal Keith.

The HON. SIR JOHN KEITH, Knt., 3rd son of William, 6th earl-marischal, by Lady Mary Erskine, was elevated to the peerage, 26 June, 1677, by the titles of Baron Keith, of Inverurie, and Keith Hall, and EARL OF KINTORE, having been appointed in 1660, knight-marischal of Scotland, and that office settled hereditarily in his family, in consideration of the loyalty he had evinced in preserving the regalia of Scotland from falling into the hands of CROMWELL. Sir John Keith had those ensigns of royalty safely conveyed from Dunmore Castle and deposited under ground in the church of Kinneff; sailing immediately for France, it was supposed that he had carried them away; in consequence of which, all further search by the Cromwellians was abandoned.* His lordship obtained a new grant of his honours in 1694, extending the reversion to his own female heirs, and to the male issue of his brother George. He m. Margaret, dau. of Thomas, 2nd Earl of Haddington, and was s. in 1714, by his only son,

WILLIAM, 2nd earl. This nobleman, joining the insurgents of 1715, was at the battle of Sheriff Muir, and never afterwards shaved his beard; he does not appear, however, to have suffered in consequence of his participation in the Rebellion, further than being deprived of the office of marischal. His lordship m. Catherine, eldest dau. of David, 4th Viscount Stormont, by whom he had issue,

I. JOHN, } successive earls.
II. WILLIAM, }

III. Catherine, m. to David, 5th Lord Falconer, of Halkertoun, and had, with other issue,

1 ALEXANDER, 6th Lord Falconer; who was s. in 1762, by his brother,

2 WILLIAM, 7th Lord Falconer; who d. in Dec. 1776, leaving a son and successor,

ANTHONY-ADRIAN, 8th Lord Falconer; of whom hereafter as 5th EARL OF KINTORE.

3 George, captain, R.N., father of GEORGE FALCONER, Esq. of Phesdo.

JOHN, 3rd earl; who d. s.p. in 1758, when the honours devolved upon his brother,

WILLIAM, 4th earl. This nobleman dying unm. in 1761, the estates devolved upon George, the 10th and attainted earl-marischal, while the peerage remained suspended until that nobleman's decease, in 1778, when it passed to

ANTHONY-ADRIAN FALCONER, 8th Lord Falconer, of Halkertoun, (revert to Catherine, dau. of William, 4th earl, and her descendants,) who inherited with it the estate of Kintore, the old castle of Hall Forest, given to the family by ROBERT I., and Keith Hall. The noble family of Falconer deduce their descent from Ranulphus, (son of Walter de Lunkyr,) appointed king's falconer by WILLIAM THE LION, whence he assumed the surname of in the following year to enable him to inherit estates, but he rejected the insertion of a clause empowering his succession to honours. His lordship was further favoured by the crown, under the sanction of parliament, with a grant of public money in 1761. He died in 1778, at Potsdam, at the advanced age of eighty-eight, enjoying his Majesty of Prussia's confidence to the last in so great a degree as to be called "the king's friend." An "Eloge de my Lord Mareschal," by M. D'Alembert, was published at Berlin, in 1779.

* For another version of the preservation of the regalia of Scotland, see SIR WILLIAM-MUSGRAVE OGILVIE, Bart., whose ancestor had been appointed, by Sir John Keith, deputy-lieutenant of Dunottar.

IVONE KIRKPATRICK, obtained a confirmatory charter of the lands of Closeburne from ALEXANDER II., dated 15 Aug.

Lineage.

The surname of Knightley was assumed from the place of that name in the co. of Stafford, of which Raynald de Knightley was lord in the 20th year of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

RICHARD KNIGHTLEY, Esq. of Fawsley, represented the co. of Northampton in parliament in the 21st JAMES I. and in the 3rd CHARLES I. He likewise served the office of sheriff in the first year of the latter reign. This gentleman was a zealous supporter of the republican party; and it was at a meeting held at his house that a plan for annihilating the prerogative of the crown was first projected. By that scheme the king was to be divested of the power of making war, or concluding peace. The parliament was to possess the sole control of the militia, the disposal of all places of trust and emolument, and to assemble once a year without any summons from the crown; and to have, likewise, the entire superintendence of the royal revenues, under the management of councils appointed by the house. Mr. Knightley d. in 1657, and from his third son,

Lineage.

ALMARIC LAKE, of Southampton, had two sons,

THOMAS, (Sir) of whom presently.

The elder son,

SIR THOMAS LAKE, of Canons, co. Middlesex, was born at Southampton, bred a scholar, and afterwards taken into the service of Sir Francis Walsingham, secretary of state, as his amanuensis. By this minister he was recommended to QUEEN ELIZABETH, to whom he read French and Latin. A little before her majesty's death, she made him clerk of her signet; and after her decease, he was deputed by the state, in that capacity, to attend JAMES I. from Berwick. That monarch soon afterwards employed him in French affairs, and knighted him. After Sir Robert Cecil (Salisbury) attained the administration of affairs, the secretaryship of state was divided, and Sir Thomas Lake was appointed one of the secretaries; "and so continued," says A. Wood, "with honourable esteem of all men, till malice and revenge, two violent passions, overruling the weaker sex,* concerning his wife and dau., involved him in their quarrel, the chief and only cause of his ruin." Sir Thomas m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir William Ryther, lord mayor of London, and had,

THOMAS, (Sir.)

LANCELOT, (Sir.)

Elizabeth, m. to Lord Roos.

Anne, m. to William Stonor, Esq. of Stonor.

Mary, m. to John Ingleby, Esq.

Bridget, m. to Sir William Domville.

Sir Thomas d. at his seat of Canons, co. Middlesex, (which he bought in 1604,) 17 Sept. 1630, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR THOMAS LAKE, of Canons; who d. in 1653, and was s. by his brother,

SIR LANCELOT LAKE, of Canons, who m. Frances, dau. of Sir Thomas Cheeke, of Pirgo, by Elizabeth, his wife,

* From a statement made by Saunderson, who was secretary to Lord Roos, during that nobleman's embassy in Spain, (1611,) we extract the cause and issue of the great feud between Frances, 2nd wife of Thomas, 1st Earl of Exeter, and the Lake family, alluded to above. We must previously premise that Thomas, 1st Earl of Exeter, espoused, for his 2nd countess, Frances-Brydges, dau. of William, Lord Chandos, and widow of Sir Thomas Smith, master of requests to JAMES I., and that the lady was thirty-eight years younger than her noble husband. It is necessary also to observe, that Lord Roos, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Thomas Lake, was only son of William, 2nd Earl of Exeter, (son and successor of the 1st earl,) by Elizabeth, only dau. and heir of Edward Manners, Earl of Rutland. He was thus step-grandson to Frances, Countess of Exeter.

Upon Lord Roos's return from Spain, falling into some neglect of his wife and her kindred, and soon after withdrawing into Italy, where he became a Roman catholic, Lady Lake and her daughter, Lady Roos, asserted that an improper intimacy had subsisted between his lordship and the countess, his step-grandmother; and that the discovery of the intrigue had caused his lordship's flight to Italy. The matter, at length, assumed so serious a character that it was finally investigated before JAMES I. in person, when the whole story was found to have originated in the malice of Lady Lake and her dau.; and the latter (Lady Roos) made an ample confession of the plot, in the middle of the trial, for which she was exempted from penal sentence. Sir Thomas Lake and his wife were condemned to pay £10,000 to the crown, and £5000 to the countess, while Sarah Wharton, one of the perjured witnesses, was sentenced to be whipped through the streets at the cart's tail, and to do penance in St. Martin's church.

dau. of Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick; and d. in 1680, leaving, with other issue,

THOMAS, (Sir) who inherited Canons, and marrying Rebecca, dau. of Sir James Langham, Bart., had several children; of whom

And

WARWICK LAKE, Esq., who m. Elizabeth, only dau. and sole heir of Sir Charles Gerard,* Bart. of Flamberds, and granddaughter, maternally, of Charles Seymour, Lord Seymour, of Trowbridge; and dying in 1712, left an only son,

Bucks*, in consideration of the high military talents and personal valour he had displayed in the command of the army during the Mahratta war, receiving, at the same time, the thanks of both houses of parliament. Sir Charles s. as 2nd baronet, upon the demise of his father, 4 Oct. 1824; and was appointed knight-marshal of the king's household, 30 Jan. 1825.

Lineage.

LIEUT.-COL. ROBERT BURGESS, a gentleman of considerable fortune in the co. Berks, distinguished himself amongst the most gallant adherents of royalty during the civil wars, and had the honour of successfully opposing the usurper Cromwell himself; of which affair the following account is extracted from Rushworth's Historical Collection for 1645:—

"He (Cromwell) then marched over the river to Farringdon, hoping to have reduced the place, where a garrison was kept for the king by Lieut.-Col. Burgess, (as deputy-governor under Col. Owen,) but wanting foot for that service, he sent to Major-Gen. Brown, at Abingdon, who dispatched thither about five or six hundred; whilst, in the meantime, Cromwell sent in his summons:

"Sir,—I summon you to deliver into my hands the house wherein you are, and your ammunition, with all things else there, together with your persons, to be disposed of as the parliament shall appoint; which, if you refuse to do, you are to expect the utmost severity of war.

"I rest your servant, O. C.

"April 29, 1645.

"To the governor of the garrison of Farringdon."

"To which answer was returned, 'that the king had intrusted them to keep that garrison, and, without special order from his majesty himself, they would not deliver it.'

"Cromwell then drew unto the town of Farringdon, and sent this second summons:—

"Sir,—I understand, by forty or fifty poor men, whom you forced into your house, that you had many there whom you cannot arm, and who are not serviceable to you. If these men should perish by your means, it were great inhumanity surely. Honour and honesty require this, that though ye be prodigal of your own lives, yet not to be so of theirs. If God give you into my hands, I will not spare a man of you, if you put me to a storm.

"O. C."

"But the deputy-governor returned this resolute answer,—

"Sir,—We have forced none into our garrison. We should have you to know, you are not now at Blechington. The guiltless blood that shall be spilt God shall require at your hands that have caused this unnatural war. We fear not your storming, nor will have any more parleys.

About three o'clock the next morning, (the Abingdon foot being come up,) Cromwell with them and his dragoons began the assault, but was repulsed with the loss of fourteen men killed, and Captain Canon (who reared the first scaling ladder, and ascended himself) taken prisoner, with an ensign and eight common soldiers, and divers wounded; after which, CROMWELL led off his force and joined Fairfax."

I. JAMES-BLAND BURGESS, Esq., barrister-at-law, only son of George Burgess, Esq., commissioner of excise and receiver-general of the salt duties in Scotland, by Anne, only dau. of James, 10th Lord Somerville, was created a Baronet, 31 Oct. 1795, upon resigning the office of under-secretary of state for foreign affairs, which he held from

LANSDOWNE, MARQUESS OF, (Henry Petty-Fitz-Maurice, K.G., D.C.L., F.R.S.,) Earl of Wycombe, Viscount Calne and Calstone, and Baron Wycombe, of Chipping Wycombe, co. Bucks, in the peerage of Great Britain; Earl of Kerry and Earl of Shelburne, Viscount Clanmaurice and Fitzmaurice, Baron of Kerry, Lixnaw, and Dunkerron, in the peerage of Ireland; b. 2 July, 1780; m. 30 March, 1808, Louisa-Emma, 5th dau. of Henry-Thomas, 2nd Earl of Ilchester, by whom he has issue, WILLIAM-THOMAS, Earl of Kerry, M.P.; b. 30 March, 1811; m. 18 March, 1834, the Hon. Augusta-Lavinia-Priscilla Ponsonby, 2nd dau. of Viscount Duncannon, and has a daughter, Mary.

HENRY, Earl of Shelburne,* b. 5 Jan. 1816. Louisa.

His lordship s. to the English honours, and the Irish Earldom of Shelburne, with the Viscounty of Fitzmaurice and the Barony of Dunkerron, upon the demise of his half-brother, 15 Nov. 1809; and to the Earldom of Kerry &c. at the decease of his cousin, Francis-Thomas, 3rd Earl of Kerry, 4 July, 1818. The Marquess of Lansdowne has filled the office of chief-secretary of state for the home department, and is now lord-president of the council. He is lord-lieut. of Wiltshire.

Lineage.

The Earls of Kerry trace their origin to a common ancestor in the direct line with the eminent houses of Fitzgerald, Windsor, Carew, M'Kenzie, &c.; namely, Walter Fitz-Otho, Castellan of Windsor in the eleventh century; whose eldest son,

GERALD FITZ-WALTER, obtained a grant from HENRY I. of Molesford, co. Berks. This Gerald m. Nesta, dau. of Rees Gruffydh, Prince of South Wales, and had issue, MAURICE-FITZGERALD, ancestor of the ducal house of Leinster.

WILLIAM, of whom presently.

David, consecrated, in 1147, Bishop of St. David's; and d. in 1176.

The second son,

WILLIAM, called by Geraldus Cambrensis the eldest son; but the pedigree of the family of Leinster setting forth the contrary, and his being possessed of the castle of Karriu,

* The present Marquess of Lansdowne entitles his heir apparent EARL OF SHELburne, but certainly without authority. The Earldom of Shelburne is a distinct Irish peerage, enjoyed by his lordship, one of the privileges of which he himself exercises at every election of an Irish representative peer; it does not therefore merge in the Marquessate of Lansdowne. The courtesy title of the Marquess of Lansdowne's eldest son is, correctly, EARL OF WYCOMBE—of the Earl of Shelburne, Viscount Fitzmaurice.

co. Carmarthen, in South Wales, his mother's inheritance, and assuming that surname, bespeak him a younger son, which is confirmed by the unerring testimony of the addition of chief, ermine, to his coat-armour, (a certain sign of cadency, to distinguish him and his posterity from the elder branch of the family.) This William was sent, in 1171, by Earl of Strongbow, into Ireland, with his son Raymond, where, for a time, he assisted in the reduction of that kingdom; but returning to his native country, died there in the year 1173, leaving issue by Catharine, dau. of Sir Adam de Kingsley, of Cheshire, seven sons and a dau. The eldest son,

REYMOND, surnamed, from his corpulency, Le Grosse, having, as stated above, accompanied his father into Ireland, was a principal in the reduction of that kingdom. He m. Baselia, sister of Earl Strongbow, and had, as a marriage portion with her, a large territorial grant and the constablership of Leinster. After this we find him aiding MacCarthy, King of Cork, against his rebellious son, Cormac O'Lehanagh, and acquiring for his services a large tract of land in the co. of Kerry, where he settled his eldest son,

MAURICE FITZ-REYMOND, who m. for his 1st wife, Jahanna, dau. of Miles Fitz-Henry, founder of Conall Abbey, co. Kildare, and chief-governor of Ireland, by whom he had a son,

THOMAS, who assumed the surname of Fitzmaurice, and became Lord of Kerry and Lixnaw. This Thomas founded the Grey Franciscan Friary of Ardfert, in 1253. He m. Grace, dau. of MacMurrough Cavenagh, son of Dermoid, King of Leinster; and dying in 1280, was s. by his eldest son,

MAURICE, 2nd Lord Kerry; who sat in the parliament held at Dublin in 1295, and attended a writ of summons of EDWARD I., in 1297, with horse and arms, in an expedition against Scotland. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of Sir John M'Cleod, of Galway; and dying in 1303, was s. by his son,

NICHOLAS, 3rd Lord of Kerry; whose son,

MAURICE, 4th Lord of Kerry, having a dispute with Dermoid Oge MacCarthy, killed him upon the bench before the judge of assize, at Tralee, in 1325, for which he was tried and attainted by the parliament of Dublin, but was not put to death. His lands were, however, forfeited, but restored, after his decease, to his brother and successor,

JOHN, 5th lord; from whose time we are obliged, by our limits, to pass over nearly four centuries, and to come to

THOMAS, 21st Lord of Kerry, who was created, 17 Jan. 1722, Viscount Clanmaurice and EARL OF KERRY. His lordship m. in 1692, Anne, only dau. of Sir William Petty, physician-general to the army in Ireland, in 1652, so celebrated for his extraordinary talents and surprising fortune. In Dec. 1664, Sir William undertook the survey of Ireland; and in March, 1666, he had completed the measurement of two millions and eight thousand acres of forfeited lands; for which, by contract, he was to receive one penny per acre, and did actually acquire an estate of £6000 a-year. This eminent and distinguished person died of a gangrene in his foot, 16 Dec. 1687. The Earl of Kerry had issue,

I WILLIAM, who s. at his decease, 16 March, 1741, as 2nd EARL OF KERRY. His lordship, who was a col. in the Coldstream foot-guards, left at his decease, in 1747, by his 2nd wife, Gertrude, only dau. of Richard, 4th Earl of Cavan,

Anna-Maria, m. to Maurice Fitzgerald, Knight of Kerry;

And an only son, his successor,

FRANCIS-THOMAS, 3rd Earl of Kerry; who m. Anastasia, dau. and co-heir of Peter Daly, Esq. of Quansbury, co. Galway; but dying s. p. 4 July, 1818, his lordship's honours devolved upon his cousin, Henry, present Marquess of Lansdowne.

II. JOHN, of whom presently.

1. Elizabeth-Anne, m. to Sir Maurice Crosbie, of Ardfert, created Baron Brandon.

II. Arabella, m. to Arthur Denny, Esq. of Tralee.

III. Charlotte, m. to John Conway, son and heir of John Colthurst, Esq. of Ardrum.

Thomas, 1st Earl of Kerry's 2nd son,

The HON. JOHN FITZMAURICE, having inherited the Petty estates upon the demise of his maternal uncle, Henry Petty, Earl of Shelburne, in April, 1751, (when that earldom expired,) assumed the surname and arms of Petty, and was advanced to the peerage of Ireland, 7 Oct. 1751, by the titles of Baron Dunkerron and Viscount Fitzmaurice. His lordship was further promoted, 26 June, 1753, to the Earldom of Shelburne. He m. in 1734, his first-cousin, Mary, dau. of the Hon. William Fitzmaurice, of Gallane, co. WILLIAM, 2nd Earl of Shelburne, a general-officer in the army, and a distinguished statesman in the reign of GEORGE III. In 1782, his lordship, after the decease of the Marquess of Rockingham, (under whom he filled the office of secretary for foreign affairs,) was nominated prime-minister; and 30 Nov. 1784, advanced to the dignities of Earl of Wycombe, co. Bucks, Viscount Calne and Calstone, and MARQUESS OF LANSDOWNE, co. Somerset. Sir Thomas, who is the lineal male representative of the family of Lauder, of Lauder Tower and Bass, and, through a female, of Dick, of Braid and Grange, s. as 7th baronet, upon the decease of his father, in 1820.

Lineage.

The surname of Lauder, anciently De Lavedre, is of Norman origin; and the Scottish historians mention the first De Lavedre as one of those Anglo-Norman barons who accompanied MALCOLM CANMORE into Scotland, 1056, to assist that prince in recovering his kingdom from the usurper MACBETH: for which important service De Lavedre obtained grants of land from the king, in Berwickshire, to which he gave his own name, as other knights similarly recompensed had done, in obedience, according to Boethius, of a direct royal command. The next of the family of whom there is any particular notice is,

ROBERTUS DE LAUDRE, who seems to have been the 5th baron, and was a soldier of the cross in the 5th crusade, in 1188; after him, the earliest we find is

SIR ROBERT DE LAUDRE, the brave associate of Sir William Wallace, (probably the 8th baron.) This gallant soldier d. 1311, and his monument existed in the time of Nisbet, who gives its inscription at length. The present baronet has in his possession an original charter from William de Lambirton, Bishop of St. Andrews, to another Robert de Lavedre, of that fragment of the island of Bass over which the abbey of St. Andrews had, until then, retained a right, the family having enjoyed the larger part of it for generations before. It is dated 4 June, 1316, as is the charter of confirmation, by John de Forfar, prior of St. Andrews, also in the family charter crest. This Robert was ambassador to England from ROBERT I. upon various occasions. In 1323, he was one of the proxies in the Oath of Peace with EDWARD; on which occasion he swore, "on the soul of the Bruce," for the due maintenance of it by the Scottish king. His son,

SIR ROBERT DE LAVEDRE, fought at Haliton, in 1333, in the 3rd division of the army, under Archibald Douglas, Lord of Galloway, nick-named Tyneman, regent of Scotland. Immediately after the defeat, Sir Robert, who was "Justiciary by North the Forth," hastened to occupy the castle of Urquhart, on Lochness, one of the only four strongholds which defied the power of EDWARD. This gallant knight was generally denominated of Quarrelwood. His son,

Lineage.

This very ancient and distinguished family of North Britain has been seated at Thirlestane, in Berwickshire, for nearly six centuries. Its earliest ancestor was Sir Richard de Mautland, (as the name was formerly written,) who gave divers lands to the abbey of Dryburgh, in the reign of ALEXANDER III.

SIR RICHARD MAITLAND, 12th feudal Lord of Thirlestane, was a person of considerable importance in the era in which he lived. In 1552 and 1560, we find him one of the commissioners appointed to adjust the differences with England about the debatable lands on the borders. In 1554, he was constituted one of the extraordinary lords of Session; in 1561, appointed one of the ordinary lords, and in the following year, keeper of the privy-seal, which latter office he resigned in 1567 in favour of his 2nd son. His lordship retired from the bench in 1584; on which occasion JAMES VI. acknowledged, by letter, Sir Richard's faithful services "to his grandsire, goodsire, gooddame, mother, and himself;" by which it would seem that this eminent person was employed seventy years at least in the public service. In the literary world he was known by his history of the family of Seton, and poems on several subjects. He m. Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Cranston, and had,

WILLIAM, of Leighington, secretary of state for Scotland, and one of the principal actors in the turbulent times of the unhappy MARY. Secretary Maitland was deputed, in 1565, to announce to ELIZABETH the marriage of MARY with Darnley; and he was the person said subsequently to have projected the alliance of his unfortunate mistress with the Duke of Norfolk. In 1571, he was deprived of the secretaryship, proclaimed a traitor, and attainted in the parliament held in the Canongate; and being in the castle of Edinburgh when it surrendered, in 1573, he terminated his life, according to the old Roman fashion, says Melvil, by a voluntary death, 9 June, 1573, to avoid the ignominy of public execution, the fate of his friend, Kirkaldy, the governor. Secretary Maitland left an only son,

JAMES, who, being a catholic, withdrew to the Continent, and sold his estate of Leighington to his uncle,

SIR JOHN MAITLAND, Knt., (second son of Sir Richard,) who, having filled the high offices of lord-privy-seal, judge of the court of Session, secretary of state, and LORD-CHANCELLOR OF SCOTLAND, was elevated to the peerage, 18 May, 1590, by the title of Lord Maitland, of Thirlestane. His lordship m. Jane, only dau. and heir of James, 4th Lord Fleming, and grandau., maternally, of James Hamilton, Duke of Chatelherault; and dying in 1595, was s. by his only son,

JOHN, 2nd baron; who was created, 2 April, 1816, Viscount Lauderdale; and 24 March, 1624, Lord Thirlestane and Boltoun, Viscount Maitland, and EARL OF LAUDERDALE, with remainder to his heirs male bearing the surname and arms of Maitland. His lordship was president of the council, and one of the ordinary lords of Session. He m. Isabel, dau. of Alexander, Earl of Dumfermline, by whom he had issue, two sons and a dau. The earl d. in Jan. 1645, while president of the parliament, and was s. by his elder son,

This nobleman having distinguished himself by his zealous and active exertions in the royal cause during the civil wars, was installed, after the Restoration, a knight of the Garter, appointed high-commissioner of Scotland, and created, 2 May, 1672, Marquess of March and DUKE OF LAUDERDALE, in Scotland; and enrolled amongst the peers of England, 25 June, 1674, as Baron Petersham and Earl of Guilford, co. Surrey. His grace m. 1st, Anne, 2nd dau. of Alexander, 1st Earl of Home, co-heir, with her sister, Margaret, Countess of Moray, of her brother, James, 2nd Earl of Home, by whom he had an only child, ANNE, m. in 1666, to John, 2nd Marquess of Tweeddale. The duke espoused 2ndly, 17 Feb. 1671-2, Eliza, Countess of Dysart, relict of Sir Lionel Talmash, Bart., but had no other issue. He d. in 1682, when all his own honours expired, while those of his family devolved upon his brother, LE DESPENCER.

LE DESPENCER, BARONESS, (Mary-Frances-Elizabeth Stapleton,) in the peerage of England; b. 24 March, 1822; s. upon the demise of her grandfather, 3 Oct. 1831.

Lineage.

This is one of the old baronies created by writ of summons, which being heritable through the female as well

HUGH DE SPENCER, son of Thomas de Spencer, (who was the sixth in descent from Robert Despencer, or Stewart, to WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and one of his barons,) was summoned to parliament, 14 Dec. 1264, when he was constituted, by patent, justiciary of England. This personage, one of the most powerful barons of his time, taking up arms with other nobles in defence of their ancient privileges, was elected by them, in 1258, one of the twelve, who, with twelve other barons chosen by the king, were to amend and reform all the political abuses complained of. Hugh de Spencer distinguished himself subsequently in the field against the crown, but, disgusted with the haughty deportment of Simon Mountfort, Earl of Leicester, he forsook the baronial banner, and obtained immediately the highest favour of the court; being, as stated above, elevated to the peerage, and appointed justiciary, an office which then comprehended the jurisdiction of all the present law-courts. Again, however, espousing the cause of the barons, he fell at the battle of Evesham, 5 Aug. 1265, and was s. by his son, (by Olivia, dau. and heir of Philip, Lord Basset, of Wycombe, co. Bucks.)

HUGH, known in history as Hugh Despencer, senior, 2nd baron; who was summoned to parliament, 23 June, 1295; and appointed governor of Marlborough Castle, 2nd EDWARD II. He was further promoted to the dignity of Earl of Winchester, 10 May, 1322. This nobleman was banished the realm through the influence of the barons, in 1320; but returning the ensuing year, and adhering stanchly to the cause of his oppressed sovereign, was beheaded after the landing of QUEEN ISABEL and the Prince of Wales, in Oct. 1326, without the formality of trial. His lordship m. Isabel, dau. of William de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, and widow of Sir Patrick Chaworth, by whom he had, with five daus., an only son,

SIR HUGH DE SPENCER, (known as Hugh De-Spencer, junior,) who having m. Eleanor, dau. and co-heir of Gilbert, Earl of Gloucester, and niece of EDWARD II., was summoned to parliament as a BARON, from 1314 to 1325, and was commonly called EARL OF GLOUCESTER. In the 13th EDWARD II., he was nominated lord-chamberlain. His lordship was soon after, however, obliged with his father to leave the kingdom; but being recalled with him, was constituted governor of the castle and demesne lands of Gloucester, and warden of the forest of Dean. He was eventually, however, beheaded at Hereford, in Nov. 1326; and having been declared a traitor by parliament, his honours became forfeited. This eminent nobleman left issue,

I. HUGH.

II. Edward, m. Anne, dau. of Henry, Lord Ferrers, of Groby; and dying in 1342, left

1 EDWARD, of whom presently as heir to his uncle.

2 Thomas.

3 Henry, the warlike Bishop of Norwich, who d. in 1406.

The eldest son,

HUGH, commonly called Lord Glamorgan, having entered into the military service of EDWARD III., and distinguished himself in France and Scotland, was summoned to parliament from 1338 to 1349, when he d. without issue; and his nephew and heir,

SIR EDMUND DE SPENCER, being summoned from 1357 to 1372, was installed a knight of the most noble order of the Garter. His lordship m. Elizabeth, dau. and heir of Sir Bartholomew Burghersh, Knt.; and dying in 1375, was s. by his son,

THOMAS, commonly called Despenser, of Glamorgan, who was summoned in 1396, and created Earl of Gloucester in 1305; but being beheaded and declared a traitor in 1400, for conspiring to restore RICHARD II., his honours were extinguished. This nobleman left a son and heir, who died during minority, when his lordship's sister,

ISABEL DE SPENCER, became his heir, and m. Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Worcester and Baron Abergavenny, by whom she had an only daughter,

ELIZABETH BEAUCHAMP, who m. Edward Neville, 4th son of Ralph, Earl of Westmorland, (an earldom forfeited in 1570;) and the attainder of her grandfather, Thomas, 7th Baron de Spencer, having been reversed, her ladyship carried the Baronies of Bergavenny, Burghersh, and De Spencer, into the family of her husband, where they remained until 1589, when

HENRY, the 4th Baron Abergavenny, d. without male issue. His lordship's only daughter,

The HON. MARY NEVILL, m. in 1574, Sir Thomas Fane, Knt., by whom she had issue, four sons and two daus. Lady Fane, after the demise of Sir Thomas, 25 May, 1604, was restored, by letters patent, to the dignity of Baroness Le De Spencer, in remainder to the heirs of her body, with the ancient seat, place, and precedence of her ancestors, (her ladyship was likewise entitled to the Barony of Burghersh, but that has never been claimed; the Barony of Abergavenny was confirmed at the same time to the heir male.) Lady Le De Spencer d. 28 June, 1626, and was s. by her eldest son,

FRANCIS, who was created Baron Burghersh and EARL OF WESTMORLAND, 29 Dec. 1624, and the Barony of De Spencer merged in the earldom, until the demise of

JOHN, the 7th earl, in 1762, (who succeeded his two brothers,) without issue, when it fell into abeyance between the heirs of his lordship's sisters, Mary, wife of Sir Francis Dashwood, Bart., and Catherine, lady of William Paul, Esq.; but the crown terminated the abeyance, in 1763, in favour of

SIR FRANCIS DASHWOOD, Bart., son and heir of the above-named Sir Francis. This nobleman dying, however, in 1781, without issue, the barony again fell into abeyance between his sister, Rachel, relict of Sir Robert Austen, Bart., and the heir of his aunt, Lady Catherine Paul; namely, the descendant of

CATHERINE PAUL, (only dau. of Lady Catherine,) who m. William Stapleton, Esq., (created a Baronet, 28 June, 1787,) and left (with a daughter) an only son,

SIR THOMAS STAPLETON, 2nd bart. of Rotherfield Greys, co. Oxford. This gentleman m. in 1765, Mary, dau. of Henry Fane, Esq. of Wormsley, co. Oxford, by whom he had issue,

THOMAS, in whose favour the abeyance terminated in 1788.

William, lieut.-gen.; m. in 1790, Anna-Maria, eldest dau. of the Hon. and Rt. Rev. Frederick Keppel, Lord Bishop of Exeter (deceased); and d. in 1826, leaving an only surviving son,

His grace was summoned to the House of Lords in the Barony of Osborne of Kiverton (23 June, 1838) the month before the late duke's decease.

Lineage.

This noble family, like many others in the peerage, traces its origin to the city of London, where it first became of importance through

SIR EDWARD OSBORNE, Knt., who filled the office of lord mayor in the year 1582. This gentleman discovering an early bias to commercial pursuits, was put apprentice to Sir William Hewet, of the Cloth-workers' Company, one of the most considerable merchants in London, and, while serving his apprenticeship, Sir William's only child, Anna, having accidentally fallen from the window of Sir William's house on London Bridge into the Thames, Mr. Osborne leaped into the river and brought her out in safety, when but little hope remained of her rescue. This lady was afterwards his wife, and by her had issue,

Alice, m. to Sir John Peyton, Bart. of Iselham, Cambridgeshire.

Sir Edward espoused 2ndly, Margaret, who outlived him, and wedded 2ndly, Robert Clarke, Esq., one of the barons of the Exchequer; by her, however, he had no issue. Sir Edward Osborne was member of parliament for the city of London in 1585. He d. in 1591, and was s. by his elder son,

SIR EDWARD OSBORNE, Knt. of Kiveton, co. York, who was created a Baronet, 13 July, 1620. In 1629, when Thomas, Lord Viscount Wentworth, (afterwards Earl of Strafford,) was made lord-president of the North, Sir Edward Osborne was appointed vice-president of the council to CHARLES I. for the north of England; and upon the breaking out of the Rebellion, in 1641, was lieutenant of the forces raised in his majesty's defence in that part of the country. He m. 1st, Margaret, eldest dau. of Thomas, Viscount Fauconberg, and had a son, Edward, who was killed in youth by the fall of some chimneys at his father's residence. Sir Edward espoused 2ndly, Anne, widow of William Middleton, Esq. of Stockeld, Yorkshire, and daughter of Thomas Walmesley,* Esq. of Dunkenhall, co. Lancaster, (by his wife, Elizabeth Danvers, granddaughter of John Nevill, LORD LATIMER—see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage;) by this lady he had an only son, his successor,

SIR THOMAS, who became lord-high-treasurer of England, and was elevated to the peerage, 15 August, 1673, as Baron Osborne, of Kiveton, and Viscount Latimer, of Danby. Mr. Williams; and Mary, m. 1st, to Henry, 2nd Duke of Beaufort; and 2ndly, to John, 4th Earl of Dundonald. The duke having adopted the naval profession, attained the rank of vice-admiral of the red in 1705, and conveyed the Duke of Marlborough and his army, with six men-of-war, to Holland, in the same year. He d. 25 June, 1729, and was s. by his 2nd and only surviving son,

This family claims a settlement in England long antecedent to the Norman Conquest, and deduces its pedigree from

SIR TITUS DE LEIGHTON, knight of the Sepulchre, upon his return from the Holy Land, was a joint founder of the abbey of Buldewas, in Salop. His son,

SIR RICHARD DE LEIGHTON, Knt., had a reconveyance from William Fitz Allan, soon after the Conquest, of the manor of Leighton; and from him descended

JOHN LEIGHTON, Esq. of Stratton, who was thrice high-sheriff of Shropshire in the reign of EDWARD IV., and obtained the manors of Watlesborough and Alderbury, (still in the possession of the family,) by marriage with Anchoret, dau. and co-heir of Sir John Burgh, and grandau. of Sir Hugh Burgh, treasurer of England, by whom he had a son, his successor,

SIR THOMAS LEIGHTON, who was knight of the body to HENRY VII., and was one of the chief commanders in the army sent over to France, in the beginning of that reign, in aid of the Duke of Bretagne against the French monarch; he was also engaged in the wars of HENRY VIII., when he had the honour of being made knight-banneret under the king's own banner displayed in the royal army, his majesty being present, for his valour and conduct at the battle of Spurs. Otho-Augustus, b. 10 Oct. 1827.

His grace is the sole duke and the premier marquess and earl of Ireland.

Lineage.

This illustrious family is descended from a common ancestor with the house of Fitzmaurice, Earls of Kerry, (an earldom now merged in the Marquessate of Lansdowne,) and that of Windsor, Earls of Plymouth; namely,

MAURICE FITZGERALD, through whose exertions the possession of Ireland was chiefly accomplished by HEN. II.

This Maurice was son of Gerald Fitz-Otho, (son of Walter Fitz-Otho, Castellan of Windsor in the reign of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR; which Walter was son of Otho, a Baron of England in the 16th year of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR,) by Nesta, dau. of Rhese, Prince of South Wales. The said Maurice obtained for his services a grant of extensive territories in the province of Leinster, and was constituted, in 1172, one of the governors of Ireland; in which year he slew O'Rourke, Prince of Meath, then in rebellion against the English government. This feudal chief d., full of honour, 1 Sept. 1177, and was s. by his eldest son,

GERALD, who was with his father in the memorable sally out of Dublin, anno 1173, when that city was besieged by O'Connor, King of Connaught, with an army of 36,000 men, over whom the Fitzgeralds obtained a complete victory. This Gerald dying at Sligo, was s. by his son, (by Latharme, dau. of Hamo de Valois, lord-justice of Ireland in 1197,)

MAURICE FITZGERALD, Lord of Offaley, who was put into possession, by a mandatory letter of HENRY III., dated 26 Nov. 1216, of Maynooth, and all other lands of which his father died seized in Ireland, and was put also into possession of the Castle of CRUM, co. Limerick. This nobleman is said to have been the first who brought the orders of friars-minors and preachers into Ireland. In 1229, the king, appreciating the good services of the family since its settlement in Ireland, constituted his lordship lord-justice of the kingdom. In 1236, Lord Offaley built the castle of Armagh; and, in 1242, he erected a similar edifice at Athlone. His lordship d. 20 May, 1257, in the habit of St. Francis, leaving the reputation of having been a "valiant knight, a very pleasant man, inferior to none in the kingdom, having lived all his life with commendation." He was s. by his son,

MAURICE-FITZMAURICE, then in minority; and Prince EDWARD having obtained the dominion of Ireland from his father, King HENRY, claimed his wardship as a part of the prerogative; but the BARONY OF OFFALEY being held by the minor and his deceased father under Margaret, Countess of Lincoln, to whom belonged the co. Kildare, as widow of the Earl of Pembroke, that lady contested the right of wardship, and brought the case before the king himself for decision. This nobleman was afterwards chief-governor of Ireland, and was s. at his decease by his son,

JOHN, Lord of Offaley, designated of Callan, who m. 1st, Margery, dau. of Sir Thomas Anthony, with whom he acquired the lands of Decies and Desmond, and had an only son, MAURICE. He m. 2ndly, Honora, dau. of Hugh O'Connor, (the first Irish lady chosen for a wife by any member of the family,) and had four sons, Gilbert, from whom descended the White Knight.

John, ancestor of the Knights of the Glyn, or the Valley, now represented by JOHN-FRAUNCEIS FITZGERALD, KNIGHT of GLYN. (See BURKE's Commoners, vol. iv. p. 179.)

Maurice, first KNIGHT of KERRY, or the Black Knight, now represented by the Right Hon. MAURICE FITZGERALD, Knight of Kerry.

Thomas, from whom the Fitzgeralds of the Island, co. Kerry.

This John being killed with his eldest son, Maurice, at Callan, by Maccarthy More, against whom the Fitzgeralds had raised a great army in 1261, was s. by his grandson,

THOMAS, nicknamed Nappagh Simiacus, or the APE, a surname thus acquired—being only nine months old when his father and grandfather fell at Callan, his attendants rushing out at the first astonishment excited by the intelligence, left the child alone in its cradle, when a baboon, kept in the family, took him up, and carried him to the top of the steeple of the Abbey of Tralee; whence, after conveying him round the battlements, and exhibiting him to the appalled spectators, he brought him down safely, and laid him in his cradle. From this tradition the supporters of the house of Leinster are said to have been adopted. This Thomas, who is called 6th feudal Lord Offaley, was constituted lord-justice of Ireland, and captain of all Desmond, in 1295; and being of so much power, was generally styled Prince and Ruler of Munster. He m. Margaret, dau. of John, Lord Barry, of Oletham; and dying in 1298, left two sons, JOHN, his successor.

Maurice, created EARL OF DESMOND,* 21 Aug. 1329; whose descendants ranked amongst the most powerful nobles Ireland for more than two centuries, until Gerald, 16th earl, entering into rebellion, waged war for nearly ten years against the whole power of the English government, and eventually lost his life in attempting to seize upon a prey of cattle, when his head was transmitted by the Earl of Ormonde to QUEEN ELIZABETH, who caused it to be fixed upon London Bridge. An attainder of course followed, (25 Sept. 1582,) by which his prodigious estates, comprising 574,628 acres, became forfeited. The son of this unfortunate nobleman,

JAMES, having been educated at the court of ELIZABETH, embraced the Protestant faith; and her majesty hoping, by his influence, to bring back the followers of his deceased father to their allegiance, recognised him as EARL OF DESMOND, and despatched him to Ireland; but so soon as it was known that he had attended divine service at the church of Killmalloch, the crowds who collected to see and follow him immediately withdrew; he was obliged therefore to return to London, where he died in 1601. The last male heir of the house of Gerald who assumed the title of Earl of Desmond was an officer in the King of Spain's and the Emperor's armies, who died in Germany in 1632.

THOMAS, Lord of Offaley, was s. by his elder son,

JOHN-FITZMAURICE, Lord of Offaley. This nobleman being at variance with William Vesey, Lord of Kildare, and lord-chief-justice of Ireland in 1291, and having various charges to prefer against him, came over to England, and confronted, and challenged the said Vesey, Lord of Kildare, before the king. Lord Kildare first took up the glove, but subsequently withdrawing to France, his majesty EDWARD I. pronounced against his lordship, and conferred upon Lord Offaley Vesey's manors and Lordship of Kildare, Rathangan, &c. Lord Offaley returned triumphantly to Ireland, and having continued to promote the English interest there, was created by EDWARD II., 14 May, 1316, Earl of Kildare. His lordship d. 10 Sept. in the same year. From this nobleman the family honours descended, without anything remarkable occurring, to

GERALD, Earl of Kildare, who died, leaving a dau. and heir, Elizabeth, who marrying James le Boteler, Earl of Ormond, the king's sheriff, in the year 1434, was ordered, on payment of the usual fine to the Exchequer, to give full livery of the Earl of Kildare's estates to this latter nobleman and his wife; and on the same roll, in that year, we find that the Earl of Ormond and his wife paid the accustomed "relief" due to the crown out of the estates of the said Earl Gerald. But no claim was ever made by the Earls of Ormond to the parliamentary barony of the Kildare family in right of their marriage with the heir; for we find it with the earldom inherited by

THOMAS, the 7th earl, who succeeded his father, John, the 6th earl, in 1427. This nobleman was appointed, in 1454 and 1455, lord-deputy of Ireland; in the latter of which years he held a great council, or parliament, in Dublin, and subsequently one at Naas, wherein, amongst other proceedings, it was resolved, "That as no mean could be found to keep the king's coin within the kingdom of Ireland, that all Frenchmen, Spaniards, Britons, Portingales, and other sundry nations, should pay for every pound of silver they carried out of the land, forty-pence of custom to the king's customer, for the use of the king." His lordship was continued in the government of Ireland until 1459, when Richard, Duke of York, was constituted lord-lieut.; but the following year Lord Kildare was appointed deputy to the Duke of York. In 1468, he was appointed

* In the very able work upon "Feudal Dignities," by the late William Lynch, Esq., it is denied that the Desmond family was at all connected with that of Leinster subsequently to the year 1199, and Mr. Lynch supports his statement by the strongest documentary evidence.

lord chancellor of Ireland, by act of parliament, with the fee of forty pounds per annum, and ten shillings per day. This tide of prosperity continued to flow until 1467, when, being involved with the Earl of Desmond, he was attainted with that nobleman, (who suffered death,) but subsequently pardoned, set at liberty, and restored in blood, by act of parliament. His lordship was afterwards lord-justice; and in 1471, deputy to George, Duke of Clarence. He d. 25 March, 1477, and was s. by his eldest son, (by Johan, dau. of James, 7th Earl Desmond,)

GERALD, 8th earl; who was constituted, on his accession to the peerage, lord-deputy to Richard, Duke of York, and held a parliament at Naas, on Friday after the feast of St. Petronelle the Virgin. In 1480, he was re-appointed lord-deputy; and again, upon the accession of HENRY VII., deputy to Jasper, Duke of Bedford, the lord-lieutenant. Upon the arrival, however, of Lambert Simnel, and his tutor, Richard Simon, an Oxford priest, in Ireland, the lord-deputy, the chancellor, (Thomas Fitzgerald, the deputy's brother,) treasurer, and other nobles in the York interest, immediately acknowledged the impostor, and had him proclaimed in Dublin, by the style of EDWARD VI.; and the lord-deputy assisted with the others at his coronation in Christ's Church, 2 May, 1487, where the ceremony was performed with great solemnity, the chancellor, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Earl of Lincoln, Lord Lovel, Jenico Marks, mayor of Dublin, and several other persons of rank attending. The crown was borrowed from the image of the Virgin Mary; John Pain, Bishop of Meath, preached the coronation sermon; and the Pretender was subsequently conveyed upon the shoulders of Darcy, of Platen, a person of extraordinary height, to the castle of Dublin, amidst the shouts of the populace. In the engagement which afterwards decided the fate of Simnel, near Stoke, the chancellor, Fitzgerald, fell; but the lord-deputy had the good fortune to make his peace with the king. His lordship was nominated lord-lieut. of Ireland in 1496; and d. in 1513, when he was s. by his son,

GERALD, 9th earl; who, with his five uncles, having revolted, was imprisoned in the Tower, where he died, 12 Dec. 1534, and an act was passed in the parliament of Ireland attainting him of high-treason, and forfeiting the family honours and estates. His eldest son,

THOMAS, 10th earl, shared in the misfortunes of his father, and leaving no issue, was s. by his brother,

GERALD, 11th earl; of whom a most remarkable account is given by a contemporary historian, Stanyhurst. It appears that, at the age of ten, he was preserved from the power of HENRY VIII. by the precaution of his female relatives, and his tutor, Thomas Leurense, his father's foster-brother. He wandered from court to court upon the Continent, until Cardinal POLE, who was related to his lordship's mother, sent for him into Italy and completed his education. He m. Mabel, dau. of Sir Anthony Brown, and through the medium of that connexion obtained the favour of EDWARD VI., who conferred upon him, in 1552, the Lordship of Maynooth and other of his father's estates. In the ensuing reign he was fully restored, by letters patent, to the EARLDOM OF KILDARE and Barony of Offaley, with the precedence of his ancestors. It is a remarkable circumstance that, though attainted by act of parliament, this Gerald, under such grants from the crown, but without any new statute, was summoned to, and actually sat as a peer in, the parliament of 1560, and it was not until the 11th of QUEEN ELIZABETH that the attainder was removed by parliament. His lordship's eldest son, GERALD, Lord Offaley, dying in the lifetime of the earl, left an only daughter, Lettice, who m. Sir Robert Digby, and for a long time claimed the BARONY OF OFFALEY, as heir of her father, but which claim, after being referred by JAMES I. to the judges of England, was decided by his majesty himself, who confirmed the Barony of Offaley to the Earls of Kildare and their heirs male, and created Lady Digby, BARONESS OF OFFALEY for life;* whereupon

* Nothing can better shew the extreme difficulty of writing, even now, on the subject of Irish peerage descents,

HENRY, 12th Earl of Kildare. This nobleman m. Lady Frances Howard, dau. of Charles, Earl of Nottingham, and had surviving issue,

- I. Bridget, who m. 1st, Rory O'Donnell, created Earl of Tyrconnell and Baron Donegal, and by him, who was attainted, had issue,

- 1 Hugh O'Donnell.

- 2 Elizabeth O'Donnell, m. to Luke Plunkett, 1st Earl of Fingal.

The Countess of Tyrconnell espoused 2ndly, Nicholas Barnewall, 1st Viscount Kingsland.

- II. Lettice, d. unm.

His lordship dying thus without male issue, was s. by his brother,

WILLIAM, 13th earl; who d. unm., when the honours devolved upon (the son of Edward Fitzgerald, brother of the 11th earl, by his wife, Mabel, dau. and heir of Sir John Leigh, and widow of Sir John Paston, of Norfolk) his kinsman,

GERALD, 14th earl; whose grandson,

GEORGE, 16th earl, was the first of the family brought up in the reformed religion, being so educated by his guardian, the Duke of Lennox. His lordship m. Lady Jane Boyle, dau. of the 1st Earl of Cork, and had, with other issue,

WENTWORTH, his successor.

Robert. This gentleman having taken an active part in effecting the Restoration, was appointed by CHARLES II. comptroller of the musters and cheques of the army, in 1661, with the fee of 20s. a-day, and was sworn, at the same time, of the privy-council. He was subsequently appointed governor and custos-rotulorum of the co. of Kildare, in which shire he resided, at Grangemellan. Upon the accession of KING JAMES, however, he was stripped of all his employments and estate, to the value of £3300 per annum, and imprisoned in Newgate for twenty-one weeks; but afterwards, in consequence of the state of his health, removed to his own house, where he remained guarded for five months. On the landing of WILLIAM in Ireland, Capt. Fitzgerald was placed in close durance within the College of Dublin, and so restrained until the defeat of JAMES at the Boyne, when he broke from his prison, and by his courage and prudence preserved Dublin from being sacked. When WILLIAM entered the metropolis, Capt. Fitzgerald had the honour of presenting to his majesty the keys of the city. He was afterwards sworn of the privy-council. He m. Mary, dau. and heir of James Clotworthy, Esq. of Monnimore, co. Londonderry, and had, with several daughters, with any degree of documentary certainty, than the following piece of evidence brought forward during the progress of the above family contest. It is part of a Chancery pleading, wherein it is alleged, and was not denied or disproved, that no less than four sets of daus., or co-heirs, had occurred in the family of Kildare previous to that time, and that none of them had inherited the title or dignity of the parliamentary barony belonging to the Earls of Kildare, which, it seems, always devolved on the next heir male:—"That the said Title or name of dignity of Offaley is not due, or ought not to be due, to the said Lady Lettice, although the same had been fee simple in the ancient Earls of Kildare, yet, indeed, it was not; for that there had been several women-heirs-general of that family which ought to have had that title had it been in fee simple, 1. namely, Annabell and Julian, daus. and heirs to Maurice Fitzgerald; and Julian, dau. to Gerald Fitzgerald; and Elizabeth, dau. and heir to Gerald Fitzgerald, ancestor to Gerald, grandfather to the Lady Lettice, which Elizabeth was married to the Earl of Ormond; and lastly, Katherine, sister and heir of Thomas, late Earl of Kildare: who have heirs yet living." Now, scarcely any of these co-heirs are mentioned by Mr. John Lodge, whose "Peerage of Ireland," from his official situation, as keeper of the records there, obtained a reputation for authenticity which it now clearly appears his researches or desire for accuracy by no means justified. From him most latter accounts of British dignities have been taken, and hence error has decidedly been propagated; to what an important extent may be guessed from the fact, that the right to peerages will not unfrequently depend on the suppression or establishing of such occurrences of co-heirs.

LESLIE.

LESLIE, SIR NORMAN-ROBERT, of Wardis, and Findrassie, co. Moray; b. 10 Dec. 1822; s. as 6th o art., at the decease of his father, in 1833.

Lineage.

This family claims as remote antiquity as any in North Britain, and possesses a right of primogeniture in the noble house of Rothes; thus,

GEORGE, 3rd Earl of Rothes, m. 1st,* Margaret, dau. of William, 3rd Lord Crichton, grandau. of JAMES II., and had, with four daus.,

NORMAN, master of Rothes, convicted and forfeited for his participation in the murder of Cardinal Beaton. He subsequently retired into France, and gained great reputation as a military officer in the French service, particularly in an engagement near Cambury, in 1554, where he was so severely wounded, that he died in fifteen days after the battle.

Robert, of Findrassie.

The earl m. 2ndly, Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Andrew, 3rd Lord Grey, relict of Lord Glamis, but by that lady had no issue. He espoused 3rdly, Agnes, dau. of Sir John Somerville, of Cambusnetham, and had, with other issue, Andrew, who inherited the Earldom of Rothes.

The earl, after the forfeiture of his eldest son, appears to have been invested by the crown, by some act or deed which cannot now be traced, with the power of disposing of the honours of the family to whichever of his sons he pleased. He conferred them, therefore, upon the above ANDREW; and he gave the lands of Findrassie to his son Robert, who became, in consequence,

ROBERT LESLIE, of Findrassie, from whom lineally derived

JOHN LESLIE, Esq., son and heir of Alexander Leslie, Esq. of Wardis, receiver-general to JAMES IV.; who m. 1st, Miss Stewart, great-grandau. of JAMES II. of Scotland; 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of William Crichton, Esq. of Frendraught; 3rdly, Mrs. Stewart, widow of Robert Stewart,

* Wood's Douglas calls this his lordship's third marriage, but the eldest son thereof, Norman Leslie, is designated master of Rothes, and stated to have forfeited his right to the earldom by his participation in the murder of Cardinal Beaton, 29 May, 1546, for which he was tried and found guilty of treason in the August following.
